The Farmer's Handy Gate

Five Reasons why it is the Best Gate for Farmers:

FIRST — It is a good, durable gate, made of good material and well painted.
SECOND. — It has the horizontal retractile movement on rollers, and the swinging movement on hinges.
THIRD — It can be raised so as to allow hogs or sheep to pass under, or to swing over deep snow. It can be changed in a minute without tools, and with mittens on if desired.
FOURTH — It requires but two ordinary posts to hang the gate to, and requires no more room than a common side gate.
FIFTH — Any child can operate the gate, can open and shut it, as it requires but the lightest strength.

Sample gate can be examined on the northeast corner of the court yard in Auburn. County, Township and Farm Rights for sale very reasonable.

Thursday's Daily.

The COURIER is pleased to announce the marriage of Capt. A. L. Kuhlman. The happy event occurred at eight o'clock last night. And the fortunate lady was Miss Josie B. Shull. The wedding took place in their newly furnished rooms in Mrs. Little's residence on north Main street, the ceremony being performed by Rev. J. K. Walts of the M. E. church, in the presence of only a few of the immediate relatives and friends.

Capt. A. L. Kuhlman is a young man of many good qualities. He has been Captain of the Auburn Rifles since the organization of the company Jan. 4, 18[illegible]. He has a wide spread reputation among the military officers of the state. During the past few years he has held the responsible position as Secretary of the Auburn Mfg. Co.

Mrs. A. L. Kuhlman is one of Auburn's [illegible] young ladies, not only in society circles but as a business [illegible]. During the past few years she has been associated with Miss Jennie Askew in running a millinery store. She is a member of the M. E. church and is held in high esteem by her many friends. We feel like congratulating Capt. Kuhlman on his choice. He has won for his partner through life a woman in every sense of the term.

As above noted Mr. and Mrs. Kuhlman have furnished rooms in Mrs. A. J. Little's residence on north Main street. Here they will be pleased to meet their friends. The COURIER with a host of other friends joins in congratulations to the happy couple.

Those present were: Rev. J. K. and Mrs. Walts, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Shull, Mrs. Amanda Kuhlman, George Kuhlman, Ollie McClure and Jennie Askew.

DALL-SHILLING.

Tuesday evening Dec. 24th at the home of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Shilling of Spencerville at 5 p. m. occurred the marriage of their daughter Vienna to John R. Dall of Canton, Ohio. Only the immediate friends and relatives were present. The bride looked charming in a fawn colored silk gown. The groom appeared in a conventional dress suit. A number of appropriate presents were received. After an elegant supper was served the bridal couple took the train for Mansfield, Canton and other eastern cities. Mr. and Mrs. Dall are among the most highly esteemed and promising young people and the best wishes of the COURIER and a host of other friends go with them.

Talking About Us.

Fort Wayne Post:—The Auburn COURIER of Monday came to the Post enlarged to thrice its usual size, printed on assorted colored paper and crowded with advertisements of Auburn Merchants. Brother Barns is enjoying a boom.

Angola Herald:—The Auburn COURIER came out last week with a double edition, and aside its local and general reading, it presents its prolific advertising presented a veritable monument to the enterprise and business hustle of its people.

Your Boy Wont Live a Month.

So Mr. Gilman Brown, of 34 Mill St South Gardner, Mass., was told by the doctors. His son had lung trouble, following Typhoid Malaria, and he spent three hundred and seventy-five dollars with doctors, who finally gave him up, saying: "Your boy wont live a month." He tried Dr. King's New Discovery and a few bottles restored him to health and enabled him to go to work a perfectly well man. He says he owes his present good health to use of Dr. King's New Discovery, and knows it to be the best in in the world for Lung trouble. Trial Bottles Free at Robbins & McCord's Drug Store. 4

Accident.

Friday's Daily.

Dr. Swarts was called yesterday to Mr. Fleming's as Mrs Fleming had fallen and broken her leg. The Doctor set it in good shape and left her as comfortable as possible, but it is a bad accident though he hopes she will get along all right. She could not explain exactly how it happened, but she was on a chair washing the windows, and supposes the chair must have slipped and she was hurt as she struck the floor.

Good Plan.

The Warsaw Union says that a grocer of that place, recently offered premiums for the best sample of corn, wheat, oats potatoes, etc, grown in that county. When the samples were received, the grocer put them on exhibition and after the public had been given ample chance to inspect them the awards were made and premiums given. Who knows but some DeKalb county grocer could make this plan work, both to his own advantage that of the farmers?

Business Methods.

A young lady walked into a store in Angola, so we are informed, and on selecting a piece of cloth inquired what it was worth. "Four kisses per yard replied the polite clerk. The young lady was abashed for a moment and then replied that she would take four yards. The cloth was cut off nicely, wrapped up and handed to the fair purchaser who received it with a smile and said: "Send the bill around to my grandmother, she will settle it."

Obituary

Inez Weirich died at her home in Garret, Dec 10, 1895, aged 18 years, 3 months and 13 days. The deceased was the oldest daughter of Alfred and Adaline Weirick. Inez was a model young lady. No words can describe her loving duty in her home. She won many friends by her patient and unselfish life. Her sun has gone down while it was yet day. God's Acre

One of our oldest citizens showed the COURIER the following clipping Saturday concerning God's Acre. In all his years he has heard this expression many times but never knew its meaning:

"Acre once meant any field. It is still used with this significance by the Germans, who speak of God's acre, alluding to the cemetery."

FELL THROUGH.

A HORRIBLE ACCIDENT AT THE HOISINTON BRIDGE NEAR ST JOE.

Men and Team Barely Escaped Drowning.

Special to the DAILY COURIER.

St. Joe, Ind. Dec. 24, 1895.—At two o'clock yesterday morning, a Mr. Zeimer and another man of Allen county were on their way to Butler and had started early in order to make the round trip that day. They were unaware that the bridge known as the Hoisington bridge had been condemned by the commissioners three months ago and ordered torn up, and as was natural attempted to cross. After getting on to the south approach the team refused to go any farther and one of the men got out of the rig and succeeded in having the team move far enough so that man and team dropped into the opening made by removal of some of the plank. The night was usually dark and the parties could not see but everything was alright. In falling the men caught on the joists and got out without much difficulty. The team also stuck on the joists for a time and until Mr. James Hamilton, Wm. Stamers and Sawyer were able to get to the place of the accident. With their combined efforts one of the horses was saved, the other went into the river and was drowned.

No blame can be attached to the commissioners or any one else as the bridge was securely fenced at either end of the road and planks firmly spiked across from one banister to the other. The fence at the north end of the road was torn down so that people could get to the river but why the south fence or plank across the approaches were removed was not know.

It is Wisdom.

In Time of Peace, to Prepare for War is the Safest Way.

Judge McClellan, who was chairman of the committe of expenditures in the Navy Department, in the 52nd Congress in a speech made in Congress on March 30, 1892, made the following statement, which is of interest at this time, and if his sugestion had been followed, we would now be in a better condition to enforce the "Monroe Doctrine," fully He said:

Mr. Chairman, I am not one of those who object to liberal appropriations for for all worthy improvements. I would have the Government build a navy that could protect us and preserve our honor and dignity among the nations of the earth. I would like to see our coasts and harbors improved and properly fortified. I would like to our rivers and inland waterways improved and extended, so as to fully accommodate our growing inland commerce.

We can hardly pick up a paper but we are startled with rumors of war with some foreign country, shocking our nervous system on account of our defenseless condition. We realize our inability to defend our coasts, our great cities, or our honor against any of the ordinary powers.

England is prepared and ready to enforce her policy and demands at all times, and with her navy there is not a port on the Atlantic or Pacific nor a lake city from Duluth to Kingston that might not be brought under the muzzles of her guns within a month after a declaration of war, and our commerce, what we have left, would be at her mercy.

I know that Yankee courage is great and Yankee ingenuity unsurpassed, yet it requires time for preparation and concentration to meet such emergencies. In the advanced stage of modern warfare results follow the attack quickly and the work of devastation is accomplished in a remarkably short period of time. In the Austro-Prussian war of 1866 Sadowa was captured within seventeen days after the firing of the first gun. Confidence in our wonderful resources, courage, and ingenuity should not be permitted to discourage prompt and efficient preparation to avoid disaster and humiliation.

As compared with other nations our Navy is a mere speck upon the waters. One of the most economical and effective means of defense is torpedo boats. Of such boats in 1891 France had 215, England 199, Germany 180, Italy 165, Russia 152, and the United States 2.

The expenditure of a few hudred million dollars for defense would make us feel secure and might prevent war, and the other powers, who would then be upon an equality with us, would be more ready to do justice or submit their differences to arbitration.

What is

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

DOINGS OF THE DAY.

SUMMARY OF THE NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Eventful Happenings in Every Known Hemisphere—Fires, Accidents, Crimes, Politics, Religion, Commerce and Crops, Sandwiched with Minor Affairs.

A DREADFUL PANIC.

Terrible Catastrophe in a Baltimore Theater in which Twenty-Four were Killed.

In a senseless panic caused by a defective gas burner and the foolish cry of fire at the Old Front Street Theater, Baltimore, Md., twenty-four people were killed, two fatally injured, and ten more seriously hurt. The therter, which is probably the oldest in the city, was filled from pit to dome with people who had assembled to listened to a Hebrew opera, which has been given in the old house twice a week for the past month.

Ten minutes after the curtain rose, an attendant went up to the second tier to light a gas jet which appeared to have been extinguished. As he turned the cock and applied a match the light flared up and it was seen that there was no tip to the burner. As the glare from it shot against the wall some one in the gallery shouted "fire," "fire," "fire." In an instant there was a mad scramble for the door, in which the whole audience took part.

In less time than it takes to tell it the landing and stairs were packed twenty or thirty deep with the panic-stricken multitude, with the hundreds behind them struggling over them to reach the street.

When the mass on the landing had been cleared, the frightened mob inside quieted down sufficiently to enable the police to clear the theater and then it was found that there had been no danger and not a soul would have been injured had the audience remained seated.

AMERICANS

Killed and Then Eaten by the Sadi Indians, of Mexico.

A special from Deming, N. M., says: John Martin, an American prospector, who has just returned after a year's absence in the gold fields of Sonora, Mexico, brings news of a horrible act of cannibalism which occurred in that Republic. Some weeks ago a party of five Sadi Indians, a race closely allied to the Yaqui tribe, driven to desperation by hunger, ambushed and killed three Americans working in the gold fields in the State of Sonora, about 300 miles south of Hermosilla. They cooked and ate the bodies. Friendly Yaquis report the affair to the authorities, and, after a pursuit of several weeks, the perpetrators were captured in their mountain home about the 1st of December. They were taken to Guaymas, and thence to the City of Mexico, where they will be executed.

The five cannibals were seen by Martin, and he reports them as the lowest order of the Indian race existing in the Republic.

They do not deny the crime, but say that they were starving, and ate the men to save themselves from death. The names of the Americans are not known to the authorities, being a party of prospectors who had been panning gold in the Yaqui River for some months before they were killed.

Badly Burned.

Guard Charles Schiller, of the Ohio penitentiary, was frightfully burned in saving the life of a would-be suicide. He found that Isaac Williams, an Allen County forger, serving one year, had shut off ventilation by placing a blanket over his cell door and then blew out the gas, hoping to die from asphyxiation. Schiller dragged Williams out of the cell, and then, hoping to stop the overpowerfuling fumes of gas, threw a lighted match back into the cell. The match did not at once ignite the gas, and Schiller poked his head in to see why. He had scarcely looked in until there was a frightful explosion and the guard was blown some distance away. His face, hair, beard and hands were badly burned, but he escaped fatal injury. The prisoner was resuscitated.

Wages Go Up.

Uniontown (Pa.) special: Following the notice to the 16,000 coke workers employed by H. C. Frick & Co., of a ten per cent. advance in wages after the first of the year, the announcement is made by W. J. Rainey, that he would also advance the wages of his 6,000 employes 10 per cent. The past three months have been the busiest in the history of the coke trade. Out of 17,947 ovens in the region, 16,011 are in operation and the prospects are that more ovens will be fired. The advance in wages will enable the men to make the highest wages ever paid in the coke region.

Dashed to Pieces.

Thos. O'Donnell, a miner, aged 23 years, employed at the Virtue mine, near Baker City, Ore., fell down a 350-foot shaft and was dashed to pieces. O'Donnell's mother resides in St. Louis and he has a brother in Virgina City, Montana.

Jan. 10.—"Faust."

Fatally Shot.

As the eastbound B. and O. S. W. freight train was leaving Athens recently, under charge of Conductor John McGraw, three desperate-looking tramps boarded unobserved until the train was in motion. Upon reaching Canaanville, O., the first station, seven miles distant, the train hands, accompanied by the conductor, order the tramps off the train. They refused, and one of their number fired the contents of a revolver at McGraw, which took effect in the face, producing a serious, if not fatal, wound. The three tramps were arrested.

Fifteen Drowned.

The steamship Nanzmond, Captain Laksy, from Curacao for Maracaibo was in collision with Spanish steamship Mexico, near the Island of Aruba. The Nanzmond sank and is a total loss. Captain Laksy and fourteen persons were drowned. Thirty-five lives were saved by the tug Augusta.

Four were Drowned.

While skating on Lathrop Lake, seven miles west of Denver, Col., Charley Jones, aged 8, fell through an air hole in the ice. His brother Robert and sister Maggie, aged 21 and 20 respectively, and Ida Ball, aged 16, attempted to rescue him, and all four were drowned.

REINFORCEMENTS.

Three Filibustering Expeditions Arrived in Cuba.

Key West (Fla.) special: Notwithstanding the cordon of Spanish warships about Cuba, three filibustering expeditions have recently landed, according to advices received here. One of these expeditions was composed of members of the First Regiment, Ohio National Guards, of Cincinnati. They accompanied their command on an excursion to the Atlanta Exposition and deserted and have made their way to Cuba. They joined Gomez in Santa Clara Sunday. Their leader was Sergeant Arthur Burge, of Company K. He was accompanied by L. Schwen, Company H; John Harris and Clifford Smith, company C, and five others. The Ohioans were warmly received by Gomez, and Burge has been commissioned Captain. The second expedition landed near Santiago de Cuba. This expediton came from Costa Rica, under command of Jose Maceo's son. It was composed of about 100 men, well armed. They carried 200,000 raunds of ammunition, While landing they were discovered by a Spanish warship, and burned their schooner to prevent its capure. The third expedition came from Chile, and was headed by the son of the Commander-in-Chief of the Chilean army. He brought 80 men, a quantity of was supplies and letters to Gomez from prominent Chileans promising aid to the insurgents.

MASKED MEN

Hold Up an Electric Car and a Bloody Fight Follows.

San Francisco special: Four robbers, masked with white handkerchiefs and armed with rifles, held up a Mission street electric car at the Ingleside race track the other night and got away with a very respectable lump of money. They relieved Reuben H. Clark, cashier of the race track bar, of a bag containing about $1,000, the entire proceeds of the day's sales. Clark was shot in the foot, and a policeman in the leg. The other passengers were terror stricken, but not molested.

While the hold-up was in progress the robbers kept up a constant fire from their rifles. The bombardment attracted the attention of two policemen who hurried to the scene. Patrolman Joseph fired at one of the highwaymen at short range, and in the duel which followed Joseph was shot in the thigh. The robbers then disappeared and no trace of them has since been obtained.

FLANK MOVEMENT.

Cuban Insurgents Out-general the Government.

Havana special: Gomez and the insurgent army have turned the flank of the Spanish forces commanded by General Campos in person at Colon and are now well to the westward of that place, threatening a quick movement upon Havana. This news from the front has created the greatest consternation here.

The insurgents' army is now only about fifty miles from Havana and the Spanish authorities seem to have entirely lost their heads. At this rate the insurgents will be in front of Havana very soon, if they have obtained control of the railroads from here to Matanzas, which seems not impossible, as they were only a few miles from Matanzas when last heard from, and they were moving rapidly westward.

Spaniards Defeated.

A special from Key West, Fla., says: Advices received by the Cuban leaders via Olivette confirms the reports of the capture of the town El Boque by Gomez. With Gomez were Serafin, Aguirre, Sanchez, and Quarez. The Spanish regiments stationed at El Boque surrendered without firing a shot. All of them were paroled except twelve, who were charged with having poisoned the water in the reservoir of the town. They were tried, convicted and shot. After taking all the arms, provisions, etc., found in the town, the insurgents set fire to it and then left, going in the direction of Quintana and Jovellonos. They also destroyed the sugar plantations near San Vicente and LaAntonio. The van guard of Gomez forces under the command of Lacred has entered the town of Quintana, between Matanzas and Colon, and destroyed by fire the largest sugar plantation on the island.

A Cold-Blooded Murder.

A cold-blooded murder was committed at Lafayette, Ind., some time between Saturday night and noon Monday. Mrs. Hester Curtis, a widow, aged 63, residing alone on South Twentieth street, was found sitting in her armchair dead, her skull crushed in by blows, and blood was spattered on the floor, walls, and ceiling. Tightly clasped in her right hand was her bank book, indicating that money had been demanded, and to convince her murderer that she had no cash she had brought out the book. The house had been ransacked, but the silverware was not taken. Her gold watch is gone. Mrs. Curtis had conveyed the impression that she had considerable means, and robbers undoubtedly killed her to secure it. One or two arrests were made, but the men were released.

Coast Defenses.

A Washington special says: The fortifications board, which some years ago, drew an elaborate plan for coast defenses left out entirely the great western cities near the Canadian line, the theory being that Canada, in event of war, would be occupied in ten days by United States troops and that such cities as Chicago, Detroit, and Cleveland would be in no danger from the enemy if that enemy should be Great Britain. No other country fighting the United States, it is claimed by military authorities, could possibly reach these cities, as to get there its ships would have to pass through Canadian waters, which, of itself, would be a declaration of war on England.

Disastrous Coal Fleet Wreck.

Pittsburgh special: The largest and most disastrous wreck the Pittsburgh coal fleet has known in years, was piled up at Merrimans Bar, in the Ohio River, near Glenfield, about ten miles below Pittsburgh recently, over 350,000 bushels of coal having been lost, and nineteen pieces of loaded stuff reduced to total wrecks. The wreckage was dynamited and a passage for boats was made. Captain William Martin, United States engineer, said the wreck was the worst he ever saw. The accidents, however, were not due to negligence on the part of the pilots, but was one of the things which could not be avoided.

Utah Will be Declared a State.

The new constitution of Utah, which was brought to Washington a week ago by the Utah Commissioners, has been examined by the President and Attorney General Harmon and found to be in all respects in accordance with the terms prescribed in the enabling act. Therefore, the President will issue his proclamation January 4, next, declaring Utah a State of the Union. As the State officers are to assume their duties on the Monday following the admission of the new state, they will be in office on January 6. Attorney General Harmon has telegraphed these facts to the Chief Justice of Utah at the request of the President.

Tragedy at Saginaw.

Chas. W. Northrup, employed by Wm. Thompson, of Saginaw, Mich., and Fred Treadwell, also an employe of Thompson, met on a bridge where a crowd had gathered to watch the high water. Words ensued between the two about a horse. Northrup took a double-barreled shot gun from his buggy, leveled it at Treadwell, for two minutes held his aim and pulled the trigger, discharging the contents of the gun into Treadwell's right side, making a wound eight inches in diameter. Treadwell was taken to Saginaw and will die. He lived in Cleveland. Northrup is under arrest.

Flood Sufferers.

Wagoner (Ind. T.) special: The Grand River flood continues to rise and now averages a depth of 70 to 80 feet in the channel, and great desolation is being caused. Houses, wagons and farm animals of all descriptions are seen floating down the torrent. Some men and women were found in tree tops, where they had been for 36 hours without shelter and food. They were rescued by a party in boats. One woman was seen in a wagon box going dow stream, calling for assistance, but so rapid was the current that nothing could be done for her.

Two Hundred People Drowned.

United States Consul Jacob I. Childs at Hankow, China, reports to the State Department that a violent storm passed over that place on November 2nd, commencing about midnight. The wind, blowing a hurricane, caused a number of rafts anchored in the river to break loose, and, as they sped down the swift current, they collided with a fleet of junks, carrying all before them, wrecking and sinking a large number, and over 200 persons were drowned. Much damage was done throughout the country.

Looking for Trouble.

The National, of Madrid, advocates an entente between Spain and the United States regarding Venezuela on the ground that Venezuela is merely contending for the same right against England that Spain used to claim when all the Spanish Ameri-republics were her colonies.

The London Standard prints a dispatch from its Madrid correspondent saying the article in the National was evidently inspired and that it has caused a sensation.

Strike Settled.

A special from Philadelphia, Pa., says: After lasting seven days the ruinous strike of the motormen and conductors of the Union Traction Company came to an end by the employes accepting the terms of the company. The men struck for a working day of ten hours, $2 per day, and the recognition of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes. Both sides made concessions. The company will not recognize the union.

Horses Cremated.

Forty fine horses and 200 carriages, hacks, and wagons went up in smoke in Strickland's livery barn, Burlington, Iowa. Loss, between $50,000 and $60,000. Insurance, $10,000. Many of the horses were owned by outsiders, and a number had fast records. Two men were rescued, unconscious, from the second story of the barn by firemen.

Three Fatally Injured.

Three persons were probably fatally injured in an accident on the Metropolitan "L" road at Forty-eighth street and East Harrison, Chicago. The motorman lost control of his apparatus and a combination motor and passenger car crashed over the bumpers and down to the street, twenty feet below.

Terribly Burned.

Seven men were terribly burned while at work on the top of Shoenberger's blast furnace, at Etna and Fourteenth streets, Pittsburgh. The damage to the furnace is slight. All the men had a narrow escape from cremation. The injured were taken to West Penn Hospital.

Was Electrocuted.

John Watkins, an employe of the Toledo, Ohio, Electric Company, was instantly killed while repairing an arc lamp. The current was off, and it is supposed the wire was charged by a cross. Watkins was a young, unmarried man, who came from Paulding, Ohio.

All On Board Lost.

A dispatch from Halifax states that the schooner Victoria has gone down with all on board. The overdue schooner, I. V. Dexter, bound from Boston to Liverpool with 20 passengers, has arrived at Halifax. She was delayed by rough weather.

It is Now a Law.

The President has approved the bill appropriating $100,000 for the expenses of the commission to inquire into the Venezuelan boundary matter. The executive approval was given to the measure as soon as the official copy reached the President.

A Spanish Victory.

A dispatch received at Madrid, Spain, from Colon, province of Matanzas, Island of Cuba, confirms the report that the Spanish troops have routed 4,000 insurgents on the Calmena River. One hundred of the enemy were killed.

Disabilities Bemoved.

The United States Senate presented a Christmas present to the South by passing the bill repealing proscriptive disabilities, passed at the close of the war against the service of ex-Confederates in the United States army and navy.

A Fatal Collision.

A head-end collision occurred at Frankford, a suburb of Philadelphia, between two local passenger trains of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad, and two persons were killed and seven injured.

Poisoned Mince Meat.

At Belleforntaine, Ohio, George Wheeler, wife and three children, with his brother and child, are growing critically ill from eating prepared mince meat, supposed to be poisoned.

OUTLOOK FOR WHEAT

CROP OF THE UNITED STATES UNDERESTIMATED.

Conservative Estimate of the World's Production 2,416,000,000 Bushels—Prospect Slightly Bullish—Philadelphia's Street Car Strike Settled.

May Be 475,000,000 Bushels.

As the cereal year progresses the impression continues to grow, so far as the wheat crop in the United States is concerned, that it has been materially underestimated. According to Bradstreet's the official figures as to the size of the crop, or the interpretations of earlier official wheat crop reports, placed the total probable outturn at about 390,000,000 bushels. At the present time trade estimates in very few, if any, instances put the probable aggregate yield at less than 460,000,000 bushels—and the end is probably not yet, in the matter of revised figures. This, in view of comparatively moderate exports of wheat and flour thus far during the cereal year, continues to perpetuate the dominance of bear influences in the world's wheat markets.

Some of our optimistic foreign friends are even now inclined to think the wheat crop here may amount to 475,000,000 bushels, as against 520,000,000 bushels last year. Canada comes out with an estimated increase of about 10,000,000 bushels, and Argentina is now expected to show 80,000,000 bushels, although only a month or two ago 60,000,000 bushels was accounted a high estimate, the output last year having been rather under 58,000,000 bushels. As against this, however, it is becoming probable that Australia is likely to be an importer rather than an exporter of wheat. In fact, she has already begun to import wheat.

The Crop in Russia.

In Russia, a most important source of supply, the minister of agriculture estimates the crop of the European provinces at 122,000,000 bushels less than last year; but this is deemed too low, "as the official estimates usually are," and it is generally supposed that the production of Russia and Poland together will not be more than 88,000,000 bushels less than last year. Russia generally has a larger surplus from previous crops, and it is this reserve which will enable her to keep the balance between exporting and importing countries.

One of the more conservative estimates of the world's production of wheat in 1895 places it at 2,416,000,000 bushels, as contrasted with 2,560,000,000 bushels in 1894, a falling off of about 144,000,000 bushels, the significance of which is aggravated from the fact that the general consensus of opinion as to the approximate total world's annual consumption of wheat is about 2,400,000,000 bushels. With a production this year of only 2,416,000,000 bushels of wheat in the face of estimated requirements amounting to 2,400,000,000 bushels, stocks of wheat carried over from the outturn of 1894 and prior thereto gather special significance, or would do so if they could be known with any degree of accuracy.

Beerbohm's Estimate of Surplus.

The following is Beerbohm's estimate of the surpluses which the chief exporters will have to spare from this year's crops, in comparison with last year:

	Estimate. 1895-6, qrs.	Actual. 1894-4, qrs.
Exporters.
United States and Canada	15,000,000	18,500,000
Russia	15,000,000	16,500,000
Roumania, Bulgaria, Turkey, and Servia....	7,000,000	4,750,000
Austria-Hungary	500,000	250,000
India and Persia.	3,250,000	2,300,000
Algeria, Tunis, and Egypt....	1,250,000	1,250,000
Chili and Uruguay	500,000	600,000
Australasia	500,000	900,000
Argentina	5,000,000	5,750,000
Total surplus..	48,000,000	50,800,000
Total surplus bu.	384,000,000	406,400,000

This estimate was formed when the Argentine production was expected to be not much, if anything, over that of last year; but should it amount to 80,000,000 bushels, then one may take the available surplus for the current year to be about 400,000,000 bushels. Great Britain requires to import 200,000,000 bushels, France about 20,000,000 bushels, Belgium, Germany and Holland together about 86,000,000 bushels, Italy about 28,000,000 bushels, the rest of Europe about 44,000,000 bushels, and the West Indies, China, Brazil, etc., about 28,000,000 bushels—in all, say 406,000,000 bushels, against a probable surplus on the year's crops of 40,000,000 bushels.

This is altogether too close a fit and calls for some examination as to probable stocks of wheat carried over from the preceding crop year. There were, and probably are, large wheat reserves in Russia which enabled that country to export so freely during the fall and winter, while in India and Australia reserves are and have undoubtedly been relatively small.

Prices Likely to Go Up.

The world's available stocks of wheat, those in sight, on land and afloat, are not smaller this year than they were last, notwithstanding the heavy decline in production. Either the invisible supplies must be smaller than customary (except in Russia, of course, which are believed to be large), or there is likely to be, as is generally the case, more than "enough to go around." Quite certain is it, however, that 1895-96 is likely to eat well into the world's old and new cereal stocks of wheat, and that the following cereal year, at least, may witness a considerable price stimulus to the cultivation of the cereal.

This is not quite as bullish a view of the situation as many producers and traders may have been waiting for during the last few years of depression, but it is a literal interpretation of the best available statistics.

PHILADELPHIA STRIKERS ATTACKING A STREET CAR.

STRIKE IS SETTLED.

Philadelphia's Street Car Trouble Has Been Satisfactorily Adjusted.

The great trolley strike in Philadelphia is ended. John Wanamaker is the man who brought about the settlement, succeeding where all others failed. He was aided in the work by members of the Christian League. The basis of settlement follows:

First—While the Union Traction Company will only treat with the workmen in its employ, it will allow them membership in any lawful organization; second, it will take up all grievances and give them full and fair consideration; third, it will, so far as it has vacant places, immediately put on the old men, and as fast as vacancies arise will give preference to the old men yet unemployed, and endeavor to arrange the trips of the cars to favor the old men as far as possible without violating its contracts with the new men. The questions of compensation and hours are left for future determination.

The battle has mainly been fought on the question of the employes' membership in the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes, which the company has persistently refused to recognize. The new men engaged since the strike began number nearly 1,000. There were about 5,000 strikers. Wanamaker submitted the ideas embraced in the settlement to the strikers. They accepted them, and in turn submitted them to the company. Considerable correspondence and many conferences followed, and finally announcement was made that both side had agreed to the terms. To properly round out the matters a mass meeting of the strikers was held for the purpose of ratification. Here the strike was officially declared off, all the leaders were called upon for speeches, and there was a veritable love feast.

CHAIRMEN OF IMPORTANT COMMITTEES IN THE LOWER HOUSE OF CONGRESS.

THE AUTHOR OF THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

We owe it, therefore, to candor and to the amicable relations existing between the United States and the allied powers to declare that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety. With the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power we have not interfered and shall not interfere, but with the Governments who have declared their independence and maintained it, and whose independence we have on great consideration and just principles, acknowledged, we could not view an interposition for the purpose of oppressing them or controlling in any other manner their destiny (by any European power) in any other light than as a manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States.—From Monroe's message to Congress in December, 1823.

ROBBED BY MASKED MEN.

One of Ed Corrigan's Employes Relieved of the Track Receipts.

In San Francisco four masked robbers held up a Mission street car returning from Ingleside and robbed Reuben Clarke, an employe of the Pacific Coast Jockey Club, of the receipts of the day, said to aggregate $3,000. Clarke and two other men were shot by the robbers, but it is believed none of the wounds would prove fatal, although Clarke will probably lose one of his legs. The robbery occurred in a lonely place eight miles from the city.

On the Picket Line.

God save the Queen! She isn't to blame for it.

In the meantime Venezuela will greatly oblige by not slopping over.

It is well to be firm, but do not go off half-cocked. That is no way to shoot.

The present little flurry will either retard Canadian annexation for several years or will precipitate it in a hurry.

It is significant that the Russian bear is not losing any sleep over the damages now inflicted upon the British lion's tail.

There are indications in the British press of a glimering perception of the fact that somebody has got to back down.

A nation which in the nineteenth century will refuse to arbitrate need not expect to get any sympathy when it is rebuked.

Even if he had no Monroe doctrine to sustain, Uncle Sam would oppose, on humane grounds, the vivisection of a neighbor.

FLOODS BRING RUIN.

Damage Amounting to Over $2,000,000 Already Done.

To the farmers who live along the banks of the Osage River in Central Missouri Christmas brought only woe and gloom. The unprecedented rise in the river of thirty-five feet in three days has devastated that section, and many farmers have lost everything they possessed. Some of them had their corn in shocks, others in cribs. The flood has taken all that lay in the low lands. Not only have many farmers lost their crops, but their stock and buildings as well.

The Osage valley is a desolate waste, and the damage will reach at least $2,000,000. Lee Thomsberry, living between Bagnell and Tuscumbia, lost fifty-seven head of good 3-year-old steers, and Hugh White, who lives near the mouth of an Osage River tributary, lost everything but his life and his family. Hundreds of others have lost their hay, corn and some stock. At Bagnell, the end of the Lebanon branch of the Missouri Pacific Road, the river is three miles wide, and no train has been able to get within a mile and a half of the town for four days. That town and Eldon are shut off entirely from telegraphic communication with the outside world. The large business house of Hawley & Franklin is filled with water and their stock of goods is greatly damaged.

At Tuscumbia, the county seat of Miller, a terrible condition exists. Nearly the entire town is under water. Only the roofs of many buildings, the postoffice among them, can be seen. A large flouring mill, the printing office and several small stores and residences are entirely submerged. Twenty cars loaded with railroad ties are standing on side tracks at Bagnell, and there are thousands of ties floating about in the river and backwater. The river is higher even than during the famous flood of 1844. The suffering of the people whose land and property have been devastated will undoubtedly be terrible this winter.

Swimming through the water he warned the men at work and piloted them out of the mine.

After his last speech Colonel Prinsep had addressed himself to Mrs. Knox; but though apparently giving all his attention to what she was saying, he heard every word that passed in the window corner to which Jane had returned.

"Promise me," Jack Blount was saying, eagerly—"promise me that you will wear the flowers I send you."

"Miss Knox won't promise that, I'm sure," cried Valentine Graeme, boyishly impulsive.

"Why not?" asked Blount, with a conceited smile.

"Because I have sent her some already and—and it would not be fair!"

"Favors don't go by roster!" contemptuously.

Jane smiled, but would not commit herself to an opinion.

"How do you generally decide which bouquet you will take?" asked Barry Larron lounging up to them, his dark face expressive of mingled amusement and admiration.

"I take the prettiest," answered Jane. "Don't you think that is as good a way as any out of the difficulty?"

"And if they are equal in their merits?"

"Then I choose the one that best matches my dress."

"Scarlet and white go with anything!" exclaimed Val Graeme, eagerly.

Just then Mrs. Knox called to him to corroborate a statement, and as Barry Larron also turned away, Jack Blount leaned forward.

"I shall send you yellow roses," he said, in an undertone, which, however, two people overheard.

A thought flashed across Colonel Prinsep's mind that were he to send her a bouquet he would guarantee to please her taste. He knew all her favorite scents and flowers, and was also aware of the fancy she had for always by preference wearing white.

Nor had Major Larron been less observant, and an idea struck him then that caused a sardonic smile to flit across his lips.

Colonel Prinsep rose to say "good-by," and the others followed his example, the Adjutant and the A. D. C. staying a moment to wrangle about the number of dances each was to receive. When this was settled—to the satisfaction of neither—the Hon. Barry Larron put in his claim.

CHAPTER XXVI.

When their visitors were gone, Mrs. Knox sunk down upon a chair, and fanned herself vigorously.

"What could have made him come?" she sighed out at length, and though no name was mentioned, Jane did not pretend to doubt as to whom the pronoun referred.

"Perhaps it was what he said—a sense of duty," she answered, quietly. Yet, though outwardly calm, a gleam in her hazel eyes told of inward excitement, and her fingers were fidgeting nervously with the silver buckle of her belt.

She wondered whether he had noticed Mr. Blount's attention, and whether it were in her power to inflict a pang upon him by encouraging the same. She felt hurt and sore, capable of doing or saying anything that would move his impenetrable calm. It was so humiliating to know that she loved him still, and must love him always, while he had forgotten quite.

She had gone into the veranda to grow cool, and so be alone, wandering round to the other side of the house, out of sight of the drawing-room windows. Presently the sound of her own name smote her ear, and turning, she saw Sergeant Lynn standing in the shadow of a near clump of trees.

"I want to speak to you," he said, in a low voice.

For a moment she hesitated and shrunk back. The man was looking white and haggard, and she did not feel equal to the violent scene which his whole appearance and manner portended.

"You are afraid of me," he remarked, with bitterness.

This decided her. Her father's Terai hat lay on the chair, and snatching it up, she crushed it on her bright hair and ran quickly down the steps to join him.

"I did not know that you were back."

"We only marched in this morning, and directly I could get away I came here. I have been waiting more than three hours on the chance of seeing you."

"Why did you not come to the house?"

"With the Colonel, and the Adjutant and Major Larron, salaming all the time like a native, to show you the great difference there is between them and me?"—scornfully.

"Jacob, Jacob, do not talk so wildly!"

"I speak as I have felt. Surely that need not shock you. Though you are as far above me as the angels, you might pity, instead of shrinking from me. Remember, what I am you have made me."

"You have no right," she faltered, looking up at him with terror-stricken eyes.

"No, I have no right. Of that your father, rightly or wrongly—I don't pretend to judge—deprived me, yet I never thought that you would have stooped to shield yourself behind his authority."

"Nor did I. I know nothing of his intentions. Jacob, you talk of pity, yet you have no pity for me. Knowing how I tried to be true, you need not reproach me so."

"It was the Colonel. If he had not come, you would have been my wife now."

"Perhaps. I never loved you."

"You have told me that so often, I wonder I do not give you hate for hate. You have been my evil genius. Had it not been for you I might be my own self, instead of the miserable drunkard that I am."

"Yet, for your own sake, Jacob, if not for mine, you might have striven against such a terrible habit. Father told me that you had promised to refrain, and I was hoping——"

"Hope nothing, Jenny; it is too late for that now, whatever it might have been then. I tried at first; for a whole month I did not let a drop pass my lips; then I grew gloomy and dispirited. I knew I was only following a will-o'-the-wisp, that I had no real chance of winning you, try as I might to be steady and sober. If you would promise me something definite, perhaps——"

She recoiled from him in dismay.

"You don't mean to marry you?" she cried.

"Would you promise that if I asked you?"

They had stopped beneath the trees, and the sunlight, glinting through the branches, lighted up the gay uniform of the hussar, and fell upon his good-looking face as he stood waiting for her to speak.

"Oh, no, no!" she murmured, and hid her face in her hands.

But he drew them gently down, looking sadly into her eyes.

"Don't be afraid, little Jenny. I was not going to ask that. I know I am not worthy of you, that it would only be dragging you down with me. Nothing now can save me from a drunkard's end."

The tears were streaming down her pretty face and her figure swayed restlessly to and fro in her agitation, for was not this all her doing, her fault?

"Oh, Jacob, let me help you—let me do something to atone!"

"My pretty one, your sympathy does me more good than you can know. On my soul I will try to amend if only to spare you grief. And, Jenny, promise me something, too—promise me that you will not marry until——"

"Then so long as you wish me not to marry I will not," she substituted, meekly; and lifted her eyes to him so full of tenderest compassion that, looking into them, he could not but believe she would hold to what she said, even though his doubts might return when removed from her presence.

"Tell me you forgive me," she whispered, as she turned to go.

"I do forgive you; and, Jenny, think of me, too, as kindly as you can."

He grasped her hands so tightly that she nearly cried out. His eyes were fixed upon her intently, as though wishing to keep her always so in mind—beautiful in her womanly sorrow, and thinking only of him.

For a moment he stood so, then with a deep sigh released her, and strode away, his head raised defiantly, and cutting at the heads of the tall grasses with his whip as he went.

When she went in she met her mother in the hall.

"Jenny, there are some flowers come for you. Those young men spoil you, that's a fact."

"You know it pleases you far more than it does me," she said, smiling.

"I believe it does. You take it so quietly that one might think you had been accustomed to it all your life. Why, child, you have been crying—what about?"—bringing her keen eyes to bear upon her daughter's tear-stained face. "It's not about the Colonel?" she added, quickly.

"No, no. Is it likely, when he cares so little for me?"—lifting her head proudly.

"Perhaps for that very reason," thought Mrs. Knox, shrewdly; but she would not vex Jane by saying so aloud. "Come and see your flowers," she said, instead; "and don't cry any more, Jenny, or I shall be disappointed of seeing my daughter the acknowledged beauty of the ball. Remember, I have never participated in any of your triumphs yet."

"Then I will look my best for your sake; but"—looking down indifferently at the creamy blossoms lying in their bed of green—"you must have these roses, mother; they will enliven your black dress, and I shall wear those Mr. Graeme sent me."

And in spite of all remonstrances she carried her point, and Jack Blount's yellow roses, which he had taken so much trouble to beg, buy and steal from different places in the station, instead of making lovelier still the lovely face and figure for which they were intended, adorned the cheap black silk lace cap of Mrs. Knox.

But after all Jane never wore Valentine Graeme's flowers. Just as she had gone to her room to dress, the ayah came in carrying a large basket.

Jane drew away the ferns that lay across the top, and discovered a bouquet beautifully arranged, with some flowers lying loose for her gown and hair. They were all white, with only delicate maidenhair ferns and their own leaves to lend a tinge of color.

Whence they had come remained a mystery. The man who had brought them had left at once, only saying that they were for the "Miss Sahib," and as he was a coolie and not a liveried servant it was impossible to guess by whom they had been sent.

Mrs. Knox was called in to give her views on the subject, but could throw no light upon it, and the quartermaster proved equally bad at guessing.

"Father," asked Jane, abruptly, "have you heard anything of Jacob Lynn?"

"He came in to-day with the rest of the men from the Hill depot. The change of air has not done much for him; he was looking wretchedly bad, I thought."

"Does—does he drink still?"

The quartermaster looked grave. He had had hopes of him at first; but latterly, for he had made a point of inquiring, the accounts were very bad.

"I am afraid it is all up with him!" he said, at last. "He has been reduced to a private, you know, since he left Alipore, and now, having less to lose, will grow reckless, I fear."

"Can't we do anything for him? Don't you think if we had him here——"

"Here!" cried the quartermaster, enraged at the idea. "If I catch him here, I'll break every bone in his body. What business had he to go courting you when he knew he was no fit husband for any girl. For the matter of that, I ought to have known it myself. He comes of a bad breed, and he had got into bad habits long before I suspected anything. As is always the case, the one most interested is last to hear the news."

The subject was dropped and Jane was left at leisure to pursue other and more pleasurable thoughts. In her own mind she had decided that the lovely flowers which had come last and were exactly what she herself would have chosen could have come from none other than Stephen Prinsep.

CHAPTER XXVII.

The mess-house of the —th Hussars was a very large one, and peculiarly fitted for occasions like the present, not only were the rooms wide and lofty, but they were well shaped as well, and consequently easily decorated.

They had already begun the program when Jane arrived. She came in shyly behind her father and mother, but holding her bonquet produly in her hand, as though its possession gave her confidence. She was wondering whether Colonel Prinsep would ask her to dance.

She heard his voice speaking to her mother. As host he had come forward immediately to meet them, and now took Jane's hand for a moment in his own.

"You are late, Miss Knox," he said; and the formality of his address sent a chill to the girl's heart.

At this moment Mr. Blount came up.

"Miss Knox, I thought you were never coming. One of our dances is already finished; and, oh, why didn't you wear my flowers?"

She glanced at Stephen Prinsep to see if he looked conscious; but he was talking to her mother again, and apparently paying no attention to herself.

"I only promised to wear the prettiest, if you remember," she answered to Jack Blount.

"I would have sent you white flowers, if I had known you liked them best; all white roses."

"I am very glad you did not," she ejaculated, sharply.

This time the Colonel heard, and turning suddenly, their eyes met. His were grave in their expression—almost angry, she thought; or was it only pained? Her glance, first sad and shy, grew "wild with all regret" as the memories of those days which were no more passed swiftly through her mind.

She moved toward Jack Blount.

"Don't let us lose this dance, too," she said, hastily, and the next moment was whirled among the dancers.

Other guests arrived, and Colonel Prinsep had social duties to perform; but he found time ever and anon to notice Jane as she flitted past with her different partners.

By and by he allowed himself a dance with Diana Knollys, more because she was an exceptionally good dancer than from any memory of their old acquaintanceship.

"My only dance that has not been a duty one," he told her with his pleased smile.

"Then I must feel flattered."

"No, don't do that, or you will make me vain beyond endurance. Tell me instead how you like Alipore now that you know it better."

"You forget that I have been away from it as long as you. We went to Simla for the hot weather. I did like that, but there I knew so many people. Here I have scarcely any friends. Miss Knox is nearly my only one."

"You like her? Don't you remember I told you that you would?"

"And of course prejudiced me against her. Women never like each other to order, you know. But I do like her now very much."

Just then Jane passed. Jack Blount was with her, his ugly conceited little face beaming, and exerting himself to the utmost to make himself agreeable, evidently not failing in his endeavor if Jane's rippling laughter were to be believed.

"I wish she would not encourage him so," said Miss Knollys, uneasily.

"Why, don't you think him nice?"

"I think him detestable; but then I am nearly alone in my opinion. He was immensely popular at Simla, and indeed everywhere women seemed to like him."

"Then why should you hold aloof?"

Diana Knollys smiled archly.

"They say," she said, in careless tones, "he has come here especially to propose to Jane Knox, and should she refuse him——"

"Do you think she will?" broke in Colonel Prinsep.

"How can I tell? I hope she will, although in that case I prophesy for her what the French call 'a bad quarter of an hour.'"

He laughed in reply; but some twenty minutes later her words came back to him, when he saw Jane go into the veranda with Jack Blount, and after the next dance had begun they were both absent still. An uneasy feeling prompted him to follow them.

ROME'S GREAT SWAMP.

A Project to Reclaim the Fever-laden Pontine Marshes.

A German engineer, Major Von Donat, has secured letters patent for the reclamation by drainage of the Pontine marshes. The marshes, which for nearly 3,000 years have been notorious for their insalubrity, are situated between Rome and Naples, beginning at a distance of 25 miles from the Eternal City and covering in all 75,000 acres. The German engineer proposes to make this immense territory productive at comparative small expense. He is now organizing a company. The value of the agricultural lands to be reclaimed is estimated at 250,000,000 francs. They include, aside from the marshes proper, 250,000 acres in the neighborhood now lying idle because the pestilential atmosphere emitted by the swamps makes their cultivation impossible.

If the Pontine marshes, the drainage and cultivation of which have been in vain attempted by the Roman republic, by Caesar, Nero and Traganus, by Popes Boniface, Martinus, Sixtus and Pius VI., can be reclaimed by the aid of science and modern machinery, capital will be forthcoming ror the improvement of other Italian swamp regions that now repel instead of attracting settlers and that kill by inches those who brave their malodorous surroundings.

Since the middle ages, and probably centuries before, the Pontine marshes have been inhabited only by wild horses, buffaloes and a handful of herdsmen. Unlike the great Dismal swamp of Virginia and North Carolina, which is covered with spongy, vegetable soil, without any mixture of earthy particles, the surface of the Pontine swamps, which consist of volcanic products, would form a solid mass if drained, and would have truly astonishing fecundity. Major Donat caused a large section of dry land in the district to be tilled during the past few seasons and the result was a harvest such as is possible elsewhere, as in India and Mesopotamia. This would prove that the calculations as to the agricultural value of the reclaimed lands are not extravagant.

Faithfulness.

At the Greyfriars' churchyard, in Edinburgh, Scotland, there stands a beautiful monument erected in memory of a dog. The statue of the dog on top of it cost over $2,000, and this is the story: A poor man died and was buried there. He was followed to his grave by his dog. When the other mourners went home the dog remained and lay down on his master's grave. The sexton drove him away, because dogs are not allowed there. Next morning the sexton found him on the grave again, and again drove him off. The second morning he found him on the grave again, and again drove him off. The third morning was a very cold one, and the sexton found the dog again lying on his master's grave, shivering with the cold. His heart relented; he fed the dog. Presently the lord mayor of the city heard about it and sent the dog a collar, and a man that kept a restaurant near by fed him every day. I don't know what provision they made for kennel, but during ten or twelve years, until he died, he made his home in that graveyard, and much of the time lay on his master's grave; and now they have built that beautiful monument to tell future ages of the fidelity of that poor man's dog.

We are always much better pleased to see those whom we have obliged than those who have obliged us.

OUR DADS IN SCHOOL.

HOW THEY USED TO CATCH IT FOR PLAYING HOKEY.

The Old-Time Pedagogue Was as Full of Ingenious Tortures as an Egg Is of Meat—A Few Samples of His Cruelty.

Moral Suasion by Physical Force.

The abolition of corporal punishment from the schools in many States is one of the most noteworthy advancements made in the cause of education during recent years. In various country schools in New England and in a great part of the West and South severe methods of compelling obedience still are used, and it is the controlling powers of these schools that the writer desires to reach by this series of drawings.

The records show that children have been much more tractable since the substitution of moral for corporal punishments. The old adage, "Spare the rod and spoil the child," seems no longer to be the established principle of school government among progressive teachers. A punishment which is said to have been very severe, was seating the culprit on the end of an upright log of wood. The log by reason of its small diameter formed a most uncomfortable seat, and although not particularly annoying for the first few minutes, at the end of half an hour or more became nothing less than torture. A most fatiguing performance was holding a book out at arm's length. This was nothing less than cruel, but whenever the boy's arm dropped from its horizontal position he received a gentle reminder of a switch across the legs which made him raise his hand. The weight of the hand and arm itself is enough to bring the arm down to the side in a very few minutes; but with a book boys have often succumbed to the fatigue.

The modes of punishment a posteriori are numberless, and the most finished masters in this style of corporal pun-the slips, of well-known style and shape, used as flogging bills, and sent up regularly with the names of delinquents for execution. The list was put into Keate's hands without explanation. He sent for the boys in the regular course, and, in spite of all protestations on their part, pointed to the master's signature in the fatal bill and flogged them all then and there. Another day a culprit who was due for ishment were found among the English schoolmasters in the earlier part of this century. Dr. Butler, of Shrewsbury school, was one of the noted floggers of his day; but Keate, of Eton, whose dominion lasted from 1809 to 1834, seems to have established a record for all time. An old book in the possession of the bureau of education describes the old fellow in a very entertaining way. On one occasion when a confirmation service was to be held in the school, each master was requested to make out and send in a list of the candidates in his form. One of them wrote down the names on the first piece of paper which came to hand, and which happened unluckily to be one of punishment could nowhere be found, and the doctor was kept waiting on the scene of action for some time in a state of considerable exasperation. In an evil moment for himself a namesake of the defaulter passed the door. He was seized at once by Keate's order and brought to the block as a vicarious sacrifice—a second Sir Mungo Malagrowther. Etonians who were flogged by Dr. Keate narrated their experiences on the flogging block with a pride which savored of the heroic. They boasted of their master's prowess with admiration and spoke of the number of boys Keate could finish off in workmanlike style in twenty minutes. Rapid the performance was, there was as much ceremony observed in the operation as possible. The doctor was always most courteous both before and after his exercise, in which he was assisted by two collegians, who held their companion on the block.

In the Country School.

The problem here is: Given a school of, say, forty pupils, from five to eighteen years of age, in one room, and with one teacher; to find the best method of instruction. The pupils possess very unequal attainments. These pupils need instruction adapted to their needs each term. The health of teacher and pupil limits each session to about six hours. Further, good instruction must be given in all the common branches.

It is not, of course, possible for us teachers to instruct each pupil separately in each branch. Hence the nonclassification system must be abandoned. This plan of individual instruction is feasible only in a very small school. I do not think there ever was the unclassified school of which teachers are now hearing so much. No attempt was made in the first schools of which I know in arithmetic. This lack of classification was of undoubted advantage to the few smart pupils, but not to ninety-five per cent.

The graded school solution; i. e., on the plan of the city schools. This separates the pupils into at least sixteen grades, which gives at least forty-eight daily class exercises. Such a classification of the one-teacher school is evidently impossible.

The course of instruction must be flexible; smoothness and order must often be sacrificed to the health of teacher and pupil.

A third solution of the problem is the three-grade solution. This is based upon the physical periods of development—the kindergarten, middle, and the advanced or grammar period. This is a natural and simple grading for the country school with one teacher. The pupils from term to term can be reclassified. The essential provision here is that the work of each grade be completed before the pupil is advanced into the next grade.

What the public schools need is such an organization as will allow its own teachers and diversely advanced pupils to make the most progress with the best preservation of time and health.—The Public School Journal.

Because His Teacher Believed in Him.

"Do ye know why I didn't lie out of it?" said Jim "Bluebottle" to his confidential friend Jake. "Now mebbe ye'll think I was all-fired silly, but I jest couldn't. She called me up to her, quiet-like, and said: 'Now, Jim, I know yer faults and I know yer virtoos. Yer ain't no coward, Jim, and yer won't lie even if yer should have to take a licken. Some boys will say the square thing when they think they won't get licked, and some boys will tell the square thing anyway. A fellow like you who could grab a little kid out from under a runaway horse, like you did poor Sammy Smithers a'n't got to be no coward now. Whatever ye tells me, Jim, I'll believe, and there the thing ends; for I won't ask no one ese.' Then I said, 'Why don't yer ask Willie Pitkins as allus does what yer say?' But she said she'd believe me as quick as any feller in the school. Think of that, Jake! And then I jest up and told her, and she said she was awful sorry I done it, but the principal said he'd lick the boy, and course I'd have to get licked. I said 'course' and I tuck the licken. Feel kind o' sore outside, but awful quiet-like inside. I'll do it again, too. You bet she's right when she says, 'Jim, yer have yer faults, but yer a'n't no coward.' Most folks think I'm tough, but she don't. She knows I won't lie, and I won't lie never no more."—New England Journal of Education.

Morality in Colleges.

From this distance it appears that Mrs. Poteat, of New Haven, was both right and wrong in her criticisms upon student life at Yale. It is not altogether unnecessary for college authorities to be reminded occasionally that they may not have exerted all the influence in their power to guard students against wayward propensities and against seductive surroundings. At the same time it is unfortunate to publish criticism which make evil appear a more predominant factor than it really is. There are probably few colleges in the country in which no students contract vicious habits of any sort, either temporarily or permanently. No supervision within the power of college authorities can make young men utterly unassailable. Whether colleges are professedly under religious control or not, they ought to maintain conditions more conducive to the development of strong character than those which prevail elsewhere. Colleges are likely to satisfy this requirement most successfully, not by creating arbitrary conditions in the college community, sharply contrasted with the conditions of the larger community of which they are part, but by developing the ambition and power of students to conduct themselves in a manly way when within reach of temptations of which the world is full.—Baptist Standard.

Changing the English Ministry.

When you read in the newspapers, on the dissolution of a ministry, that the queen sent for any particular personage to form another, you must not suppose it was her own inclinations dictated the selection. She is supposed to take the advice of the retiring minister as to the successor he may deem most fitted for the office.—London Chronicle.

Without virtue there can be no true happiness; but we want love joined with virtue to give us all the good which this world is capable of bestowing.

Every well directed, patient effort of man brings its own positive reward.

Table Manners.

In the old times immense importance was given to the etiquette of the table, made more necessary then than now because the service a la Russe was not in fashion, and any moment any man might be called upon to carve a roast or joint. Then, too, the evening meal was a perilous affair, to be safely consummated only by the expert. The young man of Revolutionary days was a martyr to the "handed" tea; for teacups, buttered muffins, slices of Sally Lunn and chipped beef or shaved ham—these all, and more, had to be taken care of upon his trembling knee. Now and then a plate would crash upon the polished floor and fill the blushing swain with confusion. Once when a stranger had won the heart of the tiniest little maiden of a family, and when her spirit had been sorely tried at hearing her sable nurse express doubt as to whether he was a gentleman, leaning on her father's knee and looking earnestly into his face she asked: "Papa, is Mr. Dawson a gentleman?" "Wait, Blossom, until I see him follow the hounds," replied the squire. "But, Mammy Grace says she'll know as soon as he eats an egg," said the fairy. Sure enough, he broke a section from the shell at breakfast next morning, and ate the contents with a spoon from the shell itself. That settled it. He was a gentleman.

Apple Pudding.

A very good apple pudding for a cold day in September is made in the following way: Make a batter from two eggs, a cupful of sweet milk, a cup and a half of pastry flour, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, half a tablespoonful of salt, a heaping teaspoonful of baking powder, and a tablespoonful of granulated sugar if a sweetened crust is liked. I prefer it without the sugar. Beat the eggs until light, add the milk, then the flour, and when smooth the butter and salt. Butter a shallow baking dish and pour the batter into it. Before making the batter, have ready five or six tart, well-flavored apples, peeled, cored, and cut into quarters. Drop these into the batter evenly, press them down and bake in a quick oven. Cut into squares and serve while hot with cream and sugar or a hard sauce, flavored with lemon.

Chocolate and Maple Patties.

To make chocolate patties, melt some of the softer fondant in a cup and add some finely-cut chocolate, bitter or confectioners'; if too thick to drop add a few drops of water. These can be flavored if desired and usually will be found harder than the peppermint or wintergreen patties. Chocolate peppermints are made in the same manner as peppermint patties, as described above; when hard each one is dipped in confectioners' chocolate which has been melted over steam. Maple patties are made by cutting up two cupfuls of maple sugar, adding one cupful of cold water, and just a speck of cream of tartar dissolved in water, and cooking like plain fondant. When cold melt and drop like the other patties.—Ladies' Home Journal.

A Sweet Pickle.

A luscious sweet pickle for serving with cold meats can be made with a minimum of trouble from the large, whole, ripe tomatoes. Peel and slice thickly, and to each seven pounds of the fruit add half the weight of sugar, a quart of the best cider vinegar, one ounce of cloves, and half an ounce each of cinnamon and mace. Place all these ingredients in layers in a granite preserving kettle, let it stand all night, then bring to a boil slowly and cook from one to one and a half hours, or until it thickens. Seal up in jars. The quality of this is improved by removing as many of the seeds as possible before slicing the fruit.

To Make Good Brown Bread.

In a chapter on bread and biscuits, Hope Holly in the Ladies' Home Journal gives this recipe for brown bread: Two cups of sour milk, two cups Indian meal, one cup sifted graham flour, one and a half teaspoonfuls of baking soda, sifted with one-third cup of white flour, one teaspoonful of salt. Mix molasses and sour milk, then stir in the meal and flour; pour into two small butter pails and steam three hours, then set in the oven and bake from twenty minutes to half an hour. Do not throw away the bran that is left after sifting the graham flour. It makes an excellent and nutritious jelly.

Notes.

Asbestos wicks are used for chafing dishes.

To light a candle, hold the match to the side of the wick and not to the top.

For the protection of your table have a covering of white felt or heavy canton flannel.

If possible send out your dinner invitations at least ten days in advance of the dinner.

Clams are in season all the year round. Terrapin is in season from November until May.

Bent whalebones may be straightened and made fit for use again by soaking in hot water, then straightening under a press until dry.

Silk which has been badly wrinkled may be smoothed by sponging on the right side with weak gum arabic water and ironing on the wrong side.

In polishing brass beds, no liquids or polishing powders should be used, as either is apt to break the lacquer. All that should be used is a soft flannel rag.

Cooking meat at a high and in a dry temperature develops a richer and more savory flavor, so, when it is possible, it is well to brown the meat before adding water to it.

A good furniture polish, which gives a soft, oily finish to furniture and woodwork, is made of one scant ounce of linseed oil, one full ounce of turpentine and three-fourths of an ounce of cider vinegar. Shake it until thoroughly mixed. Then rub the furniture with the mixture, allow it to stand a short time and then polish it well with a soft dry flannel cloth.

THURSDAY,.....JANUARY 2, 1896

Last Day of '95.

Tuesday's Daily.

The old year closes to-day. It is the last of the busy days of a busy year. The DAILY and the WEEKLY will now appear with a new date, one we have never had before, "1896." In saying good bye to the old year, we are not saying good bye to our readers. We trust they will continue with us faithfully and patiently as in the past. We have labored early and late to give them the best paper for their perusal and have in all ways tried to labor for their best interests. On the other hand it is with pleasure, as well as gratitude that we recall the loyalty our readers and patrons have shown us and the sacrifice they have no doubt made, in order that our efforts might succeed. We feel especially grateful to the patrons of the DAILY who have so nobly stood by it and its publishers. It has taken constant labor and thought for a small force to get up a full paper each day in a town the size of Auburn But by the help of our loyal friends we have succeeded. For ten months the DAILY has been a visitor at your homes, for next March 4, it will be a year old We hope all these familiar names will remain on our list, and that each will assist to secure new ones, and new friends. So both the "COURIERS" wish you one and all, a "Happy New Year" and a prosperous one for 1896.

NEED OUR MONEY

An exchange states the matter in a nutshell when it talks to those who are careless about keeping up their yearly subscriptions to the paper they are taking. We quote a part of it.

Many people don't like to see a dun in a newspaper. If it isn't dunning you for what you owe, you needn't worry about the other folks. If the dun does fit you, then you ought to do as you want those to do who owe you. No hands in the printing office wait 20 or 30 days for their wages; and we have to pay for our ink, paper, type—everything promptly at the end of 30 days. No man can keep on doing this if you make him wait 1, 3, 4 or 5 years for his money; and it is very wrong that you should expect him to do it. If you are a workman, you consider it a hardship to wait two weeks for your pay. If you are a farmer, you would think a man crazy who would ask you to wait 30 days for your pay for butter and egg; or 6 months on the miller for pay for your wheat and oats; or a year on anybody for pay for your hay. And just so with the trades and the people in general. There isn't a merchant, a mechanic, a man in any other business but the printer whom you think of putting off from year to year. On some of you we have waited five or six years, and more. This must come to an end, and you ought now to do by us as you want to be done by. We are not calling on any person who owes only for a year. If you owe more, then you ought to send or bring us some money.

At the first of the year, all accounts should be squared, and those who have persistly paid no attention to our notices must not be surprised, nor offended, if they find their accounts left for collection.

The Silversmith of Arkansas.

January in the central west is usually a cold, blustering winter month, and people who are sensative to Catarrhal troubles feel the weather keenly and the sufferings of some are intense. It is pleasant to assure our friends who have nasal Catarrh in any of its many forms that a simple remedy will instantly relieve and completely cure them. It costs but 50c. and is known as Pretzinger's Catarrh Balm. You cannot make any mistake in using it. It is not a secret remedy. The formula is well known. J. H. Powell, the well known Silversmith of Sulphur Rock, Arkansas, for seven years was a victim of Catarrh of the head and throat in the severest form, yet one jar of Pretzinger cured him and he had previously used every other remedy, several guaranteed, although all proved worthless. He is so enthusiastic that he will guarantee cure to any one and he offers to return the 50c if the Balm does not do all it claims. A small sample of this remedey can be obtained by sending a 2c. stamp to Pretzinger Bros., Chemists, Dayton, Ohio.

Why Don't

Why don't Auburn people trade exclusively with home merchants?

Why don't every one buy some stock in the Auburn Improvement Association and help build up the town?

Why don't the Improvement Association buy a tract of land and sell lots to raise money for factories?

Why don't the business men close their stores at 7 o'clock after January 1, '96?

Why don't we petition the Wabash R. R. Co. for a new station house?

Why don't we improve the streets of Auburn?

Why don't the farmers gravel all roads?

Why don't the town council arrange to have one fire engine team in the barn at all times?

Why don't the parents of street boys send the fellows to school?

Why don't we all mind our own business?

"PRACTICAL."

Fire Panics

The terrible loss of life at a Baltimore theater should be a warning to people, not to get rattled in case of fire. There was no fire, but someone thought there was and raised a cry of "fire." People at once piled out and over each other, nearly thirty lives being lost. Even if there was a fire, there is always time enough for the audience to get out, It takes only four minutes at the poorest arranged theaters even when the people go out chatting leisurely as they usually do. Some of the best arranged theaters, require but two minutes. A fire never gets back to the audience in four minutes. If people would think of this and control themselves, the losses of life would be very rare or perhaps never happen.

SANDWICHES BY MACHINERY.

One of the most recent Patent Office applications is for a machine to construct with lightning-like rapidity that peculiarly American gastronomical tid-bit ycleped the sandwich. Strange to say, it is the conception of a Frenchman, Severin A. Gage, of Paris The main claim in the application is as follows:

CLAIM 1.—In a machine for making sandwiches, the combination of bread hoppers, a meat container, butter spreading devices adapted to butter the bread received from said bread hoppers, and a carrier for conveying the meat from said meat container and interposing it between the slices of bread, substantially as described.

This looks all right, but if it turns out the usual restaurant kind, a patent digester should accompany them as a premium.

Weddnig Chimes

At the pleasant farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Sherlock, one and one-half miles northwest of Corunna, on Tuesday, Dec. 24, 1895, occurred the marriage of their estimable daughter, Vida to Isaiah O. Reincehl, second son of Mr. Solomon Reincehl, of near Fairfield Center, and one of DeKalb county's successful teachers. Promptly at 6 p. m. the organist began playing the wedding march, and with step to the time of the music, the bride ad groom, their chosen escorts J. A. Reincehl, of Fairfield Center and Miss Irma Sisson of Kendallville, and Rev. W. H. Mygrant of Kendallville, marched to the commodious parlor where in the presence of about forty invited guests, the marriage ceremony was legally pronounced and the two became one. Mr. Sherlock then announced that the feast was now in readiness. Rev. Mygrant and wife leading the way, followed by the bride and groom and others. The invocation of God's blessings pronounced on a most enjoyable feast that followed.

The remainder of the evening was pleasantly spent in a social manner including with instrumental and vocal music. Just before the dispersal, a number of beautiful and useful articles, were, on behalf of the donors, presented to the newly wedded couple, by the officiating minister. And later some lovely flowers were received from California sent by Dr. Rudolph and S. C Urey.

The brides dress was a beautiful cream albatross and on the infare day a black silk. The groom was neatly dressed in plain black. The infare on the 25th, the elegant and beautiful home of the groom's parents was enjoyed a repast such only as the good mother is competent to prepare.

Some of the guests present: S. Reincehl and wife, H. H. Slaybaugh and wife, L. Shafer and wife, of Hudson, Ind, Geo. Harms and wife, of Fairfield Center, R. Sherlock and wife, F. Dellenbaugh and wife, W. H. McGiffin, Mr. and Miss Stonebraker, Mrs. Hall, of Corunna, and Miss Minnie Baker.

The bride and groom left from Garrett on the 25 inst. for two weeks' wedding tour in the Buckeye state, in the vicinity of Millersburg, Holmes County.

We bespeak for them a prosperous and happy future, for they are two of Fairfield township's brigtheat christian young people.

Obituary

Edna S. daughter of Joseph and Catherine Pfefferl was born in Auburn, Oct., 26th, 1891, and died Dec 30, 1895, aged 4 years, 2 months and 4 days Little Edna leaves a mother and father, 2 sisters and 2 brothers, besides a host of little friends to mourn her untimely departure. Edna was faithful little member of the infant class of the Lutheran Sunday school and a member of the Junior Endeavor. She was a bright and affectionate child and will be missed not only in the home but in Sunday school and Christian Endeavor.

The little flower has faded,
And is hidden from our sight.
The flower which bloomed so brightly

The funeral services will be conducted from the residence to morrow at 2 p. m. standard time. Interment will take place in Woodlawn, J. D. Brosy officiating.

Obituary.

Ann Eliza Kiner, (nee) Ricketts was born Oct. 7, 1840, and died Dec 26, 1895 aged 55 years 2 months and 19 days. The deceased was born in DeKalb county Ind., where she lived with her parents until grown to womanhood Dec 10 1857, she was united in marriage to Andrew J. Kiner when she removed from her childhoods home in Concord township to her home in Wilmington township, where she resided until called away by death. To this union were born seven children two boys and five girls The husband and three children having preceded her. She was not a member of any branch of the christian church, but a short time before her spirit took its flight she expressed, faith in Jesus, and said "All is Well."

She suffered greatly during her illness but bore it patiently un il the end came She leaves four children, four grandchildren, one sister, two brothers and four half brothers, together with many other relatives and friends to mourn her departure. We lose in her a kind neighbor and a loving, affectionate and truly devoted mother.

Mother thy work on earth is done,
No more heart aches and pains.
Thy Spirit rests with Jesus,
On Canaan's happy plains.

Ed. Kunder, of Kendallville was in town to day. He is looking the picture of good health, and says business is good in their line, They are pushing the manufacture of their churns.

Cal. Husselman and Prof. Plumb were at Fort Wayne yesterday attending a meeting of the state Dairymen's Association.

Will Groscop came home for a visit several days ago, but we failed to "catch" him before. His home is at Buckhannon, West Virginia, where he is extensively engaged in making brick for building purposes. As a great deal of building is being done there at all the towns in the vicinity, his goods sell as fast as he can make them, and at living prices.

"Owney," the postal clerk's dog, arrived home on Monday at New York, from China, having completed the circuit of the globe. He left Tacoma Aug. 12 and visited Shaghai, Woo Sung, Foo Chow, Hong Kong, Singapore, Persia, Suez, Port Said, Algiers and St. Michaels, Azores. He is now going across the country by rail to Tacoma, Wash., so as to complete the circuit of the earth in one trip. He had a tag attached to his neck, and this secured him food and good care all the way.

And now the Kendallville Daily Sun makes the Shull matter still worse. It says: "Henry Shull of Valparaiso, has gone to Montana to find buried gold which he saw in a dream."

Ida, Nettie, Calvin, and Rosewell Shoemaker, Clyde Mowrey, and Miss Adaline Chapman all of Columbia City and Marion Ensley, of Indianapolis were guests over Sunday in the family of Jos. Stafford who resides on the Avenue.

The person who disturbed the congregation last Sunday by coughing is requested to call on Robbins & McCord and get a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar (50c), which always gives relief. 52

Dr. Darling and family left on the 7:35 Wabash train last night for his old home, Ontario. They expect to be gone about ten days. We do not know who will have charge of his office, if any body,

Coughing irritates the delicate organs and aggravates the disease. Instead of waiting, try One Minute Cough Cure. It helps at once making expectoration easy reduces the soreness and inflammation. Every one likes it. Davenport, druggist.

Saturday was the shortest day, and we are glad of it When days are both short and cloudly, there is a little too much "off color" to suit us. Everyone will be pleased to see days slowly lengthening.

Auburn merchants will not close their stores at 7 o'clock during the next few months. Some firms refused to sign the petition. We are sorry for this. It was hoped by many that the early closing would be a go.

W. J. Frederick, Frank Kircher, Jerry Baker and G. W. Fralick, four of our Garrett friends made us a call to-day. They were working up the interest of the Ball to-morrow evening, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, of that place.

One of the most interesting discussions we have heard for some time was at G. H. Yesbera's store to-day, when Jack Morrell of Waterloo and H. E. Richey were discussing the Venezuela questions It was quite laughable and the reporter with Mr. Yesbera's clerks enjoyed it very much.

Will Berry, who works for Mr. Maranville, on the old Thomas place, near Newville, reports wheat doing better now since the late rains and snows. Our old friend D. P. Hale, San Diego, be interested in hearing that a big corn crib broke down when the rainstorm softened things up.

B. F. Cornelius of Troy was here today. He speaks of the many miles of fine gravel roads made last season on the roads leading from that section into Butler. His daughter Sadie is now a teacher in the public schools at Anderson. Mr. and Mrs. Kriebel are at Warsaw where, Beyer Bros are going to help put up a United Brethren college if proper encouragement is given,

Sid Cool of Logansport has been up here several days visiting, but being a modest young man did not give us his "item" till we caught him Saturday. Sid has grown to be a fine looking young man, and he always was a steady boy. We found him full of information and as to business matters, too. Their factory has just finished about 200 sleighs that had been sold to jobbers in the fall. Orders for buggies for next season's trade have come in abundantly, and business is brisk.

We call attention to-day to the article on Judge McClellan's speech when in congress advising a safe increase of the navy. Its wisdom is now very apparent, though at the time it was made, no one would believe we would ever be in danger of war with England. Now we are face to face, with at least a possibility of such a trouble, and looking the facts in the face, we find that though we have added some fine war vessels to our force lately, we still have only about one-fifth the war navy that England has. In view of present conditions, Judge McClellan's words sound like prophecy. It is true, we may never have war, but in case of extreme disagreement as we find now between the two nations we can always get better terms if we had better naval backing. Our military backing is good enough.

Spitting Blood.

S. F. Fritz, of 677 Sedgwick street, Chicago, says: "I had a severe cough which settled on my lungs. I tried a number of advertised remedies and also placed myself under treatment of several physicians, with no benefit. I was recommended to try Foley's Honey and Tar. While little expectation of getting relief, I purchased a bottle. I had taken but few doses when I felt greatly improved; I was enabled to sleep, spitting of blood ceased, and by the time I had taken the second bottle I was entirely well. It saved my life." Robbins & McCord.

Stricken with Paralysis

Monday's Daily.

D. Y. Husselman was suddenly stricken with parelysis last evening at Auburn Junction and rendered utterly helpless. As soon as his condition was learned, Dr. Buchtel was called and all possible is being done for him. He is lying helpless at the Hotel there and the Doctor has strong hopes that he may pull through. Wednesday morning. He was brought home Monday evening, and at present is getting along nicely, with hope of recovery.

Sherwood, two miles west of Waterloo.

Lawyers Will Meet

The members of the bar are looking forward to an interesting meeting which will be held in Auburn Wednesday, January 29 It will be the winter meeting of the 35th Circuit Bar Association. Papers will probably be read by Frank S. Roby and C. A Yotter, of Angola, and James H. Rose and D. A. Garwood, of Auburn, the exercises to conclude with a grand banquet at the Glazier Hotel. After the banquet, Judge Penfield will respond to the toast, "The Monroe Doctrine," and it is also probable that some member of the Steuben county bar will respond to a toast appropriate to the occasion.

A Battle Scarred Veteran.

Nearly everyone in Medina Co. Ohio, knows Stephen Rolph, of River Styx, the one legged veteran, who lost his leg at Winchester, Va., March 23, '62. In all probability the exposure and privations of army service, the effects of which are felt as they grow older by nearly all old soldiers, were the cause of the serious nervous prostration and sleeplessness of which Comrade Rolph complained. He says.

"People hereabout know me pretty well, but you can tell others that I was down for about six months with nervous prostration and sleeplessness for which I tried various doctors and medicines, but Dr. Wheeler's Nerve vitalizer has done me more good than all the doctoring I had done. The first bottle gave me such great relief that I have used several and I feel almost restored to my former good health."

Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer can be relied upon by any who are suffering from nervous troubles, sleeplessness, etc. If all tired out and run down, you need a reliable nerve and system tonic and health restorer as this remedy is. Sold in Auburn by F. E. Davenport, and by all dealers everywhere. 1-5

The British editors are pained to note that through the singular stubbornness of the American nation, their edict ordering the abolition of the Monroe doctrine has not yet gone into effect.

All men who have failed in advertising here have been plungers. Instead of confining their advertising to one or two mediums of known circulation and value, they have taken space in all the daily papers and nearly all of the various fake schemes daily presented.

A process has been patented in Germany for making a substitute for the natural skin for use on wounds. The muscular coating of the intestines of animals is divested of mucous membrane, and then treated in a pepsin solution until the muscular fibers are half digested. After a second treatment with tannin and gallic acid, a tissue is produced which can take the place of the natural skin, and which, when laid on the wound, is entirely absorbed during the healing process.

A ship is being built for the American trade at Belfast, Ireland, that will hold as much freight as 1,800 freight cars or 30,000 tons cargo capacity, 560 feet long and 42 feet deep. Seven French cruisers are being built, 8,000 horsepower, to make 23 knots. Steam supplied by 36 groups of water-tube boilers. The German Government is putting twelve of her trans-Atlantic steamers into shape for armed cruisers with 16 rapid-firing guns and 14 machine guns. Several new German ships are being fitted with three propellers. The German shipyards are so crowded that new buyers will have to wait for months.

Mr. Claude F. Wright, secretary of the late Mme. Blavatsky, in a lecture before the New York Theosophical Society the other evening espoused the cause of Col. Ingersoll and charged the Endeavorers with practicing sorcery and black magic in their attempt to convert the Colonel. The latter may well pray to be delivered from any rescuer who was in any way attached to the late Mme. Blavatsky. What she did not know of sorcery, black magic, prestidigitation and sleight of hand is not worth knowing. Col. Ingersoll is amply able to take care of himself and does not need proffers of assistance from those extraordinary persons. The last things in the world that could command his respect would be the doctrine of Karma, the authority of Mahatmas, or the possession of astral bodies.

A celebrated Belgian physician says that yawning is an exceedingly healthy function generally, besides having a very salutary effect in complaints of the pharynx and eustachian tubes. According to the results of late investigations, yawning is the most natural form of respiratory exercise, bringing into action all the respiratory muscles of the chest and neck. It is recommended that every person should have a good yawn, with stretching of the limbs, morning and evening, for the purpose of ventilating the lungs and tonifying the muscles of respiration. An eminent authority claims that this form of gymnastics has a remarkable effect in relieving throat and ear troubles, and says that patients suffering from disorders of the throat have derived great benefit from it. He makes his patients yawn either by suggestion, imitation, or by a series of full breaths with the lips partly closed. The yawning is repeated six or eight times, and should be followed by swallowing. By this means the air and mucus in the eustachian tubes are aspirated.

The French Chamber of Deputies has gone to extremes in the levying of taxes on the rich. After a four weeks' debate, and by a vote of 404 to 125, that body passed a bill for a graduated inheritance-tax law, in which the highest rate levied was 20 per cent., or one-fifth of the estate. The lowest duties are those paid by lineal descendants and range from 1¼ to 4 per cent., the first-named rate being levied on all sums under $2,000. Leaving lineal descendants the rate is much higher When a husband or wife inherits the rate for fortunes above $400,000 is to be 9 per cent. In the case of a brother or sister it will be 14 per cent.; in the case of an uncle or nephew, 16 per cent. When the property, or any portion of it over $400,000, is bequeathed to more distant relatives or to strangers in blood—this last including any institution, ecclesiastical or charitable—the rate is fixed at 20 per cent. The last Illinois Legislature passed an inheritance-tax law, but there is no comprison between the two measures in the rates levied. The highest rate by the Illinois law is 6 per cent. On direct heirs it is only 1 per cent., with a $20,000 exemption. The passage of the bill in the French Chamber of Deputies may have been due in part to the influence of the socialists. But the large vote for it shows that it could not have been entirely due to them.

While England and the United States have been considering the necessity for calling upon the powers to compel China to protect foreigners and indemnify persons who suffered at the hands of lawless mobs, France has acted without regard to any other power, and has secured from China the payment of an indemnity of 4,000,000 francs for outrages committed some time since on the French mission stations in Chuen. The payment of this indemnity was probably hastened by the attitude France assumed during the recent war between China and Japan, and the kind offices she then rendered China were worth many hundred times the amount of indemnity just paid. Nevertheless, the fact remains that France asked nobody's aid in collecting her claim against the Chinese. Our government should certainly profit by France's example, and not wait upon anybody in pressing a claim for indemnity for the outrages recently committed upon American missionaries and the destruction of property of American citizens. Were we to make common cause with any European power, it is reasonably certain that American claims would be made to play a secondary role in the demands made upon the Chinese Government. The United States has, moreover, no ambitious designs on Chinese territory, and should not be made a catspaw to draw chestnuts out of the fire for Great Britain. It will probably be easier for the United States to collect an indemnity single-handed than with the assistance of a European power, as China has good reason to fear that the European Goverments have more sinister designs behind their demands than a mere wish to secure reparation for outrages committed upon their subjects.

Among the subjects to be forced on the attention of Congress is that of immigration. The attempt will be made to secure not the exclusion of any immigrants whose character and standards fit them to become citizens, but a stricter regulation of immigration. The object sought is to make provision for the exclusion of all persons between 14 and 60 years of age who cannot both read and write the English language or some other language. The bill offered by Senator Lodge aims to accomplish this result. The latest bulletin of the Immigration Restriction League shows that immigration is increasing, which is an evidence of returning prosperity. The league emphasizes the importance of having the laws revised at once, thus making them effective in sifting out the unworthy and undesirable elements as the number of arrivals is increasing. The total immigration for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1894, was 288,020, while that for the next year was only 258,536. For the six months ended Oct. 31, 1895, however, the number of immigrants was 142,164, as against only 92,673 for the corresponding months of the previous year. This is a gain of 53 per cent. The immigration during the six months from May 1 to Oct. 31 was within 48,760 of the total immigration at the port of New York for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1895. The restriction league presents some figures as to the illiteracy of immigrants. The number of persons over 16 years of age in each 100 of arrivals who cannot read and write their own language is given as follows: Sweden and Norway, 1; Germany, 2; France, England and Scotland, 3; Ireland, 7; Wales, 9; average for these countries, 4. From other countries, however, the showing is not so good. It is: Russia, 26; Poland, 29; Austria-Hungary, 30; Italy, 44; average for these countries, 32. It must be noted that these official figures as to illiteracy are not based upon actual tests, but depend for their accuracy upon the truth of the immigrants' answers to questions put to them. If they were actually required by the inspectors to read and write before admission, the figures of illiteracy would undoubtedly be larger.

KING OF CHICKEN THIEVES.

This Fellow Stole 10,000 Fowls in Two Years.

There is a prisoner in the Middlesex County jail at Cambridge, Mass., who might justly be termed the king of chicken thieves. The prisoner, who is a white man, hails from Vermont, and his name is Frank Pike. For the past two years he has been engaged in the profession of robbing hen roosts, and during that time he is said to have made away with 10,000 chickens. Pike did a profitable business selling the stolen fowls. He had a special line of customers and kept them all supplied. So skillful was he in his line of business that he escaped detection until a couple of weeks ago, and then he was only caught through an accident.

He sold his wares at such a low price to poor people that he was looked upon by them as a farmer philanthropist. He represented to his customers that he had a large chicken farm in the country, from which he got his supply. A few days before his arrest Pike began to drum up a turkey trade and just about the time that he was to start out to raid the abodes of likely turkeys he was caught. He had visited every hen roost in Cambridge and the surrounding towns.

Carlyle Corrected.

At a Royal Academy dinner in London some years ago several artists were expressing their enthusiasm about Titian. Carlyle and Thackeray, it appears, were among the guests. Mrs. Anne C. Wilson tells the story of what followed:

"His glorious coloring is a fact about Titian," said one man, striking the table to give emphasis to the remark.

"And his glorious drawing is another fact about Titian!" cried another artist.

And so they went on, until Carlyle, who had been listening in silence to their rhapsodies, interrupted them by saying, with a slow deliberation, which had its own impressive emphasis:

"And here I sit—a man made in the image of God—who know nothing about Titian, and care nothing about Titian and that's another fact about Titian."

Thackeray was sipping claret at the moment. He paused and bowed courteously to Carlyle. "Pardon me," he said; "that appears to me to be not a fact about Titian, but a fact—and a lamentable one—about Carlyle."

Saucy or Dull.

The Commercial Bulletin reports a passage-at-arms between a college professor and a sophomore:

The professor believes in simplicity and clearness. He said:

"You should have written on this subject, sir, so that the most ignorant of your readers could not fail to understand you." And the sophomore replied:

"What part of my paper is not clear to you, sir?"

A YEAR'S HISTORY.

Chronological Record of Twelve Months.

FULL RECORD OF 1895.

An Epitome of All Events of Importance.

The Usual Admixture of Disaster, Crime, Political Changes, Commercial Achievements, and International Complications—Atrocities of Turks in Armenia the Most Shocking Page in Modern History—Powers of Europe Unite in Demanding Reform—Cuban Revolution Next in Public Interest.

With but two exceptions, the nature of the events which go to make up the history of the past year is not startling. The butchery of thousands of Armenians by Turks has aroused the European powers, and at the close of the year active preparations were in progress which suggested the probable dismemberment of the Ottoman empire. The revolt of Cubans against Spanish rule was the next most important affair, and that, too, was in full sway at the close of the year. Spain seems to fruitlessly bend every energy toward its suppression. Popular sympathy is largely with the Cubans, and their success seems not improbable. In American politics the year has been exciting, and one of the great parties has suffered such reverses as to leave the chief executive unsupported in political faith by a majority in either house of Congress. A chronological record of events follows:

January.

1. Michigan's first public installation of State officers....Gov. Morton, of New York, sworn in....Belgium bars American beef....Tom Blair lynched at Mount Sterling, Ky....Five perish in an incendiary fire at Lancaster, Ky.

PUFFING THE PLAY.

"A New York Success"—Abuse of Press Courtesy.

The United States is a broad and busy country, and it is well supplied with excellent journals, says the Forum. As is natural and unavoidable, these generally take their tone in treating dramatic affairs from those of the metropolis. What is said and done in New York about plays and actors is published all over the union as quickly as the wires and press can spread the news. Consequently the theatrical business of the entire country is managed from New York. That is why actors, managers and the minor personages of stage life flock to New York. That is why for many years past it has been possible for the wily speculator in rotten dramatic lumber to set up a flimsy stage structure, held together only by the adhesive qualities of paint and printers' ink, and—by keeping a New York theater open and empty for its exhibition for a stated term of weeks at the expense of $3,000 or $4,000 a week, and by a continual pestering of the good-natured journalist—to obtain a sufficient amount of notice of his "great New York success!" to enable him to travel throughout the country with his "show," and gather a rich harvest from those who are eager to see what sort of plays please the people of the great city.

Of course the "show" soon falls to pieces from the weight of its own worthlessness, and the seeds of general contempt for New York's good taste in theatrical matters are sown broadcast. But no matter. The enterprising speculator, now well in funds, returns to New York and is soon upon the full tide of another like venture. Year after year this sort of thing goes on. But the people of the East, South and West are becoming wise and wary. The "business" is not so good now as it once was in those often-deluded sections. One of the roots of our theatrical troubles upon which the ax should fall quickly and sharply is this abuse of the press courtesy—first extended in good nature toward the struggling artist, but now demanded as a right by the brass-band "show boomer."

Swiss Advertising.

The practical Swiss have hit upon an original method of advertising which it is sincerely to be hoped will not become universal. Visitors staying at the lake of Geneva this summer have been astonished to behold the surface of the water ornamented with the name of a certain paper sparkling in golden beams upon the waves. How this miracle was contrived was at first a mystery, but the explanation is very simple. Large black lacquered placards, with raised gilt letters coated with some varnish which resists wet, are sunk and fastened securely to the ground, and, of course, the rays of the sun striking upon them brings the reflection to the surface. Some of the finest views in Switzerland are already sufficiently disfigured by advertisements—the majority, be it said with sorrow, generally setting forth the superlative excellence of some article of English manufacture; but the tastelessness of this latest idea would surely be difficult to surpass, and happily it cannot be placed to our discredit.—The Lady's Pictorial.

Game.

The Yorkshire gamekeepers have an ingenious way of protecting their hares from poachers. They net the hares at the various gates and stiles through which they pass, and then let them go again. The result is the hares are so frightened that they will never go through a gate again, and when the poacher sets his net there for them he is surprised to see them jump over the fence.

"Hail to the Chief" is a song in the second canto of Scott's "Lady of the Lake." It is a boat song, designed to imitate those of the Scottish boatmen. The melody was written by Sir Henry Rowley Bishop.

Our hardest battles are those we fight with ourselves.

THE RIGHT TO STEAL.

BOLD CLAIMS OF A PROTECTIONIST PAPER.

The People Will Not Indorse Its Doctrine—Enlightened Self-Interest Shows Protection to Be a Swindle—Great Scheme to Get Rich.

Pap-Fed Organ's Claim.

Insolent and overbearing as are the pap-fed organs of the high-tariff trusts and monopolies in their assertion of the doctrine that tax burdens should be laid on the many for the benefit of the few, it is seldom that one of them goes so far as to declare that the protected interests have acquired the "right" to rob consumers through high prices extorted by high taxes on imports. Yet this is the claim put forward in a recent issue of the Philadelphia Manufacturer, the organ of the protected manufacturers of Pennsylvania.

The Ledger, a Republican paper, having stated the well-known fact that to increase the duties on wool and woolens would be to "increase the cost of all kinds of men's, women's and children's clothing, blankets and other necessaries," the Manufacturer replied: "Supposing this result would follow, might it not be justified upon the ground that men, women and children have no right to buy these articles cheaper at the expense of the woolgrowers and woolen manufacturers of the country?"

The brazen impudence of this pretense that sixty-five million men, women and children "have no right to buy articles cheaper" at the expense of a few thousand manufacturers and woolgrowers may lead some people to consider that the Manufacturer was simply joking. But it was in deadly earnest and proceeded to denounce the popular desire to purchase things at the lowest possible price, in the regulation McKinleyite style. Evidently its editor believes what he wrote.

While this declaration of the "rights" of the few to high prices at the expense of the whole people is only the logical outcome of the protectionist policy, its brutal bluntness should shock those amiable Republicans who have clung to their party in spite of its degeneracy into a mere tool of monopoly. So long as a high tariff was cloaked under the pretense that it was needed to raise large revenues, or that it tended to reduce prices by encouraging domestic competition, there was some excuse for men who had not studied the tariff question adhering to the party which once stood for human freedom and popular rights. But that time has gone by, and there can now be not the slightest doubt that as a whole the Republican party is committed to the monstrous doctrine that the men who have been robbing the public have a "right" to continue their stealing undisturbed.

Against this absurd and unjust proposition every man of sympathy and intelligence should protest. The idea that the few men who grow wool, or convert it into cloth, can have a right to compel each man, woman and child to add to the profits of these growers or manufacturers, is a denial of the basis of American institutions and all civilized society. The whole fabric of human rights proceeds from the universal agreement that each man has the right to life, liberty and the enjoyment of the property he produced. To take a portion of their property away from the many in order that the few may get richer, is a direct violation of every principle of morality.

If it be true that the manufacturers have the right to charge higher prices than would prevail under free and fair competition, where and how did they get it? Who had authority to give the rights of the people into the control of a handful of men? How dare the advocates of McKinleyism deny to the American consumers their undeniable right to buy goods wherever they can get them best and cheapest? When was the principle of "the greatest good to the greatest number" changed to: "the greatest good of the woolen manufacturers?" Who are the protectionists, anyhow, that they should presume to say that men, women and children shall not buy their winter woolens as cheaply as possible?

An attempt to increase the cost of clothing and other woolen necessaries at this season of the year is an illustration of the inhumanity on which the trade haters and McKinleyites rely for support. But it is no more inhuman than the belief that a small privileged class have more right to consideration than the whole people. Both doctrines are worthy only of savages.

Protection a Swindle.

A favorite protectionist argument is the assertion that free trade means national uselfishness, and that a high tariff advances the interests of the country adopting it even though it injures other nations. As the great majority of mankind regard most questions from the standpoint of self-interest, it is only natural that they should incline to favor the policy which seems at first sight to be one of thorough selfishness. But on closer examination it will be found that protection has no right even to the doubtful honor of being the best policy for selfish people.

Properly understood the doctrine of free trade is simply the carrying out on a large scale of the same business principles which are found to work so well in small communities. For instance, the selfish desire of each man that he shall get as much as possible in return for his labor, leads to the widest diversification of industry. Instead of trying to make for himself everything he uses, the intelligent man devotes his time to the production of one particular article, which he exchanges for such products as other men can make more easily. In this way the total production of wealth is greatly increased over what it would be if each man in a short-sighted selfishness tried to satisfy his varied needs without exchanging his labor products for those of his fellows.

Trade with people of foreign countries is carried on, under free trade conditions, on exactly the same principles as domestic commerce. The advantage arising from diversified industries in one country are even greater when the products of the whole world are exchanged. Differences of soil, climate, natural resources, etc., enable one set of men to produce a certain article at less expense than some other men. As the latter excel in making another commodity a system of exchanges will increase the wealth of both parties. In this mutual benefit there is no pretense of unselfishness. It is purely a question of enlightened self-interest, such as prompts all trading.

Tested by its actual operations protection is no less an unjust system than it is in theory. It is not denied by free traders that by imposing high taxes on all imports, a few manufacturers and other monopolists will be benefited. But as increased prices injure the sixty-five millions of people who buy things, while the total number of persons directly or indirectly helped by protection is less than two million, it is clear that the interests of by far the greater number are opposed to the high tariff policy. So that on the protectionists' own ground of appeals to selfishness, their doctrine is a failure and a fraud.

How to Get Rich.

As men differ in opinion on the tariff, currency, or other questions, they are all agreed in one particular, the universal desire to accumulate wealth. This is a most praiseworthy ambition, and he who furthers the common aim is a real benefactor to mankind. Such in his own estimation is the tariff editor of the New York Press. A recent editorial in that paper returns to the Lubin project for a bounty on exports of farm products, which has been worrying the McKinleyites a good deal for more than a year. Opposing the proposition to tax the whole of the American people in order to give foreigners cheaper farm stuffs, the Press says: "It would be well had we nothing to export, but just enough to pay our debts and to purchase tropical supplies."

Here's the secret of getting rich. Don't raise anything to export, or at least no more than to pay debts and buy sugar, tea and coffee. If the ignorant foreigner wants our work, wheat, cotton or beef, and is willing to work hard to make things to give us in exchange, why, that is his mistake. We protectionists know better. We would stop all this foolish business of raising food for the swarming millions of Europe. Let 'em starve, who cares? We hate trade, and exports are a nuisance. Besides, the ungrateful farmers are asking unpleasant questions, actually wanting to know how they are benefited by a high tariff, when they sell a large surplus of their products abroad. And the cheeky fellows say they won

MERITED REWARD.

SALES OF LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND.

Unequalled in the History of Medicine. Honesty, Excellence, Faithfulness Fitly Rewarded.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Never in the history of medicine has the demand for one particular remedy for female diseases equalled that attained by Lydia E. Pinkhams Vegetable Compound and never in the history of Mrs. Pinkhams wonderful Compound has the demand for it been so great as it is today.

From Maine to California, from the Gulf to the St. Lawrence, come the glad tidings of woman's suffering relieved by it; and thousands upon thousands of letters are pouring in from grateful women, saying that it WILL and does positively cure those painful Ailments of Women.

It will cure the worst forms of female complaints, all ovarian troubles, inflammation and ulceration, falling and displacements of the womb, and consequent spinal weakness, and is peculiarly adapted to the change of life.

Every time it will cure

Backache.

It has cured more cases of leucorrhœa by removing the cause, than any remedy the world has ever known; it is almost infallible in such cases. It dissolves and expels tumors from the uterus in an early stage of development, and checks any tendency to cancerous humors.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills work in unison with the Compound, and are a sure cure for constipation and sick-headache. Mrs. Pinkham's Sanative Wash is frequently found of great value for local application. Correspondence is freely solicited by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., and the strictest confidence assured. All druggists sell the Pinkham's remedies. The Vegetable Compound in three forms,—Liquid, Pills, and Lozenges.

Don't Let Strangers Kiss the Baby.

"Your baby is the most lovely that was ever born," writes Isabel A. Mallon in January Ladies' Home Journal, "but do not let strangers, in their desire to express their admiration of it, kiss the little lips that cannot object or clasp tightly in their arms the little body that is, as yet, so tender. So many little ones are injured by promiscuous kissing that the wise mother tells the nurse that once she knows that outsiders are permitted to kiss the baby her discharge without a reference will promptly follow. Hard-hearted? No, indeed. Nurse must consider, first of all, her charge, even if, to the rest of the world, she is unwilling to display the baby entrusted to her care."

The Greatest Medical Discovery of the Age.

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, OF ROXBURY, MASS.,

Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston. Send postal card for book.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the right quantity is taken.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it. Read the label.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Sold by all Druggists.

TARIFF IN THE HOUSE

DINGLEY BILL GOES THROUGH WITH A RUSH.

Measure Forced Through the House to Increase Revenue by a Horizontal Increase in the Tariff—Passed by a Vote of 205 to 81.

With Whip and Spur.

The House Thursday responded to the appeal of the President by passing a tariff bill, the operation of which is limited to two and a half years and which is designed to raise $40,000,000 for the relief of the treasury. The vote was on party lines with two exceptions. The Republicans all voted for the bill except Hartman (Mont.), who did not vote, and the Democrats and Populists against it save Newlands (Pop., Nev.), who voted in favor of the measure. The especial order under which the bill was brought to a vote at 5 o'clock in the evening, after three and a half hours of debate, was iron-clad in its character and compelled the members to adopt or reject it without opportunity of offering amendments of any kind.

Although there was the brilliant setting that usually accompanies a field day in the house, the debate lacked much of the spirit and vim which generally characterizes a partisan battle in the lower branch of Congress. Even the preliminary skirmish over the adoption of the rule, which ordinarily precipitates the fiercest wrangling, passed off quietly. The debate itself was participated in by the leaders on both sides. The Republicans contended that the first necessity of the treasury was revenue to supply the continued deficiency. Every speaker denied that the proposed measure was a Republican protection bill. It was, they claimed, an emergency revenue bill on protective lines. The Democrats took the position that there was no lack of revenue in the treasury, and that the passage of a bill to increase taxation would in no wise help the situation nor furnish the relief desired by the President and Secretary of the Treasury. Mr. Dingley and Mr. Dolliver of the Republicans and Mr. Crisp and Mr. Turner of the Democrats carried off the honors.

The bill passed repeals the present tariff law until Aug. 1, 1898. Except for a few articles it is the antipodes of Col. Morrison's famous "horizontal" bill. His was a straight 20 per cent. ad valorem cut. This is a horizontal raise. The duties on all the articles in all the schedules except those covering wool and woolens, sugar, and wood and wooden manufactures are advanced 15 per cent. This is subject to the condition that in no case must the duties exceed those collected under the McKinley law. Sugar is left as it is, at 40 per cent ad valorem. Raw wool is required to pay a duty equivalent to 60 per cent. of that imposed by the McKinley law. Most woolen manufactures are required to pay 60 per cent. of the specific duties of the old law, but carpets will have to pay the specific duty of the old law in addition to the ad valorem duty of the present one. Imported lumber is taken off the free list and required to pay 60 per cent. of the McKinley duties. Lumber and wool are the only free list articles which are made dutiable. Therefore salt and a number of agricultural products are not affected by Thursday's legislation. When the bill was put upon its passage it was passed 205 to 81, the vote being taken by yeas and nays. There was no demonstration of any kind on the announcement of the vote.

BLIND CHAPLAIN OF CONGRESS.

Rev. H. N. Couden Lost His Sight in the Union's Service.

The chaplain of the new Congress, Rev. H. N. Couden, of Port Huron, Mich., lost his eyesight in the service of his country. When the first call for volunteers was made he enlisted in the Sixth Ohio Infantry, being then 18 years of age, and when his term had expired re-enlisted for three years. He was with McClellan in the West Virginia campaign and took part in the battle of Shiloh. In February, 1863, he was transferred to the First Mississippi Marine Brigade. Near Austin, Miss., he received a charge of small shot in his eyes, causing total blindness.

After honorable discharge, Mr. Couden, finding there was no hope of recovering his eyesight, entered the blind school at Columbus, Ohio, taking a course of seven years. Afterward he entered a theological seminary at Canton, N. Y. After filling pastorates in that State, Ohio, and Massachusetts he moved to Port Huron, Mich., four years ago. His work there has been highly successful, he erecting a handsome Universalist church.

Judge Nelson, of St. Paul, decided the case of Hartman against Warren, the Bishop Iron Company and others in favor of the latter, sustaining the demurrers interposed by defendants and dismissing the bill. The litigation is over the famous section 30, in the Vermillion range, one of the most valuable tracts in the country and often made the subject of actions at law.

Some of the property of the late Samuel J. Tilden was sold at auction. It consisted principally of household effects. Prominent among the spectators was Secretary of War Lamont. The sale continued all day, and at its close about $10,000 had been realized.

CRIPPLE CREEK A CRIPPLER.

Its Present Gold Mining Boom Said to Be a Big Conspiracy.

Cripple Creek, Col., has recently sprung into prominence as a great gold mining center. There are probably 200 mines, very few of which have produced ore in paying quantities. The great majority of the mines are nothing more than green goods speculations with holes in the ground, with nothing in the holes but paid-for press clippings. Mines hitherto unheard of have been stocked and listed, and mines which have never justified any higher rating than they have had for years have suddenly been boomed to a degree that reflects on the gullibility of the American public. The earnings of the mines which have been worked have not materially increased, and the promises of sudden large dividends are found only in the process of organization for months, and it has not been without its newspaper connections. One New York paper has boomed the craze to the extent of predicting the rise in values of this mining stock, for the obvious purpose of inducing Eastern investments. The chance to swindle the public in the name of the Cripple Creek mining field was foreseen by those having the true interests of the region most at heart. In a brochure issued by reputable business men of Colorado Springs as long ago as last April the following warning was given:

"Incalculable injury is inflicted upon mining regions of proven merit by the floating of wildcat companies, and advertising their lies on a magnificent scale.

"The greater the merit of a district the more widely this sort of thing is successfully carried on. Generally it is wise to leave any mining schemes severely alone that is boomed in the large metropolitan dailies and other newspapers.

"Cripple Creek affords many favorable and attractive propositions for money making, but, up to date, not one of these is included among the number that have been given wide notoriety beyond the boundaries of Colorado.

"There is a determination among our prominent mining men to have, as far as possible, only the facts as they exist in regard to the camp spread abroad, and to puncture all bogus or balloon projects sent kiting, in an alluring fashion, to victimize the credulous.

"In a word, and in conclusion, do not purchase the shares of any company without first investigating, for there is nothing so good that it will not keep long enough for this to be done."

Many of the mines of the Cripple Creek country which are capitalized at from $500,000 to $3,000,000 have never paid 10 cents profit since the first spadeful of earth was turned up where they are located, and there is no reason to suppose they ever will. There is a saying in Colorado that "for every dollar in gold or silver taken out of the ground $1.50 or $2 is put into it. This does not mean, of course, that there are no paying mines in that country—there are many of them—but it does mean that more money is spent annually in mining operations than is taken out in ore throughout the State.

Ninety-nine out of every hundred men in the East who put money into Western gold or silver mining projects have simply paid the expenses for developing prospect-holes, which ultimately proved valueless. These conditions are unchanged at this time, except that the money of the investors will not go to the development of a mine which may possibly turn out well, but will be diverted, instead, to the pockets of unscrupulous stock manipulators.

One of the best evidences that this Cripple Creek gold mining business is purely speculation is the large number of "exchanges" in full blast in that region, wherein large dealings in stocks are daily made. Stocks are generally purchased by brokers for clients living at a distance and these clients for the most part are people who are so anxious to get rich quick that they invest their little savings in these worthless stocks, upon simply newspaper say. There is a conspiracy to defraud and there are behind this conspiracy some of the shrewdest and sharpest financial experts in this country, and it is an undoubted fact that already some millions of dollars have been taken from the people by them.

Wonderful Strength.

In the sixteenth century there lived a remarkably strong man, a Major, named Barsabas. One day he took up an anvil weighing 501 pounds and hid it under his cloak. Often, to amuse his comrades he went through the rifle drill with a cannon. He could crush between his fingers the limbs of big animals. One day, seeing a crowd looking at an enormous dancing bear, he offered to wrestle with the animal. The Major threw the bear down several times, and, judging it unworthy of further struggle, slew the animal with his fist, and carried it away on his shoulders, amid the cheers of the crowd.

Another day, seeing several officers of his regiment surrounded by an angry crowd, he ran to them, knocking people down right and left, as a child does with a pack of cards. The crowd, exasperated, turned round on him, but, seizing two of his assailants, one with each hand, he used them as clubs on the crowd, who, astonished at this extraordinary display of strength, quickly drew back. Once he squeezed to pulp the hand of a man who wanted to fight him.

Barsabas' sister was also remarkable for her strength. Some burglars entered a convent where she was. She threw one out of the window and killed two others with a pillar she tore down and used as a club.

Seeking Safety in a Lion's Den.

A serious disturbance took place on the Place de Jaude at Clermont Ferrand a few evenings ago. A negro lion tamer of the American circus named Jackers quarreled with and stabbed a workman. He then took to flight pursued by a large crowd, whose object was to lynch him. Saved from the crowd by the police Jackson took refuge in a lion's cage in the circus. The tent was immediately surrounded by an exasperated multitude, who had a regular fight with the police and a number of soldiers. The authorities succeeded with great difficulty in preventing the rioters from cutting the ropes holding the scaffolding of the circus together. After several hours order was restored, and Jackers, who was calmly awaiting the end of the disturbance under guard of his lion Sultan, came out of the cage and gave himself up to the police.—London Exchange.

The Apache as a Soldier.

As to the merits or the Apache as a soldier, he doesn't appear to have any. He can withstand an incredible amount of fatigue. A body of Apache infantry will make a forced march in better time and can arrive in better fighting trim than the average regular cavalry. When the line of battle is drawn up, Mr. Apache is not there.

From time immemorial the Apache warrior has fought only from ambush, and no amount of military discipline can compel him to face a fire in which he has no better chance than his enemy. The only thing which lures the Indian from the reservation into the army is his love of the uniform. He cares more for bright colors and gilt trappings than for his wives, even more than he does for eating. Then they like the evolutions and military maneuvres. They enjoy the music, especially lively and spirited marshal airs.

China's Sunken Ships.

The ships sunk in the China-Japanese war are being examined by divers, to see whether they are worth salvage. One of the first victims was the Chinese transport Kow Shing, fired upon by a Japanese warship for carrying troops, although she flew the British flag. The divers who have been down to the wreck report her in a terrible condition. She is literally torn to pieces by shot and shell.

The organs of Harlem and Fribourg are the largest in the world. It is dangerous to use the pipe of the organ at its greatest power, so tremendous is the vibration it causes to the building. The Harlem organ is 180 feet high and 50 broad; it contains 500 pipes, resembling columns of silver from the ground to the roof.

Loaves for the Army.

In 1861 the vaults under the broad terrace of the western front of the capitol were converted into bakeries, where 16,000 loves were baked daily. These supplied the army of the Potomac, in addition to those baked at Alexandria and Fortress Monroe. The ovens at the latter place contained 30,000 loaves daily, and from an oven at City Point 123,000 fresh loaves were daily furnished the army.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Two medicines have done me so much good I cannot find words to express my gratitude for them. I was down with a complication of troubles, catarrh of the bowels and falling of the womb. For seven weeks I could not sit up. Two bottles of McElree's Wine of Cardui and one package of Thedford's Black-Draught cured me.

I have recommended the Wine of Cardui Treatment to a number of suffering women, and not one has failed to find relief by its use. If I can do anything to help bring this good medicine to the attention of sufferers, I will be glad. MRS. E. C. ADAMS.

Also $1 for one dog, $2 for each female dog and $2 for each additional dog.

The Road and Special Road Tax are included in the first installment. The Poll and Dog Tax are included in the first installment.

Taxes of 1895 are due the first day of January, 1896, and may be paid in full or in two installments. The first installment must be paid on or before the third Monday in April, 1896, the second installment on or before the first Monday in November, 1896. If the first installment is not paid when due both installments become delinquent. Ten per cent will be added and I shall at once proceed, as the law requires, to collect the same, together with the costs that may accrue, by distress and sale of personal property.

The Treasurer will not be responsible for the penalty and charges on delinquent taxes resulting from any omission of the person paying, to state definitely on what property, in which name and in what township or corporation it was assessed.

Persons owing delinquent taxes should pay them at once. The law is of such a character that there is no option left to the Treasurer but to enforce the collection of the delinquent taxes, however much he may regret to collect the same by sale of property.

"The owner of property on the first day of April each year shall be liable for the taxes of that year. The purchaser of property on the first day of April shall be considered the owner on that day."

Examine your receipts before leaving the office and see that all your property is included.

No county order will be paid to any person owing delinquent taxes.

The annual sale of lands and lots for delinquent taxes will occur on the second Monday in February, 1896.

Come early and avoid the rush of the last few days. We have 6,000 receipts to make, and all can not be made in the last few days.

The books will positively be closed on the evening of the third Monday in April and no one will be allowed to pay after that date without penalty.

Parties sending by others, or by letter, to pay tax should not fail to send description of their land and lots.

No receipt will be made out for any party until they are ready to pay.

Assignees, guardians, administrators and others who pay taxes on property in trust, and persons whose taxes are complicated, such as individual estates, etc., are earnestly requested to settle such taxes before the last few days, as it takes considerable time to make the divisions and separate receipts therefor. As the Treasurer can not know the location of each person's property, tax-payers should designate the property on which they wish to pay taxes, and see that all property is specified in their receipts. If they have land in more than one township or town, or desire to pay taxes on lands not in their name, call the Treasurer's attention to the matter.

California Letter.

Alhambra, Calif., Dec. 23, '95.

EDITOR COURIER:

This, the 23d day of Dec. two days before Christmas finds us enjoying a California winter, clear sky, weather warm and balmy, the busy bee and humming birds are as active as they are in the month of May and June in the east. We had a thorough rain a few days ago and everything has the appearance of an Eastern Springtime. Some fields of barley are up and 3 to 4 inches high yet some Californians have made it possible to realize a winter in the lap of spring.

The Mt. Lowe Inclined Railway Co., have finished their Alpine division. One can start from Pasadena where all is flowers and in 15 to 20 minutes land in the mountains with snow and winter all around. Facilities are at hand to have a toboggan slide or a sleigh ride and within an hour from time of starting, be back to Summerland.

S. C. Utes and family of Glendora made us a pleasant visit on Wednesday last. We were also agreeably surprised to meet Mr. David Cochran and wife of Ontario, Cal., who called on us when enroute from Los Angeles home. Mrs. C. has visibly improved in health since a year ago, and Mr. C. who is a contractor and builder, reports business as being excellent.

By invitation of Mr. and Mrs. Eli Messenger we shall spend a part of the holidays at their pleasant Cottage at the beach on the Pacific.

I made mention in my last letter of a sweet potato weighing 12½ pounds. I wish to make a correction as regards impressions that this was the largest one grown here. I came in contact with one last week that went 8½ pounds better or 21 pounds, these are not freaks of nature but a variety that I am told will exceed even the one I mention if properly cultivated. The orange groves are shining forth in golden array now, but no less attractive is at present the calla lily. I saw several acres of them in full bloom and they are indeed charming to the eye and present a grand sight.

Pasadena will hold their flower carnival in January and we expect a rare treat at that time.

I have many letters of inquiry from the east asking for chances of employment, wages paid, etc, etc, of which I will write in the near future. All of us are in good health.

Yours Very Truly
O. F. RUDOLPH.

TO THE SUFFERERS OF RHEUMATISM

After using Groff's Rheumatic Cure for some time in my practice I take great pleasure in saying that it is a most wonderful remedy for Rheumatism; in fact, it is the only one I have found for the cure of this disease in all its various form. Dr. E. E. Tull, Chicago.

Drinking Sand

There are drinks, and drinks, (So we are told,) there is the "wet sand" they call drinking water in Cincinnati, and there is "Mumm's extra dry" one can get in the swell cafes; there are "sand baths" and alkali waters, but it remained for some DeKalb folks to invent a "straight sand drink," Each Christmas, Brown, Culbertson & Boland have been in the habit of sending some little gift over to Mike Long, and those who help in the branch implement establishment at Butler. This year, in addition to a box of cigars they sent over a nicely sealed jug, supposed to be filled with "Suthin warm" for the use of Mike and the others. Mike gathered in his men, at his home and they had each a glass put on the supper table. But they did not know how to get the wax off the top of the jug. So Mrs. Long had to show them how. They followed her directions, set the jug on the stove and heated it. In due time, the wax flew off and into the potatoes Mrs. Long was cooking. But that was nothing when a warm drink was in sight. They took the cork out, the glasses were held ready, and the first one filled ——by a stream of lovely white sand. It was some of the white sand that had been used in building the big M. E. church in Auburn, and that had been put aside and saved. The glasses were dropped in silence; ditto the expectant faces. A dead calm fell on the scene. Second scene—dead calm. Third scene—dead calm. (Same to be continued.)

Obituary.

Mrs. Ella Barker, wif of Noble Barker, died at her home in Corunna, Dec. 24, 1895. She was the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Christian Smith of Fairfield township and was born Nov. 23, 1863, her age being 32 years, 1 month and 1 day. She had suffered severely for some time, but bore all with patience, and the call of the Master found her ready to go. The funeral was at Corunna, Thursday forenoon, services being conducted by the pastor of the Christian church at that place, and she was laid to rest in the cemetery at Fairfield.

Queer Decision.

Judge Ellison, of the Madison circuit court holds, in the case of Bonner, saloon keeper, arrested for violating the 11 o'clock feature of the Nicholson law that a person who violates any single section of the law does not subject himself to a fine. A saloon man, to be subject to a fine, must violate every section of the law; in other words, he can not be made to pay a fine for violating the 11 o'clock requirment unless at the same time he violates other features. Bonner was dismissed; so also two other defendants similarly charged.

Thursday's Daily.

So sings the poet of the DAILY after an hour spent in the Armory in company with the most aristocratic birds we ever were introduced to. And while they were aristocratic and as their owners insisted, "well bred," yet they were a noisy lot and very nervy. We saw one high bred rooster poke his head almost into the face of a visitor and give a scream like that of a well trained Comanche. It would have frightened the beast with seven heads and ten horns But to be plain, there has never been such a fine show of valuable poultry in Indiana. That is our honest judgment and we attended a states poultry show at Indianapolis. The best way to give our readers a knowledge of the extent of the country that has contributed to this show, we give below, the name and address of those who made entries and won premiums:

Mrs. Bell Cochran also received first premium on trio, which was the highest scoring in the show, except bantams. She also received third premium on breeding pen.

NOTES.

G. S. McCord bought the big eagle of Ed, Carver, of Columbia City.

Peter Weaver, of Cedar Creek bought a Barred Plymouth Rock cockrel of F. W. Richardson of Knoxdale, O. It cost him $5.

L. Bovee and son, of Auburn Junct., have a Flying Dutchman Incubator on exhibition, Mr. Bovee is the inventor of this machine and it is a grand success.

F. H. Boyle the assistant secretary is kept quite busy. The secretary C. B. Weaver is unable to attend much owing to a large amount of extra express business.

Chas McClave, of New London, O., is the Judge. He is proprietor of the Linwood Poultry Yards. Through the kindness of Mr. McClave we were permitted to look through his twenty-first Illustrated catalogue of Pure Bred Fowls and Eggs. It is nicely gotten up and contains a fine lot of illustrations. The catalogue it self is sufficient to convince people that Mr. McClave is a success as a poultry breeder. If dealers would make an impression on the general public they must do so by first class advertising matter. Cheap printed matter leads people to believe that their product is cheap

A Dead Man.

A reporter recently walked into a certain business house in his rounds to know who desired anything in the way of advertisements and noticed a drummer stood by the counter with his sample valise ready to open. "Anything you want to say in the paper to day?" said the reporter to the business man behind the counter, "No," said the business man, "I don't believe in advertising." The drummer waited until he was half way to the door, then slowly taking up his sample valise, remarked: "Well, that lets me out, I do not care to sell on time to any man who, at this age, does not believe in advertising. I prefer to deal with live men. When I want to strike up a trade with a dead man I'll go to the graveyard and swap business. Good day."

HARPER'S MAGAZINE.

IN 1896.

Bricels, a new novel by WILLIAM BLACK written with all the author's well-known charm of manner, will begin in December Number 1895, and continue until May. A new novel by GEORGE DUMAURIER, entitled The Martian will also begin during the year. It is not too much to say that no novel has ever been so awaited with such great expectation as the successor to Trilby. The Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc will continue and will relate the story of the failure and martyrdom of the Maid of Orleans. Other important fiction of the year will be a novelette by Mark Twain, under the title, Tom Sawyer, Detective; a humorous three part tale called Two mormons from Muddlety by Langdon Elwyn Mitchell; and short stories by Octave Thanet, Richard Harding Davis, Mary E. Wilkins, Julian Ralph, Brander Matthews. Owen Wister, and other well-known writers.

Prof. Woodrow Wilson will contribute six papers on George Washington and his times, with illustrations by Howard Pyle. Poultney Bigelow's history of The German Struggle for Liberty illustrated by R. Caton Woodville, will be continued through the winter. Two papers on St Clair's defeat and Mad Anthony Wayne's victory, by Theodore Roosevelt, with graphic illustrations will be printed during the year.

A noteworthy feature of the Magazine during 1896 will be a series of papers by Caspar Whitney describing his trip of 2,000 miles on snow-shoes and with dog-sledge trains into the unexplored Barren Grounds of British North America in pursuit of wood-bison and musk-oxen. Mr. Whitney's series will have the added interest of being illustrated from photographs taken by himself.

The volumes of the Magazine begin with the Numbers for June and December of each year. When no time is mentioned, subscriptions will begin with the Number current at the time of receipt of order.

Remittance should be made by Post-office Money Order or Draft, to avoid chance of loss. Newspapers are not to copy this advertisement without the express order of Harper & Brothers.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

FROM R. W. COBB

An Interesting Letter on his Recent trip through the West.

EDITOR COURIER:

As the writer has a couple of hours to pass before train to Spokane, Wash., will describe briefly covering my trip to date since leaving the Black Hills. It has been of unusual interest to me and would be to all who this may read, were they to make such a trip.

From Edgemont, S. D. to Billings Mont., a distance of 350 miles. New Castle and Sheridan, Wyo., are the only towns of importance, the former being situated in the Western Pine Clad foot hills of the Black Hill (mountains) looking west as far as eye can reach, nothing more than rolling country and table lands with now and then a herd of a few hundred or thousand cattle can be seen grazing. In the hills near by are coal mines employing about 1000 men. New Castle is a division point on the Burlington The ride to Sheridan is one of desolation and monotony, being among barren hills and rolling country, devoid of trees or vegetation except in the valleys, grazing is said to be good. About all the signs of life to be seen are the many foot prints of wolves and wild cats, who raid the jack rabbits and play havoc with cattle in Wyoming as well as making life hideous at night by their unearthly howls. At Sheridan is found a town of thrift and while at present many business rooms are vacant it is astonishing to note the amount of building going on. The town is strictly up to date in modern improvements. "The Inn" is one of the finest hotels in the west, owned by W. F. Cody, or Buffalo Bill, widely known as the popular wild west showman. His private home is at North Platte, Neb. The Big Horn mountains loom up west of the city and the higher peaks are clad in perpetual snow, the highest altitude being 14000 feet above sea level and though they look to be no more than four or five miles distant, it would worry a man considerable to walk over to the foot hills in one day. The Valley has been made to bloom through a fine system of irrigation and is claimed to be productive of the largest potato yield in the world One man's crop this year averaged 928 bushels per acre of excellent quality and are bringing fifty cents per bushel. Wheat in this Valley goes 60 bushels, oats 100. The richness of the soil together with facilities for watering at the proper time accounts for these enormous yields.

From Billings the snow peaks of the Rockies can be seen 85 to 125 miles in the west, the distance being deceiving to one not acquainted with the clearness of air in high altitudes. We follow the beautiful river of the Yellowstone the entire distance to Livingston. The writer caught his first string of mountain trout in this river in the Fall of 1892 and had them broiled and served at full length within two hours after taken from the silvery waters Livingston commonly known as the Windy City "as the wind always blows here" and the gateway to the National Park is situated in a mountainous basin being entirely surrounded by ragged snow peaks, the higher points south of the city and about sixty miles away emerge from the park and are apparently but a stone's throw, these peaks are of unusual loveliness.

One of the luxuries of travel "if you are careless of what you say" is arriving and departing in the small hours of the night; this is unavoidable especially when stops are made every fifty or one hundred miles there being but one train each way, daily "overland" in the twenty four hours. Occasionally when a jump of 300 or 400 miles is made, one has opportunity to enjoy a sleeper to advantage Leaving Livingston 3:30 a. m. with a double header of two 90 ton engines we proceed to climb up into and over the mountains into Bozeman, twenty-seven miles. The tunnel which is 3 300 feet in length has been on fire for the past three months and we are now pulled over another course a little further around and up into eternal snow lands and are gently dropped into the beautiful Gallatin Valley and soon into one of the finest little cities in Montana.

Bozeman has a population of about 12000, has modern improvements and surrounded by as good farming lands to be found, all of which is under irrigation The sloping hillsides rise to mountain heights on every hand which characterize most Valley towns. At this point the writer was shown as fine an Elk team to be found anywhere, the owner having a large number of these rare specimens corralled in the mountains not far from the city and holds them at fabulous prices. The elk head properly mounted brings all the way from $75 to $200. The tooth of the Elk "numbering two to the animal" are popular in the west being handsomely mounted the price varies all the way from $1 to $10 each according to their beauty marks.

Taxidermists do a lively business having a fine variety of mountain specimens, such as moose, deer, elk, bear, antelope, wolf, mountain sheep, wild cat, and other smaller game.

Leaving Bozeman in ample time to catch the first glimpse of daylight, and earth turns toward old Sol's rays. The delicate tints in cloud effects begin to change and brighten as we follow the course of the Snake River "deriving its name from its crookedness," along the mountain sides, we are again ascending into snowy regions and in altitudes where a cat could not live, among rocks and boulders, over numerous trestles and on almost endless windings and miles of track, the engines exerted to their fullest capacity. The scenery as the sun throws its bright rays over a landscape of deep ravines, gulches, canyons and valleys is a picture in nature for the artist to portray but hard to appreciate unless experienced. We reach the summit, altitude of 7000 feet and come into open view of the bottom lands and valley beneath, the largest objects such as cattle, horses, etc., resembling ants or tiny specks. It is looking off down from a dizzy height of some 2000 feet from our steel road-way whose course clings to the mountain sides. The cautious rate of speed in these places seldom exceeds ten miles per hour.

Heart Disease Cured

By Dr. Miles' Heart Cure.

Fainting, Weak or Hungry Spells, Irregular or Intermittent Pulse, Fluttering or Palpitation, Choking Sensation, Shortness of Breath, Swelling of Feet and Ankles, are symptoms of a diseased or Weak Heart.

MRS. N. C. MILLER.

Of Fort Wayne, Ind., writes on Nov. 29, 1894: "I was afflicted for forty years with heart trouble and suffered untold agony. I had weak, hungry spells, and my heart would palpitate so hard, the pain would be so acute and torturing, that I became so weak and nervous I could not sleep. I was treated by several physicians without relief and gave up ever being well again. About two years ago I commenced using Dr. Miles' Remedies. One bottle of the Heart Cure stopped all heart troubles and the Restorative Nervine did the rest, and now I sleep soundly and attend to my household and social duties without any trouble.

The Farmer's Handy Gate

Five Reasons why it is the Best Gate for Farmers:

FIRST. It is a good, durable gate, made of good material and well painted.
SECOND. It has the horizontal retractile movement on rollers, and the swinging movement on hinges.
THIRD. It can be raised so as to allow hogs or sheep to pass under, or to swing over deep snow. It can be changed in a minute without tools, and with mittens on if desired.
FOURTH. It requires but two ordinary posts to hang the gate to, and requires no more room than a common side gate.
FIFTH. Any child can operate the gate, can open and shut it, as it requires but the lightest strength.

Sample gate can be examined on the northeast corner of the court yard in Auburn. County, Township and Farm Rights for sale very reasonable.

New Years Day.

Wednesday's Daily.

Various nations have different days on on which to begin their calendar year We have adopted ours, as have most other modern nations, from the Romans of ancient days, who called it the first day of the year, or "calends," and usually observed it as a public holiday. There were to be no quarrels or litigations on that day, but there were processions sacrifices offered to their gods, etc., etc and later on they exchanged presents on this day, and had feasts and masquerading in various parts of the great empire. It was not till about the fifth century that Christmas, the 25th of December became prominent, as up to those days the great holiday was the celebration of the New Year.

It might be added, that the earlier Romans began their year with March which gave the present name "September" or "seventh month," etc., to the last months of the season. They had but ten months as far as we know, and it is not plain what they did with the restof the days. Two months were afterwards added, January and February, and later the year was made to begin as stated. Jan. 1.

Review of 1895.

Fort Wayne Evening Post.

Within the past 12 months the world has witnessed many changes.

On one side of Asia a great conflict has occured between China and Japan. The latter is the conqueror and has come into possession of important teritorial and other concessions. On the other side of Asia thousands of Christians have been butchered by the Turks and in Europe, Constantinople has been the scene of several riots due to the same cause.

Lord Salisbury is premier in England in place of Lord Roseberry, and the conservatives have a majority in parliament. In France the new president, Faure, seems to be having a good deal of trouble in organizing and holding a cabinet together. The opening of Germany's great canal connecting the Baltic and the North seas was one of the important events of the year.

Cuba is making a brave fight against Spain and the insurgents have overrun the greater portion of the island and now menace Havana.

France has forced Madagascar to accept a protectorate. The Central American republics are taking steps to form a federation.

Venezuela's boundary line is about to be investigated by a commission appointed by President Cleveland, and our government has notified England that the Monroe doctrine will be enforced against her if the facts of the case show that she has unlawfully acquired Venezuelan territory.

Here at home business has slowly improved in some localities, and especially in the south. Wages have slightly advanced and crops are abundant. The Atlanta exposition will of course fill a prominent place in the records of the year.

Many distinguised men have passed away. In our county we have lost Secretary Gresham, ex-Secretary McCulloch. Justice Jackson, ex-Justice Strong, Frederick Douglass, ex President Seelye of Amherst; Professor Dane of Yale; Professor Boyesen, W. W. Story and Eugene Field. In the old world death has claimed Huxley, Pasteur, Sir Henry Rawlinson, Alexandre Dumas, Selby and Blackie, Lord Rrndolph Churchill and the French marshal, Canrobert.

It has been a year of calamity in many countries—a year of war, pestilence and financial depression.

TO GROW BIG PANSY BLOSSOMS.

One can get large sized flowers from pansies by making the soil quite rich. When buds show apply some sort of liquid fertilizer. In this way you will succeed in getting some large flowers, but your plants, will not be benefited by the forcing resulting from this treatment.—January Ladies' Home Journal.

STOVES AT COST

J. Beuret has concluded to sell his entire stock of cook and heating stoves at cost. Persons who are in need of a stove will do well to call at his store on north Main street.

A Coxey Echo

"Gen." Randall, who led one of the "commonweal" armies from Chicago to Washington went up into northern Michigan last spring with a colony of several hundred persons to start a "community colony" there. They all worked together on a lot of wild land he had got hold of and all were to share alike in the crop. All the crop they could raise was potatoes of which they have about 4,000 bushels, which are worth ten cents a bushel when hauled to the nearest railroad station which is fourteen miles away. Randall has returned to Chicago and his "colonists" have dug homes in sand hills to keep from freezing in the great cold they always have there during the winter.

Children Cry for

The Old Regulators.

[Avilla News.]

It is well remembered by many that among the arrests made by the Regulators during the intensely exciting campaign against the blacklegs thirty eight years ago, were those of Bill Hill and John Wilson, both of whom escaped from the Noble county jail together—at least the same night.

A gentleman of Albion has in his possession a letter from Wilson to Hill, written at a time when, for prudential reasons, they were separated and did not, as before, occupy the same cell. The letter which partly explains itself, was picked up in front of this man's residence—having been dropped, undoubtedly, by the person to whom Wilson had intrusted the work of getting it smuggled into Hill's cell. It is somewhat lengthy, but from what purports to be a duplicate, the following extracts will show the motive of the writer:

* * * Hill, you must never tell —— —— or —— where —— is, if you do you will never regret but once, and that will be as long as you live, for they will take the advantage of you in that speculation. Hill, I would not say so if I did not know. * * * If you keep that secret it will help you out of trouble. * * * Hill, because you and me had a small dispute, you may think I am the cause of you not getting out no more. I will tell you it was one word you spoke yourself. You told —— before the election they had better not give you a chance They came over that same day and give orders that you should not be left out no more. * * * Hill, even if you should be sent to prison—if you keep that secret it will get you out. * * * Keep all this still. Burn this.

JOHN WILSON.

The foregoing extracts constitute about one-half the letter, in which several names are given which it is thought best to represent by blanks—for the present.

New Use of Phonograph.

An interesting example of the practicable use of the phonograph was recently made by the Knowles Steam Pump Works, of New York City. The company had put up one of its large pumps for a company at Elk River, Cal. After several years' use, something went wrong with the pump, and in a letter to the works in New York, which took the form of a phonograph cylinder, advantage was taken of the cylinder to record the sounds of the pump in running, precisely as the stethoscope is used by the physician in recording the action of the lungs. The manager of the water company spoke into the phonograph receiver, describing the spmptoms of the ailing pump, then moved the receiver so that the pulsations of the pump would be recorded of the wax roll. When the cylinder was put into the machine in New York, the voice of the Californian was heard first giving in a clear, concise and distinct way the symptoms of the defect in the pump, and then asks the listener to pay attention to the pump's action as sounded by the phonograph. The experiment proved absolutely successful, and the disease was correctly diagnosed, the proper remedy applied, and the pump is satisfactorily running again, and the time and expense of sending an expert from the works in New York to California was saved.

Unique Letter

"Old Henry Prince" as our people erroneously call him, is a queer character but a man who was once educated and intelligent and who still knows at times more than some who ridicule him. His education is mostly German, but he has managed to pick up the English writing and spelling in very fair shape. It appears that his mind was unbalanced when he was a young man, by the wild and exciting talk of some religious enthusiasts. After a period in a lunatic asylum, he came to this county where he has managed to get hold of a piece of land. But not being able to care for it, Wm. Carr, was a few years ago made his guardian. Mr. Carr has since cared for him more or less, and recently, when the old man expressed a desire to go back to the old home at Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio. Mr. Carr sent him there, and to make the friends here sure he had got through safely, he wrote back to Mr. Carr, the following unique letter, parts of which together with the closing signature are in German penmanship:

December the 27 (95)

Mr. Carr Willhelm, off DeKalb County (Ind)

I, John H. Bruens from Section 8 Jackson Township.

I got no Breakfast untill i got to the Chicago Junction And I was at Akron about 4 o'clock, and at 5 o'clock I was at Cuyahoga Falls City.

A Crooked Well

W. S. Purdy and Croly Snyder Are Courting at Fort Wayne.

Thursday's Daily.

W. S. Purdy the veteran well driller and Croly Snyder who lives near Collingwood just across the county line into Allen county are having a trial to-day in the Allen county court. It seems that Mr. Purdy put down a well for Mr. Snyder and after its completion, the latter refused to pay for the work because it was not plumb. That is, the well was not straight down in the ground. This seems like a small thing to take into court. Yet Mr. Purdy has put down the well and the same gives good satisfaction except it is not straight. We see no reason why he should not have his pay. Among those who went down from here this morning were: W. S. Purdy, Dell Purdy, Fred Purdy and wife, Henry Showers, Phil Myers, Ed Metcalf, O. E. Applegate, Mr. Boren and others.

Sensation at Avilla.

[Fort Wayne Journal.]

Early last evening the family of Henry Bauman, west of this place, returned home to find that their house had been entered and some clothing, a pair of boots and two revolvers had been stolen. Tracks in the snow led to the barn, and on going there an unknown man jumped out and ran across the field. They gave pursuit and the chase continued for nearly a mile. When the fugitive saw his pursuers were almost upon him, he drew a revolver and sent a bullet into his own head. The ball entered at the left temple and made an ugly wound, but the man is still living. After shooting himself he dropped in the snow, and as his pursuers reached him he was recognized as Gideon Houser, about 30 years old, who formerly resided here, but of late has been living in Kansas City, where he has a wife. Houser has done time at Michigan City for larceny. He was brought to this place last night, and to-day was taken to the county poor farm at Albion. The doctors say he may live. A part of the stolen property was found on his person.

Under the Ice

Carlton Bodley of Angola, Drowned while Skating.

PLEASANT LAKE, Ind. Jan. 1, (Special.)—Carlton, the thirteen-year old son of Greenwood Bodley of Angola, broke through the ice while skating on Center lake yesterday morning.

The Herald of that place gives the following concerning the sad affair:

"As we go to press, at 10:00 a. m., the sad intelligence reaches us that Greenwood Bodley's son Carlton, had broken through the ice in Center lake. Several companions were with him, and as he clung to the ice they ran to his assistance. H. B. Wright was soon on hand and with a pair of ice tongs succeeded in reaching and bringing him out of the water. Efforts were promptly made to resuscitate him but without avail. He was in the water probably about 30 minutes. It is a very sad affair. "Carl" was their only child; aged about 13 years."

Powder Accident

Thursday's Daily.

W. S. Gandy of Churubusco has many friends up this way, and they will be pained to hear of a dangerous accident to his wife which happened yesterday. A special to the Ft. Wayne Journal says: Mrs. W. S. Gandy was seriously burned this afternoon by the explosion of a paper of powder which by mistake she threw into the stove with some old papers. It was fortunate she had on a woolen dress, otherwise she would have been burned to death. As it was she was badly burned on the hands, neck, face and head.

Rather Lonesome

St. Joe News.

Dick Monroe, the night operator at this place, likes company, but he had one person with him last week whose presence made him terribly lonesome and uneasy. It was the body of young Matthews, which arrived here on Thursday and lay in the depot until Sunday afternoon. The circumstance connected with the young man's death as near as we could obtain them, are as follows: His name was Eber Matthews, son of Vol Matthews, who used to live west of this place. For several years he worked for his uncle, James Coleman, who lives near Coleman's Corners, but last spring he concluded to go west. On the first day of June he was killed on a railroad in Colorado, and buried there. His father who now lives in Ohio, was not satisfied to leave him there, and the body was exhumed and sent here by express. The burial took place Sunday afternoon in the Newville cemetery. The young man was about twenty years old.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

AN OPEN SWITCH.

Terrific Rear End Collision Near Chillicothe, Ohio.

Chillicothe (Ohio) special: The Royal Blue Flyer on the B. & O. S. W. Railroad was wrecked at Schooley Station, seven miles east of Chillicothe.

The conductor of a freight train which was ahead of the express train was ordered to run in on a side track at Schooley Station in order to allow the Royal Blue Flyer to pass. This was done, but the switch was not thrown back in place again. After a brief wait the express came thundering along and ran in on the side track, crashing with terrific force into the rear end of the freight. The passenger engine was demolished, and from what can be learned both the engineer and fireman were instantly killed. Details of the wreck are meager. It is known, though, that a number of passengers were badly injured, and it is said several are dead, as a score of physicians and surgeons have been sent to the scene from this city.

Three Will Die.

At Milledgeville, Ky., a boy named Walters, while playing at the house of his aunt, secured a revolver and began shooting, with the result that his two little cousins, two girls aged 4 and 8, were shot through the abdomen and hip respectively. A third was also slightly injured. The boy then placed the pistol under his own chin, and, pulling the trigger, sent a ball crashing through his own head. A doctor was called, but, after examination, found that the two girls would die. The boy is just lingering between life and death, and cannot last long.

Four Dead and Three Missing.

A special from Bluefield, W. Va., says: It is reported here that by a premature explosion of powder and dynamite recently, four men were killed at Lafollete Campbell Country. Three others are missing and their bodies are being searched for in the mass of earth and rock which was dislodged by the explosion. The names of the dead are said to be John Webster, Anderson Bailey, Dawson Neal and a Mr. Price. The explosion took place ni the mine.

Alaska Boundary.

In discussing the Alaska boundary question, Judge Truitt, retiring United States Judge of Alaska, having turned over his office to his successor, Hon. A. K. Denaly, says: "The unanimous opinion on the boundary question is that the line should stay right where it is. People do not want England's contention granted, for it would take some of the best of southwestern Alaska and control the Yukon trade."

Fierce Battle.

Knoxville (Tenn.) special: Reports reached the United States Revenue Colector's office here which say that in a battle between a posse of officers and moonshiners in North Carolina, near the Tennessee line, seven men were instantly killed and others hurt. The scene of the reported battle is several miles from any railroad and nothing additional can be learned.

Fearful Plunge.

By the breaking of the harness the wagon, in which John Brumer, his wife and four children were riding, west of Akron, Ohio, ran down a steep hill and plunged into a telegraph pole. All six were badly injured. Mrs. Brumer and the girls, aged 7 and 11 years, were fatally hurt. One of the girls has since died, and the other and the mother cannot live.

Fatal Wreck.

A Columbus, Sandusky and Hocking freight engine blew up two miles south of Fultonham, Ohio, and twelve miles from Zanesville Engineer Bert Mead, Fireman Frank Hesse and Brakeman Kreits were killed instantly, and Conductor Ira Morris is fatally injured. All the men live at Shawnee, Ohio.

Fatal Misstep.

Orn Brown, an employe at the Monon rock crusher, Salem, Ind., was instantly killed while attempting to board a flat car from the trestlework at the crusher. Brown missed his footing, fell between the cars, and was horribly mangled. He leaves a wife and child.

Boiled in Soap.

Mrs. Will Harlass, living on Horse Creek, Logan County, W. Va., left her little 3-year-old boy playing near a kettle of boiling soap in the yard. She returned a few minutes later and the little one had fallen into the kettle and was parboiled. It lived three hours.

Masonic Temple Theater, Ft. Wayne, Indiana.

This popular play-house has booked some splendid attractions this season. One of the best is a "Bunch of Keys," a beautiful comedy, which will appear there Thursday, January 23.

Mysterious Murder.

A special from Leetonia, O., says: A mysterious murder was committed at Grafton, near this town. Two Italian brothers, who lived and sleep together in the same bed were awakened during the night by three masked men, two of whom held the one brother, while the third fellow stabbed the other brother to death. Robbery does not appear to have been the motive for the crime as there were several hundred dollars in the possession of the brothers, which was left untouched. The crime is supposed to be the work of the Mafia.

To Save Zeitoun.

A dispatch from Constantinople says that the porte has consented to accept the offer of the foreign representatives at Constantinople, that the foreign consuls at Aleppo mediate between the Turks, who are besieging Zeitoun, and the Armenians who hold the town, for the surrender of the latter.

The Strike On.

The street railway strike is on again at Philadelphia. The declaration was made at a mass meeting in labor lyceum. The excitement was so intense that numerous small riots were averted with great difficulty. Pandemonium reigned at times and many conservatives left in disgust.

FRIGHTFUL CASUALTIES.

An Explosion at St. Louis Deals Out Slaughter.

At 1 o'clock Friday afternoon a series of terrific explosions laid waste the vicinity of Second and Vine streets, St. Louis, where printing houses and allied trades are numerous. Just after the clock stroke a boiler in Geo. F. Meritz's printing office, No. 308 North Third street, just across the alley from the storage and commission house of H. B. Grubb, exploded. In the rear of the Grubb establishment a large quantity of fireworks was stored and a second explosion occurred, followed immediately by a third that lifted the Grubb building and dropped it in a mass of wreckage. The explosion caused general consternation and every window for three blocks was broken. A large plate glass window in the Merchants' Exchange, four blocks away, was shattered, and the traders stampeded. Nineteen persons were seriously injured and at 6 p. m. five dead were found. In addition to the list of injured given thirty-five others were more or less hurt.

A HOLOCAUST.

Six Persons Perish in the Flames at Columbus, Ohio.

At 4 o'clock Friday morning the residence of J H. Hibbard, 1,398 East Long street, Columbus, Ohio, was discovered to be on fire. Mr. and Mrs. Hibbard, their son, Allen, aged 5, and baby, Dorothy, Miss Fanny Hibbard and Mrs. Grace Hibbard Lee, sisters, of Barnesville, Ohio, perished in the smoke and their bodies were more or less destroyed by fire. Mr. Hibbard is secretary of the Central Ohio Natural Gas and Fuel Company, and is connected by marriage with the Deshlers, Huntingtons and others of the wealthiest families of Columbus.

Four sons less than fifteen years of age and the colored servant, aged 18, and originally from Palatka, Florida, escaped by jumping from the second story window. Natural gas was used, but the fire evidently originated from some defective construction in the wood work. Mrs. Lee was the wife of a son of the editor of the Barnesville Enterprise.

FAILURES.

The Number for 1895 Slightly Less Than That of 1894.

Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: The commercial failures during the complete year of 1895 number 13,197, against 13,885 in 1894, but the aggregate of liabilities are slightly greater, $173,196,000 against $172,992,856, so that the average per failure is $13,124 against $12,458 in 1894. The bright promise offered by a large decrease in the first quarter was followed by a small increase in the second and third quarters, and a large increase in the last quarter of the year. In that quarter also the deferred liabilities to each firm in business increased and also the proportion of deferred liabilities to payments through clearing houses. The effects of unreasonable speculation in materials create an advance in prices of goods, heavy purchases ahead of distribution and enormous increases in production clearly appear in the returns.

Another Boundary Dispute.

Oaxaca (Mexico) special: A pitched battle has occurred between the inhabitants of the towns of Huitzel and San Juan Del Estado as the outgrowth of the bitter feeling that has existed for some time between those places concerning their boundary lines. Four persons were killed and twenty injured, many of the latter seriously. The State troops were ordered to the scene of the rioting and many arrests were made.

Children Cremated.

At Akron, Ohio, Wm. Athins and wife went to church the other night, leaving their three children, aged 10, 7 and 5 years respectively, at home in bed. Returning at midnight they found the house in flames and heard the children crying for help, but were unable to save them, and all three were cremated. The fire was caused by the explosion of a lamp.

Fire and Blizzard.

Wilkesbarre (Pa.) special: The cranberry breaker, operated by Pardee & Co., at Cranberry, near Hazletown, Pa., was destroyed by fire. A number of company houses were also destroyed. Loss about $100,000. A furious blizzard is raging. The boiler and fan houses adjoining the breaker are on fire and the department is of no avail.

Wreck on the Pennsylvania.

Eight loaded freight cars broke away from an engine in the Pennsylvania railroad yards at Pittsburgh, and dashing down the grade at Thirtieth street, collided with the north wall of the round house, causing much damage. The loss is estimated at $10,000.

Terribly Afflicted.

Henrie Harrison, living near Mound City, Ok., got up, and, falling in the fireplace, was burned to death. His grandson, who discovered the burning body was so overcome with the horror of the scene that he has become a raving maniac.

Hanging Too Good for Him.

At Lincoln, Neb., Judge Holmes sentenced George W. Davis to the penitentiary for life for wrecking a Rock Island passenger train near Lincoln, whereby eleven lives were lost.

Morton Is a Candidate.

Ex-Senator Warner Miller says that Gov. Morton had authorized his friends to state that he had consented to become a candidate for President of the United States.

WHIP THE BRITISH.

VICTORY FOR BOERS IN THE TRANSVAAL BATTLE.

Dr. Jameson Surrenders—Remnant of His Forces Now Imprisoned at Johannesburg—London Instructions Disregarded—Parallel to Venezuela

South Africa Excited.

The invading English army in the Transvaal has been disastrously defeated by the Boers. A score or more have been killed, many wounded, and Dr. Jameson is a prisoner at Johannesburg. One of the most impudent acts of aggression ever committed even by British arms has thus met with swift retribution.

The details are meager of this inglorious finale of what was intended to be a brilliant piece of bravado, which success might justify, but which failure would make a crime. All that is known is the Government messengers, with dispatches from London ordering Dr. Jameson to retreat to the Chartered Company's territory, reached Dr. Jameson Wednesday morning. He pocketed the Queen's orders, told the messenger laconically that he would attend to them, gave the command to his troops to saddle, and marched, not on the back track, but on toward Johannesburg.

At 4 o'clock in the afternoon he encountered the Boers at Krugersdorf. There was hard fighting until sundown, and the British troops suffered severely. The famous marksmanship of the Boers was no less deadly than in their gallant defense against the same enemy fifteen years ago. Twenty men, including three officers, were killed, and fifty prisoners were taken before Dr. Jameson surrendered.

A London dispatch says: The world will now be overwhelmed with disavowal from everybody concerned except Dr. Jameson. Nobody will be louder in protesting their innocence than the Chartered Company and Cecil Rhodes, but nobody will believe them. Nothing will change the popular conviction that what has happened is simply the overthrow of a bold and reckless plot. The part that failed was the promised uprising of the Uitlanders in Johannesburg. The revolt there was expected to begin the day before Dr. Jameson crossed the frontier. His justification was to be: "The Boers are massacreing our countrymen. Blood is thicker than water. We will march to their rescue."

S. E. PAUL KRUGER, PRESIDENT OF THE REPUBLIC OF TRANSVAAL.

Even that excuse would be sentimental rather than legal, but it would go in South Africa and it would probably go in England if Germany and other countries did not make too much fuss about it. Hence the wires were cut and Dr. Jameson, with 700 men, dashed in at the appointed time to carry out their part of the plan. The faint-hearted foreigners in Johannesburg failed to begin the rebellion, and Dr. Jameson's rescue expedition became a horde of lawless freebooters, invading a friendly State. Such is the true aspect of the situation in the eyes of Englishmen. The British Government has already disavowed everything; so has Cecil Rhodes; so has the Chartered Company, through its directors in London.

SOUTH AFRICAN TERRITORY IN WHICH THE TROUBLE OCCURRED.

It is by no means certain that the trouble in the Transvaal is at an end. Britain Thursday night was given the interesting spectacle of the British colonial secretary sending a beseeching appeal to President Kruger that the Boers deal leniently with the wounded and other prisoners. The reason of this is that great social pressure was brought to bear on Mr. Chamberlain to rescue a dozen officers of the guards, several noblemen's sons and other young bloods with high connections, who are included in Dr. Jameson's force of invaders.

Cause of the Trouble.

There is no Schomburgk line in South Africa. There is no other line, says a correspondent, which the imperialist passion of Great Britain and the greed of British colonists will recognize unless one or the other of the great powers, in its own interests, arbitrarily fixes a line beyond which the advance guard of British trade and British rule may not go with safety to the imperial Government. Twenty years ago English dominion in South Africa extended only to latitude 30 degrees south of the equator. To-day the provisional boundary of the British South African Company's protectorate is at latitude 10 degrees south. How this has been accomplished the world knows.

Never were irregulars in time of war given freer rein than Rhodes and Jameson and the cape colonists generally have had in the butchery of natives and the seizure of territory. The war on poor old Lobengula, instigated and directed by this same defeated Jameson, was an unparalleled blot on nineteenth century civilization.

DR. C. S. JAMESON, GOVERNOR GENERAL OF MASHONALAND.

The feeling in Germany is amply warranted by the situation. The colonists have acquired by persistent advances all the enormous stretch of land in the interior from the southern line of the Congo State to the Cape of Good Hope, except the Orange Free State and the Transvaal Republic. With these two independent Governments in their possession the British would hold all the territory between German East Africa and German Southwest Africa. Nothing could be more natural than that the Boers should seek the aid of Germany, although by the terms of the treaty of 1884, which was wrung from Great Britain by the sword, they are bound not to conclude any treaty or engagement with a foreign Government except the Orange State. But a convention disregarded by one party is not binding on the other, and in the treaty of 1884 England stipulated that she would not interfere with the internal affairs of the republic.

The issue to which all the nations of the earth are gradually awakening—whether the time has not come to forcibly prevent the extension of British dominion—has been precipitated by the rash act of Jameson, a high-handed adventurer of a type more patiently considered in the heydey of piracy than in our own time. It is inconceivable that the secretary for the colonies should not have been able to stop the South African Company's agent. Private letters prove that the sortie was in contemplation a month ago. Mr. Chamberlain's lamentations are tardy.

The predicament of the imperial Government is extremely awkward. On the one hand they have to restrain the lust and pugnacity of high-spirited colonists who have never feared to speak of the slenderness of the ties by which they are bound to the parent State. On the other hand, they face a brave people and the possibility of European complications. Let no one imagine the Boers will not fight. The English are disposed to discredit their courage, but they showed steadiness and daring at the Drakensberg Pass and on the height of Spitzkop, and in these battles as elsewhere their marvelous riflemen potted the English calmly and accurately. The feeling of Africa is with them. In their rebellion they had the sympathy of the Orange State, and it would not require much to revive President Kruger's cry of "Africa for the Afrikanders, from Zambesi to Martin's Bay."

THE TYPICAL "LAAGER" (DEFENSIVE POST) USED IN SOUTH AFRICAN WARFARE.

It is a significant coincidence that on the day of the appointment of the Venezuelan commission England gave proof of the spirit of greed and oppression that moves her agents everywhere.

The Parasite Fig.

The parasite fig, indigenous to the tropics, is a most extraordinary plant. Its seeds are distributed by birds, and if one drops and lodges in a fruit tree it will germinate there and send a long root to the ground and draw nourishment through it. It then rapidly spreads over the unfortunate tree and strangles it.

A carpet tack trust has been formed. We hope Attorney General Harmon will see the point.

The camphor trust has doubled prices. You can't get so much now for a scent.

GROVER NAMES FIVE.

PERSONNEL OF THE VENEZUELAN COMMISSION.

Brewer and Alvey Head the List—Andrew D. White, Frederic R. Coudert, and Daniel C. Gilman Are the Other Appointees.

All Accept.

President Cleveland Wednesday night announced the appointment of the Venezuelan Boundary Commission as follows: David J. Brewer, of Kansas, Justice United States Supreme Court; Richard H. Alvey, of Maryland, Chief Justice of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia; Andrew D. White, of New York; Frederic R. Coudert, of New York; Daniel C. Gilman, of Maryland.

All of the above named persons will accept the places to which they have been appointed and are expected to assemble in Washington as soon as practicable, with a view to their entering upon their work. In Washington the commission is regarded as a very satisfactory one, whose opinions and conclusions will be received by the American public with that confidence which the standing of the members of the commission in the public eye inspires.

Politically speaking, the commission consists of three Democrats and two Republicans. Justice Brewer and Justice Alvey are men of the highest judicial standing, whose reputations as impartial jurists are well known abroad, as well as at home. Frederic R. Coudert, of New York, is too well known as a leader at the bar to require any extended sketch of his scholarly attainments. Andrew D. White and Daniel G. Gilman stand among the foremost of American scholars and educators, and Mr. White has shown, in addition, unusual skill as a legislator, organizer and diplomat. Both will be useful members of the commission, and their names will do much to give its findings dignity and weight in the eyes of European nations.

The law authorizing the appointment by the President of the Venezuelan commission was passed by the House of Representatives on Dec. 17. On Dec. 20 it was adopted by the Senate without amendment and without a dissenting voice. The text of the bill was as follows:

"A bill making an appropriation for the expenses of a commission to investigate and report on the true divisional line between the Republic of Venezuela and British Guiana.

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, that the sum of $100,000, or as much thereof as may be necessary, be and the same is hereby appropriated for the expenses of a commission, to be appointed by the President, to report on the true divisional line between the Republic of Venezuela and British Guiana."

The conclusions reached by the commission will be reported to the President for his information in connection with any further representations and communications that may be made by this Government to Great Britain in connection with the boundary line dispute between the latter country and Venezuela.

RIFAAT PASHA.

The New Grand Vizier of the Turkish Empire.

It is evident the Sultan of Turkey is a hard man to please. He recently changed prime ministers three times in three weeks. The new grand vizier, Rifaat Pasha, is a man of long public service. He has been governor of many Turkish provinces. His last office of that character was ruler of Smyrna. Before his promotion Rifaat was minister of the interior. He is a thorough-paced diplomatist and before advising the Sultan on any point ascertains the innermost views of his sublimity on the matter in question.

RIFAAT PASHA.

Advice then is easily formulated. It is probable Rifaat will hold his portfolio long. There is little prospect of future joy for a grand vizier. Keanal Pasha, immediate predecessor of Rifaat, has been sent to govern an interior town of Asia Minor. Said Pasha, who preceded Keanal, took refuge at the English embassy upon his removal from office. He emerged a few days ago.

Have a Good Breakfast.

"The foreign idea of a light breakfast has become very popular in this country," said a prominent physician the other day," but doctors are beginning to inveigh against it, and with considerable show of reason, as they point out that during the night occurs one's longest fast.

"It should certainly be broken by something more than a roll and coffee, since it ushers in the hours of hardest work for all our men and most of our women.

"The rolls and coffee are not fit preparation for such laborious toil. They may do for a nation of idlers, but not for busy men and women.

"An intelligent person needs no doctor to tell him when he is hungry, and the best time for a man to eat is when the man is hungry, even if it is late at night.

"It is the empty stomach, and not the comfortably full one, that makes people unhappy."

Fish Hook.

A new fish hook has been invented. The bait holding device is supplied with self-opening hooks which are closed and concealed at their points and which spring in opposite directions when the slightest tension is put upon the line. One of the chief advantages claimed is that when the fish are landed they can be readily released.

MEET DEATH BY FIRE

MAN AND WOMAN BURNED ALIVE IN KENTUCKY.

Mrs. T. J. West Cremated and W. A Deveres Bullet-Ridden—Prayer of a Little Child Has No Effect on the Band of Brutal Outlaws.

Mob's Awful Deed.

In Marion County, Ky., the other night a mob of about fifty men surrounded the house of Mrs. T. J. West and called for W. A. Deveres. Mrs. West came to the door and asked what was wanted. The mob fired on her and she ran back. The men continued to fire, and as Deveres did not make his appearance they applied the torch to the house. The blackened and disfigured corpses of the victims were found in the ruins of the woman's home the next day. The tragedy was one of the most brutal ever enacted. Despite the pleadings for her father's life of a half-clad, frightened child, and the prayers and tears of the ill and helpless woman, the mob went through with its work with cold-blooded, cruel deliberation, and only left when certain that both man and woman were dead.

Several months ago Deveres, a middle aged widower, and Thomas West, a prosperous farmer, began a quarrel which continued throughout the fall until West instituted divorce proceedings and declared Deveres must die. The men met in Lebanon. West snapped his revolver, which missed fire, and Deveres killed him on the spot. On the plea of self-defense the murderer secured bail and scandalized the neighborhood by taking his two daughters and moving into West's house. The relatives of the murdered husband swore vengeance, and Saturday night it came. Close to 10 o'clock a band of men rode up to the West homestead and demanded admittance.

"Tom West is dead. Now it's your turn," the spokesman called, and Deveres awoke to find the house surrounded. Mrs. West rushed to a darkened window and began a wild appeal for mercy. A dozen bullets answered her cries, and the demand for immediate surrender was repeated. A hurried consultation was held inside the house, and then, white and terror-stricken, the little girl of Deveres was thrust out to plead with the mob. Clad in her nightrobe, barefooted and unprotected, she bravely walked out into the moonlight and sobbed out a prayer for her white-haired father's life. "Get out. You're liable to get shot yourself," a ruffian said, and thoroughly panic-stricken the child fled to the cabin of a negro neighbor. Mrs. West then appeared at the door and made a last appeal for mercy. It was unavailing, and in another moment the house was fired.

The shrieks of the imprisoned wretches failed to move their torturers, who, after the flames reached the living-room, could see the man and woman in the agony of death by fire. Just before the roof fell the woman was seen to reel across the room and plunge headlong into the fireplace among the burning coals, and there she died. Wild with pain, Deveres, at the last moment, made a dash for liberty, but a score of bullets stopped him half a dozen steps from the door. In the morning the little girl led her negro protector to the scene, and there the bodies, scorched beyond recognition, were found.

BOND BILL PASSED.

House Adopts the Measure by a Majority of Thirty-four.

The house Saturday passed the bond bill by a vote of 170 to 136 and thus having discharged the task for which it has been sitting during the holiday recess, effected an agreement by which the House should adjourn three days in order to give members an opportunity to spend New Year's Day at their homes. The closing hours of debate were lacking in spirit and there was practically no excitement until a vote was taken. A margin of thirty-four by which the first section of the bill, against which Republican opponents of the measure massed their opposition, was passed and showed that the friends of the measure had marshaled every available vote in its favor. As it was, forty-seven Republicans refused to act with the majority of their party. The bill as passed, amends the "resumption act" so as to permit the issue of 3 per cent. coin bonds redeemable after five years at the pleasure of the Government and payable in fifteen years with a specific proviso that nothing in the bill shall be construed to repeal the act of 1878 for a re-issue of greenbacks and that the bonds shall first be offered for subscription at the subtreasuries and depositories of the United States. The second section of the bill provides for an issue of three-year 3 per cent. debt certificates of denominations of $20 and multiples thereof in amounts not exceeding $50,000,000 to meet temporary deficiencies.

They were not in the veranda when he went out, and he strolled further away to where he knew some seats had been placed. Even then he did not see them; it was Jane's voice which betrayed their presence at the other side of a tent, near which he was standing.

"How can you say such cruel things, and so untrue!" she was saying, in excited indignation.

"I fancy the cruelty lies in the truth of the accusation," answered Jack Blount, cuttingly; and the listener could no longer doubt that Diana Knollys had been correct in her estimate of the man and his power of being disagreeable. "They said you were a flirt. Only a few months ago you jilted Colonel Prinsep—the fellows told me that at mess to-night—and—now——"

He stopped suddenly as Colonel Prinsep himself stood before them.

"Perhaps I am the best person to refute that calumny," he said, quietly, but with a repressed passion in his tones, that Jane, knowing him so well, easily detected. "That Miss Knox gave me up was my own fault; I have never had the slightest reason to reproach her."

"Of course if you say so," began Mr. Blount, ungraciously.

"I do say so, and must beg that here at least you will not refer again to the subject on which you have received such inaccurate information."

With a malicious scowl darkening Blount's face he turned upon his heel and left.

The witchery of the time and place had cast its powerful spell over Stephen Prinsep. Gradually as she spoke he forgot everything except that she had been his love. The moonbeams fell upon her uncovered head and upon her lovely upturned face as she pleaded her extenuation.

"Is it your fault you are so fair? Even that dolt could not be blind to your sweet beauty!" he exclaimed, passionately, and would have said more only that she shrunk from him trembling.

As she turned away, bashful, yet so glad, so rapturously glad to know he loved her still, she encountered the stony gaze of Jacob Lynn. He was hidden behind some trees close by, and must have heard what they had said. A sudden fear assailed her lest, in his jealously, he should come forward and do some desperate deed that would ruin him forever. Even if the Colonel knew of his presence there it might be serious for him.

Colonel Prinsep then led her back to the ball-room in grave silence, angry with himself that he had kept true to what with her had evidently been only an evanescent feeling, yet unable to steel his heart against her.

Barry Larron sauntered up to them as they stood together in the ball-room.

"They are waiting for you, Colonel, to lead the way in to supper. Miss Knox, I think you promised to go with me."

Startled at his voice Jane withdrew her face from the grateful coolness of the flowers and wondered why, as she did so, he looked at her so strangely.

Colonel Prinsep bowed and left her. Then Major Larron spoke his thoughts.

"You cannot think how it has pleased me that you have deigned to wear my flowers," he said.

"Your flowers! Was it you who sent them?"

"Who else? I hope you did not choose them under a false impression."

"I—oh, no! I never thought——"

Disregarding her confusion, as he had disregarded the quick movement which she had made to cast the flowers from her when he claimed to be the sender, Barry Larron had remained silent. When he spoke again it was as though impelled by a feeling stronger than his judgment.

"Miss Knox, I wish I were your brother, or some one that you could trust to advise you well."

"Do you think that I am in need of advice?"

"I do. Will you promise not to be offended if I speak?"

"Yes, I will promise, though I cannot guess what it can be that you are going to say."

The ball-room was deserted now, and they stood alone in the center of it, Jane with her hand lifted proudly, as though defying him to say anything that could affect her, and holding her bouquet as far away from her as possible. The flowers that had delighted her had become hateful in her eyes now that she knew the giver, and had actually caressed them in his sight.

Major Larron looked down at her sadly.

"I wonder whether it is worth while to risk the loss of your friendship for the sake of the problematical good that I might do if I spoke; I wonder if it is even worth while to do a disinterested act of kindness?"

"Tell me, and let me decide."

"I will, since you wish it. Do you know what has been the general talk since you entered the room? You do not—of course not. You are too young and inexperienced to believe in malice or idle tongues, and I dare say you fancy it is a profound secret only known to your heart that you love the Colonel and wish to win him back."

She turned deathly pale, and was too taken by surprise to attempt a contradiction. Looking up she saw his face averted, and was touched by his delicacy, knowing nothing of the swift glance by which he had assured himself that his shaft had gone home.

"Do not be angry with me that I repeat what every one else has said. I thought it right that you should know, and so be able to put an end to the gossip, which in your purity of mind you could not foresee. You are so proud, I know how it would gall you were it to be said that Colonel Prinsep married you from pity."

"Do you think I would marry any one on such terms?" she cried, indignantly.

"No, I do not; but then every one has not studied your character so carefully as I. I know that you are too noble to allow any mercenary or interested motives to influence your actions, and I know, also, that you could with a word win back Colonel Prinsep to the allegiance he flattered himself that he had thrown off. Don't be offended that I speak so. Consider the circumstances from an outsider's point of view, and you will see that it is natural he should be glad to have escaped what the world would call a mesalliance, notwithstanding your grace and beauty. Before he loved you so entirely—so unthinkingly, that had you married him then, neither he nor you might have had reason to repent; but now he has had reason to weigh the pros and cons, even—for he is very proud—to congratulate himself that something occurred to part you. When he came back to Alipore, it was in the confidence that to meet you was no longer a danger—that he had, in fact, conquered his unwise love. In these circumstances, you would not care to draw him back to you, as you so easily could, against his better judgment."

She was very pale, but the pride which he had rightly surmised that she possessed prevented her from betraying what she suffered.

"Do you think it could be a pleasure to me to see you pained?" he continued. "It is only that I wanted to spare you a keener pang hereafter. I am a man of the world, Miss Knox; but what is the use of my worldly wisdom if I may only use it for my own good, and never for another's? I have overstepped the boundary of conventionalism, I know; but it was for your sake—your sake only."

"Yet I wish you had not spoken."

"I might," he went on, as if the words were being forced from him—"I might have told you of another love less calculating, perhaps because so utterly without hope—a love that only desired to see you happy. But I would not speak of myself; all my thoughts are of you. Only let me watch over you, shield you from the dangers you are too inexperienced to suspect, and I shall be content."

"I am very glad of your friendship, very proud of it," she said, gently.

"Then I am more than repaid," he answered, gravely.

As they went toward the supper-room, they met several persons returning thence, among them Diana Knollys, who was leaning on Colonel Prinsep's arm. She smiled kindly at Jane, who returned the glance, carefully avoiding to look at the same time into her companion's face. If scandal were so easily set afloat, it was scarcely sufficient to show indifference only, she must prove to him that his presence was positively distasteful to her.

"I wonder where Jack Blount is; I have not seen him for some time," said Barry Larron, abruptly, as they passed on.

"I think he has left," faltered Jane, trying to look unconscious, but failing beneath the keen gaze that was directed on her.

"Ah, is that it?" was the softly spoken remark. "Child, how many lovers you have, yet not one worthy to be successful! Or is it that I am too jealous for you? At any rate I am glad that he has failed."

"You are drawing your own conclusions," said Jane, hastily. "I never said anything to make you think that he has gone because of me."

"Do you think that we are all blind? His devotion was too apparent for any mistake—Graeme has lost his money; he thought you would accept him, and betted on it, though he should have known you better now than to suppose that you would be tempted by the advantages of wealth or position."

"Did Mr. Graeme bet about me?" asked Jane, angrily.

"Well, yes; but I ought not to have mentioned it. The fact is, that I have been speaking so freely that I forgot there must be a limit to my frankness. Besides, it has vexed you—I can see it has, and he will never forgive me for my indiscretion if you resent it."

"What would be the good? It seems that people say very much what they like, regardless of any one's feelings; yet I should not have thought that he who always seemed to be my friend would have made me the subject of a bet."

"He is young, and I dare say did not think. You must not take it so, or I shall blame myself more than I already do for my own thoughtlessness in having repented it. And now sit down here while I get you some supper. You are looking quite tired and faint."

Having accomplished what he desired, Major Larron reverted no more to disagreeable subjects; when he chose no one could be more brilliant and entertaining and he exerted himself so successfully now that he won back the color to Jane's pale face and a smile to her lips. She was surprised to find the time had passed so quickly when her father came in search of her, to say that it was late and they were going home.

Major Larron saw her to the carriage, and took the onus upon himself, when Mrs. Knox remonstrated with her daughter on her long absence from her side. Valentine Graeme had also gone to see them off, but Jane was very stiff with him, and pointedly turned to Barry Larron to wrap her shawls about her and help her to her seat in the high dog-cart.

The adjutant looked decidedly crestfallen as they drove away.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

"Love—thirty; love—forty; game and set. It is most discouraging," declared Diana Knollys, giving a vicious hit at the ball remaining in her hand, and sending it high into the air.

"Miss Knox improves every time she plays," said Barry Larron.

"And I grow worse. Jane, you are one of those provoking creatures that do everything better than any one else."

Jane smiled and shook her head.

"That is a misstatement which I shall not be vain enough to contradict; though I might ask, what about painting, drawing, music——"

"Oh, those are mere matters of education!" replied Diana, carelessly.

She had meant no invidious comparison, but Jane, who was unduly sensitive, flushed crimson.

"Let us have another match," said Major Larron, gayly, to cover her embarrassment. "Education and all the accomplishments—which is you, Miss Knollys, and Grey—against skill and natural talent, which modesty forbids me to more than hint is represented by my partner and myself."

Laughing at his sally, Jane forgot that she had been hurt by Miss Knollys' thoughtless remark. It was now nearly a week since the —th Hussars' dance, and each day Major Larron had made himself more necessary to her, making good his claim to her friendship. Though very gentle with her, he never seemed to consider her a subject for pity—which would have galled her more—but always when she needed help, however trivial, she found him ready at her side.

They had played two sets, Jane and Major Larron against Miss Knollys and Colonel Grey.

"Quite a regimental game. I feel an outsider," Miss Knollys had observed.

"You need not be so longer than you like," answered Colonel Grey, impressively.

"You are very persevering," smiled Diana.

"What I want is worth trying hard for," he returned, stolidly, missing a casual ball, which struck him smartly in the face.

They changed courts now, and began the third set.

Jane was only a beginner at the game, but she picked it up very quickly, and like all graceful women, looked well with a tennis bat in her hand.

She was playing better than usual that afternoon, until turning, with hand upraised to catch a ball that was thrown to her, she espied Colonel Prinsep on a seat behind her, watching the progress of the game. After that she scarcely put one over the net, and when Colonel Grey and Miss Knollys scored an easy victory, professed herself tired and would play no more.

Just as they stopped playing, Valentine Graeme drove up in his high cart and called out to Major Larron. The Major obeyed the summons, and Jane was left standing alone until Colonel Prinsep joined her.

"Won't you sit down?" he asked.

"Thank you, I am not tired."

Sometimes Colonel Prinsep lost his temper, as was the case now.

"You mean that you will not admit to me that you are tired."

"I mean that I do not wish to sit down," she returned, composedly, ignoring his innuendo.

Major Larron came back, looking rather glum.

"There's Graeme hurt his foot at cricket—ball hit his ankle. This will stop our theatricals, I am afraid."

"Poor Mr. Graeme—I'm so sorry!" said Jane.

"He wants to talk to you about those same theatricals," went on Barry Larron. "Will you come?"

She went at once, both gentlemen following.

"Does it hurt you very much?" she asked of Valentine Graeme, as he leaned down from the cart to hold the proffered hand.

"Not much, only when I move it; but the doctor says I shall feel it for the next three weeks. What bothers me is our play. I did so want to act with you, and I can't possibly limp about the stage."

"Can you not get some one to take your part?" asked Larron.

"Why won't you?" said Jane, quickly, fearful lest another substitute should offer himself.

"Because it is not at all my style. I should only make you ridiculous and myself. It was just suited to Mr. Graeme, and to him only in the regiment, I should suppose."

"The Colonel was A1 when he rehearsed it with Mrs. Dene last year. Colonel, I wish you——"

The Adjutant stopped short, remembering the reason why his chief could scarcely share the title role of "Sweethearts" with the quartermaster's daughter. For a moment there was an awkward pause.

"I shall be very happy to take the part if Miss Knox has no objection," the Colonel said, maliciously.

"It's a matter of perfect indifference to me with whom I act," replied Jane, coldly.

The Colonel's attempt at retaliation recoiled upon himself. Thinking she would certainly refuse him as a coadjutor, he had proposed to help them out of their difficulty merely to annoy her in return for the many annoyances she had heaped upon him. He was not prepared for her assent, and foreseeing the many awkwardnesses that might ensue, and the trial it would be to himself to play at making love to the woman who was to have been his wife, he tried to retract his words.

The Cautious Man Learned More than He Cared to Know.

It was on a steamboat and the stranger on deck moved about among the passengers with a very evident desire to know who his fellow voyagers were, yet with quite as evident a purpose not to commit himself by giving away incontinently to his curiosity. After some time he found a man sitting off to one side, and with him he entered into conversation.

"There are some very nice looking people aboard," he said, glancing around the deck, "and some not so nice looking. I'd like to know something about some of them, but, being a stranger, I don't like to ask too many questions. A man can't be too cautious, I think, when he is traveling, in making comments on his fellow travelers."

"I've heard about some very embarrassing cases," said the other party.

"So have I, and for that reason I am very much more particular. Still, I'd like to know who some of these people are."

"Who, for instance? I know a few of them, and I guess I'm safe enough to trust."

"Well," said the cautious man, assured by this, "there's a lady over there by the door."

"Which one? That one that is talking fourteen ways for Sunday?"

"She seems to be talking more than the law allows," ventured the cautious man.

"The one that's got a dress on like a three-sheet circus poster, trimmed with rainbows and Easter eggs?"

"Yes," laughed the cautious man.

"Complexion like a tanbark walk?"

"Rather."

"A bonnet that would fade a carpet?"

"Unless it was a warranted carpet; yes."

"Got a jaw on her that would cut a nail in two?"

"Yes."

"Acts like she owned the steamboat?"

"Somewhat dictatorial, I should say."

"Got a voice you could swarm bees on?"

"Sounds that way at a distance," and the cautious man laughed with unction, for he loved to know about people.

The other party got up and took a more critical look at the lady in question.

"Do you know who she is?" asked the cautious man.

"Uh—er," hesitated the other party, "I seem to think I ought to, she's my wife. Come over and let me introduce you. What did you say your name was?" But the cautious man hadn't said and didn't say, and he removed himself with such precipitancy that the other party laughed as though he enjoyed it.

Fire Companies of Women.

Wasso, Sweden, has a feminine fire department. Its duties consist of filling four great tubs which constitute the water supply in cases of fire. They stand in two continuous lines from the tubs to the lake, about three blocks away, one line passing the full buckets and the other sending them back. Whenever the fire alarm sounds they are obliged to come out, no matter what the weather may be, the daughter of the house as well as the serving maid, and often their skirts freeze like bark from the water and the cold. If the men are away they not only carry the water, but bring out the hose and ladders and work the pumps.

PAGANS AND PRAYERS

SOME ODD OBSERVANCES STILL PRACTICED.

Praying by Machinery—Prayer by Water Power—How the Chinese Cheat the Devil—Why the American Indians Placed Their Dead on Poles.

Queer Religious Rites.

With the possible exception of the Bushman, who is believed to be first cousin to the Missing Link, if, indeed, there is not a nearer relationship, all nations have some form of religion and ceremonial observances peculiar to its exercise. Among civilized nations, religious ceremonies are suggestive in character and symbolic in origin, but as we go down in the scale of human nature there are found many peculiarities of religious observance which are strange, incomprehensible, and, not infrequently, in the highest degree absurd. To us, at least, they seem so, the fact arising partly from our inability to comprehend any significance they may have for those who practice them, and partly from the enormous difference between our intelligence and that of the people who use these uncouth rites. But it is exceedingly interesting to notice that even when a religious ceremony, once symbolic and full of meaning, has lost all the significance it formerly possessed, none the less does it continue to be practiced, for the reason that in these things custom is powerful, and the fact that in a heathen nation a religious ceremony is now performed, no matter how meaningless, is sufficient evidence to the minds of the worshipers, not only that there is virtue in it, but that it ought to be perpetuated simply because it came down to them from their ancestors.

AN INDIAN MODE OF BURIAL.

AT THE GATE OF THE CHINESE TEMPLE.

It is probable that to many if not to most of the worshipers in pagan temples the ceremonies performed there have no significance other than that of custom. They are like the Chinese idea of the Fung Shway; that is, the eternal balance of things. When a Chinaman builds a house in one corner of a square lot, a house must also be built in the opposite corner to restore the Fung Shway; when one chimney or tower is erected on a building, there must be another on the opposite side, to preserve the Fung Shway; when a plate of rice is placed on one side of a table, another must be opposite that the Fung Shway be not disturbed. The Celestial does not know why this should be so, but he knows that every other Chinaman has the same idea and that is enough for him and to talk to him about architectural proportions, or to tell him that his notion probably originated in a nice sense of relation, would be to waste your words, for about these things he neither knows nor cares anything; the fact that everybody else believes that the Fung Shway ought not to be disturbed being quite enough for his purpose. He has another idea that, to our minds, seems ludicrously absurd. At the gates of the temples in which he worships there hang bells and when a native of the Celestial Empire wants to say his prayers, or to make offerings to his gods to insure good luck in any enterprise in which he may be engaged, he goes to the parish temple and before entering gives the bell at the gate a tap to let the deity of the place understand that a worshiper is at hand and desirous of attending to business. Nothing, to our minds, could be more exquisitely absurd than this method of signifying to deity a desire to pay reverence, yet to the Chinaman it is fit and proper, and he devoutly believes that unless this preliminary were performed, his prayers and sacrifices would be wasted for the lack of a god to hear and receive them. The idea had its origin in an ancient use, very similar to our own, of bells for notifying worshipers of the proper time for service, but of this fact the Chinaman of the present day knows nothing; he rings the bell because everybody else does, and because as far back as any one can remember, the bell has been rung for this purpose, and that is quite enough.

Speaking of prayer and praying, however, perhaps the most peculiar method ever in vogue in the pagan world is that which is practiced by millions of people in India, Thibet, Chinese Tartary and China at the present day. The Buddhists have many prayers, but of them all none is supposed to have the virtue of one simple sentence, Om mani padmi hum. "The jewel in the Lotus. Amen." These words are constantly on the lips of the devotees of this faith. The laborer at his toil, the merchant in his store, the traveler on the way, all repeat this mystic supplication; not always aloud, but even when mentally engaged, their lips keep up a mechanical motion as the praying goes on, for the belief is universal that the greater the number of times this sentence is repeated the greater the benefit. A few hundred years ago, however, some impatient genius, finding his tongue too slow, conceived the idea that the thing could be done in another way, so he invented a mechanical device to further his devotions. It consisted of a woolen cylinder about 1½ inches in diameter and 2 in height. At the middle of one end a staple was inserted, to which a cord 6 to 10 inches long was fastened, the other end being made fast to a rounded piece of wood of convenient size and shape to be held in the hand. The cylinder was hollow and contained a roll of thin parchment, on which this prayer was written several hundreds of times. The handle was taken and the cylinder was revolved, on the theory that at each revolution all the prayers written on the parchment within it were repeated. The priests instantly perceived the working value of the model and promptly monopolized the manufacture of the prayer cylinders, deriving therefrom no small benefit in the way of revenue. In some parts of India the use of these cylinders is almost universal, nine out of ten of the men met by the way revolving their cylinders as they walk or ride. The idea was soon found capable of extension; for, the priests reasoned, if praying could be done with a small cylinder, why not with a large one. So great cylinders, having a diameter of 5 to 6 feet and a height of 7 to 8, were prepared, loaded with prayers, a crank was fitted up, by which they could be turned, they were set up in the temple, and any one, by the payment of a small fee, was allowed to turn the machine a certain length of time.

The result was a grand success, for the people soon came to learn that by the payment of a fee they would be able to pray more in five minutes than they could hope to do all their lives in any other way, and the incomes of the temples waxed great and the priests grew fat, for wealthy men, well able to pay, but unwilling to work at the wheel, sent their servants to do the turning, looking in occasionally to see that the job was being properly done. The wheels were kept going day and night, and the demand for them became so much greater than the supply that another improvement resulted. A monastery in Thibet was situated beside a mountain stream, and it occurred one day to the priests that it would be a good idea to rig up the prayer wheels with a water-power attachment, let the water do the turning, and credit one who paid money into the treasury with so much time of the wheel. The idea was found to be both brilliant and practical; a water wheel was made, the prayer wheels placed in position over it, the apparatus was set in motion, to the immense satisfaction of everybody concerned. The people were satisfied because they could do their praying with far greater ease, having only to pay and not to work; the priests were content, for all the time of the wheels was fully taken up, and sometimes rich devotees paid in sums so large as to engage the services of the wheels for years at a time. Thus it is that in North India, Thibet and China to-day water wheels are at work day and night, grinding out prayers for the people.

The question of revenue is thus seen to play a very important part in heathen temples, and the wits of the priests of Buddha are often racked to the utmost to provide wherewithal to carry on the business. In some temples of South India the intelligence of the elephant is utilized to raise funds, and on great festivals an elephant, trained to the work, goes to and fro among the worshipers, holding a basket with his trunk and soliciting contributions from the faithful. He gets something from everybody, too, for he has a truculent way of presenting the basket that intimates to the devout that the sooner they disburse the better it will be for them. Some years ago a number of English and American clergymen were visiting a temple in Benares, when the elephant deacon was making his rounds, and he stopped before them holding out the basket with a significant grunt.

They were loath to give anything, but at the request of the guide, who warned them that the beast might be troublesome, every one got out his pocket-book. It was the only time in their lives that any of them ever contributed to the revenues of a heathen temple, but then an elephant collector has not the urbanity of a church deacon, and his trunk has a persuasive flourish about it that will draw rupees from the most reluctant.

DEATH ON THE GANGES.

Some of the most singular customs of paganism relate to death and burial. In Africa, even at the present day, human sacrifices are commonly practiced by some tribes of the interior. Save on rare occasions, they do not sacrifice their own people, but captives taken in war, and wars are frequently waged, not so much for conquest as to obtain victims for sacrifice. Volumes have been written about the human sacrifices of Dahomey, and though this nation is perhaps the worst in this respect, there are others where this form of worship is extensively carried on. Very frequently, the bodies of the victims are eaten, but in many cases, the unfortunate wretches are butchered, simply that their blood may be offered to the hideous images that stand in the temple inclosures. In India, the pagan native deems himself peculiarly happy if he can die on or near the sacred river. Before the days of British control, the dying were carried by their friends to the banks of the river and laid in the water. Frequently they were taken out in boats to the middle of the river, and then thrown over to drown. These practices were in great measure stopped by British authority, but in secluded places they are said to be still carried on, though to a necessarily limited extent. Burning the dead in India has never been interfered with by the Government, though the suttee, or burning widows, on the funeral pyres of their husbands, was long ago abolished by the interposition of law.

Perhaps the most peculiar burial rites are those of the Chinese, who, in their funerals, are as odd as in most of their other customs. A Chinese funeral is managed strictly with a view to cheating the devil, who is understood to lie in wait near the residence of the defunct Celestial for the purpose of carrying off his soul. Just before the departure of the funeral cortege from the house a considerable quantity of firecrackers is set off in front of the residence, together with a peculiar variety of smoky pyrotechnics, and under cover of the smoke thus made the bier is raised and the carriers leave the house in a smart trot. They go up the street a short distance, then suddenly turn into a cross street or alley and stop and yell, more fireworks are burned, and after a pause of a few moments the funeral march, or rather trot, is resumed. Running, turning short, and halting, together with fireworks and yelling, finally bring the cortege to the place of burial, but the cemetery is never entered through the gate, but through a gap in the hedge or fence or hole in the wall, and, after more fireworks and yelling, the body is finally interred. The cause of this singular procedure is this. It is well understood that the devil, although in some respects shrewd, cannot see very well, nor can he turn without a great deal of difficulty, his joints and muscles being so arranged that while he can travel like a race horse as long as he goes in a straight line, a good deal of time and effort is necessary when he wants to turn a corner. So the fireworks are let off at the house in order to blind him, and when the smoke is sufficiently dense to obfuscate his vision the procession starts, leaving him watching at the door. Of course, in a little while he discovers how he has been tricked and starts after it on a run, but when the first corner is turned he is unable to stop, and so shoots on ahead. The same bad luck attends him for several turns, and after repeated experiences of this kind he gives up the hunt in disgust, goes on to the cemetery and sits down at the gate to await his prey. Right here the Celestials are too smart for him, and, by avoiding the gate, always manage to have the burial over before he finds out what is going on. It may seem strange that the Old Boy does not learn better, and, considering the fact that several millions of the almond-eyed are annually spirited out of his reach by the same means, it really seems that he ought to be aware of the means adopted to deceive him, but, as Chinese proverbial lore expresses it, "the devil never learns by experience," which is a full explanation of the whole situation. The same contempt of the devil's stupidity is seen in a peculiar burial custom among some of our aboriginal tribes of Indians, who formerly elevated the bodies of their dead on poles from a belief that the eyes of the evil one were so placed in his head that he looked always downward, and, of course, the bodies being above him, he might pass under and never see them. In all heathen mythological lore, though many peculiar superstitions are found, the origin of which is lost in antiquity, there is perhaps nothing more curious than these methods by which Chinese and the American Indians cheat the enemy of mankind.

PRAYER WHEELS IN THIBET.

A Sol Smith Russell Story.

Sol Smith Russell relates some funny experiences with ambitious amateurs. While he was playing in Chicago Harry Hamlin, the manager of the theater at which he appeared, begged him as a personal favor to give one of his feminine friends a chance. Mr. Russell assented to this and gave her an opportunity to interpret a role for nothing. She was very bad in the part, but the climax came when Mr. Russell had to utter a soliloquy before an open window. To his surprise the young woman made her appearance through this window instead of through the door, thus ruining the scene. She never played again. Next night Mr. Russell, still amiable, tried another one of Mr. Hamlin's friends. All went well until she had to exclaim: "Oh, I have lost my husband's love." Perhaps it was stage fright, perhaps a lapsus linguae, but at any rate, she remarked, in tear-drenched tones: "Ah, I have lost my husband's gloves." That broke Mr. Russell up. He was the husband, and his gloves, as a rule, with their finger holes and general dilapidation, are the joys and amusement of the profession.

A Lesson Misapplied.

It seems strange that a child's mind should be infallibly attracted to the naughty rather than to the nice. A year or so ago I took Ethel and her old to see the play of "Little Lord Fauntleroy." I rashly fancied that the example of the little hero's gentleness and goodness would have a fine effect upon my little relatives. The day after the performance I overheard Ethel and Harold say "Bully for you," and "Cheese it, Cully," with an alarming ease and frequency. "Where did you hear such expressions?" I cried, only to receive the answer, "Why, at 'Little Lord Fauntleroy.' Don't you remember? Dick, the bootblack, talked like that."

THE AUBURN COURIER.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana office as second-class matter.

1856--1896.

We publish to-day, a very interesting poem, that will read as history to many of our people both in Auburn and the county. We intended to have put it into the COURIER of January 2, but over looked it. It is the "Carrier's address" of the then "devil" on the old "Democratic Messenger" of 1856, forty years ago. The "devil" was Charles K Baxter, then learning his trade, who for many years after was editor and publisher of the Waterloo Press, but now a prosperous farmer in Kansas. And how many familiar names our older citizens will see. We are enabled to publish this by the kindness of ex Commissioner, G. I. Patterson, who was taking the paper at that time just as he has taken the democratic organ ever since. He put it into his scrap book which has saved it for our readers. We hope they will enjoy it, and no doubt many will cut it out and save it.

Selling Bonds.

The President's Critics Are Asked To Devise Any Other Plan.

Democrats as well as republicans have been criticising President Cleveland for issuing bonds. Seriously, now gentlemen, as business men, what would you have done had you been in the President's place? As president of these United States, you had sworn, not only to obey the laws, but to see that they are obeyed by others. One of these laws, a very foolish one, some say, is to the effect that 100 millions in gold must be kept in the treasury, to redeem greenbacks and similar gold bearing paper. Now, when you find this gold getting below the 100 millions, the law compels you to get in enough more gold to bring it up to that figure again. But there is another law, said to be a very foolish one, that cuts off the government's former supply of gold. Formerly the government got an abundance of gold from import duties, all of which had to be paid in gold. But several years ago, the law was changed so that import duties could be paid in other money, and so the government's source of gold stopped. And this leaves it, with no gold coming in. Now, how will the government get gold to keep up this 100 million reserve, as required by a plain law, and at the same time to redeem greenbacks and similar paper which keeps coming in, and which is by law payable in gold. The President and his secretary of the treasury must get this gold from some source, for both these purposes. They have been selling bonds as permitted by law, to do in such cases, and those who buy the bonds, bring in gold to pay for them. In this way the government keeps up its stock of gold but at a great expense. Will these critics tell how they would do this if they were president? Don't all speak at once.

There are some people who are never positive in anything. It is always, "I don't know," or "I guess so." There is a world of such people, and it is refreshing sometimes to hear a person speak as one having convictions, like Mr. Chas. F. Snyder, of Bangor, Pa., who wrote; "I can heartily recommend Simmons Liver Regulator to all who are troubled with Dyspepsia or Liver Complaint."

Corncob Syrup.

All of us have heard of the glucose syrups, etc, some of which were at one time made mainly by treating sawdust with the proper chemicals. But now comes a special in a Chicago Daily, that is still more strange, and proves that there is no limit to the possibilities of modern chemistry. The item says:

The farmers of West st C. Iowa are finding a good thing in the manufacture of syrup from corncobs. The experiment is said to have been tried first by an Illinois man, who recently settled in the locality, and proved so successful that it has been taken up on a large scale and promises to become an important industry. The cobs are broken into small pieces, placed in a huge pot, covered with water and boiled until the juice is entirely removed. Sugar in small quantities is then added and a superior article of syrup is produced, which, when properly flavored, can hardly be told from maple syrup.

Melting Iron By Electricity

Mr. Gustaf De Laval, the inventor of the rotary steam engine which bears his name, is reported to have discovered method of smelting iron directly from its ores by the aid of the electric current. Large iron works have been purchased in the North Sweden iron district, with immense water privileges, and vast deposits of peat to be used as fuel. Should the process prove commercially practicable, as promised, its influence on the iron industry can hardly be overestimated.—Electrical Engineer.

Geo. Ralston is now assisting in the Auditor's office. George can turn his hand to anything.

CORRESPONDENCE

CORUNNA.

Beware, lest you break those good resolutions made on New Year's day.

H. R. Rice of Ft. Wayne was the guest of John Grate during the holidays.

Rev. George preached an excellent sermon last Sunday at 10:30 a. m., and Rev. Frank Minnick delivered an eloquent discourse at the Christian church at night.

Ervin Wigent still continues very poorly. They do not entertain much hopes of his recovery.

The township teachers institute was held in Corunna last Saturday with a full attendance of teachers and we understand that it was very interesting.

Quite a number of the young people had an enjoyable time at Billy Leins on New Years evening. They watched the old year out and the new year in.

Doug Wallace and family visited in Waterloo last week.

Mrs. Peter Moody is in Lagrange with her brother, Ed Barnes, who is not expected to live, being severely injured by a falling limb.

Miss Della Orr, who has been staying at Air Line Junction Ohio, for the past two or three months, returned home on Monday.

It would require the combined skill of about seven Philadelphia lawyers to tell how cold it was in Corunna last Saturday morning. The thermometers varied all the way from twenty degrees below zero to twenty degrees above zero, and yet each one claims that his weather machine is absolutely correct.

Corunna can now boast of an orchestra. They gave a concert at the U. B. church last Saturday night which was hard to beat.

BUTLER.

Many of our people visited other places and people during the holiday.

The Butler Co. is running a large force and turns out machine by the car load.

Death made many calls in Butler during the first week in January.

Mrs. Hannah Dickerhoof of Garrett and daughter Mrs. Isaac Hollinger visited over Sunday with J. A. Campbell.

Mrs. Edward Ringberg died last Friday after a lingering illness of many months with that fell destroyer—consumption. She leaves a husband and two children. Her funeral took place from the Lutheran church last Sabbath, Rev. Dustman officiating, assisted by a German minister from Edgerton, Ohio. Mr. R. and children have the sympathy of all our people.

Mrs. J. A. Campbell was quite sick last Saturday, but is better at this writing.

Wolf & Stiefel, the coming dry goods men will make material changes in their present quarters, and when made will have one of the largest store rooms in town.

J. A. Campbell visited Garrett and Auburn on New Years day.

The aged mother of Geo. and Chas. Coffin died very suddenly last Friday night. She leaves three sons and two daughters. She came to Butler about 25 years ago from Canada.

Chas. F. Pinchin died at his home on Green street last Tuesday after an illness of many weeks. His funeral took place from the M. E. church last Saturday and owing to the extreme cold weather was not largely attended. He was born in Ticonderoga, N. Y., Dec. 12, 1820. Was married to Pamelia S. Bartram at that place in 1857. Removed to Ind., in 1879. He was the last of the family and leaves his aged wife and one son.

Frank Blattner was in town a few hours to-day and met a warm greeting from his friends, of whom he has great numbers here. He had been a week or two visiting his people in Toledo. He went up to Waterloo at noon, and from there takes a westward train to his home at Tacoma, Wash. He is looking the picture of good health, and says business to the loval line is good, and what is better the wife and baby are well.

Eugene Wyatt of Jackson township called on us to-day and advanced his subscription two years. We are always thankful for these contributors.

It is said that R. Sawyel, S. S. Shutt of Spencerville, D. H. Knisely, of Butler and a Mr. Brept have purchased of H. N. Coffinberry $10 000 worth of stock in the Garrett Banking company. Mr. Coffinberry still holds a controlling interest.

Wanamaker's Five Reasons

John Wanamaker, in an address delivered at the banquet at the National Association of Life Underwriters in Philadelphia, gave utterance to a number of very clever things, but not the least so were his five reasons for insuring his life. He said: Soon after I came into business such was my interest in life insurance and belief in its wisdom that one of the first reckless things I did was to make a Christmas present of a $1,000 policy paid for a year to every man in my employ. I thought that was a good investment. I have been so often asked about my own insurance that I am going to gratify a curiosity that some of you have expressed, perhaps, in regard to it. I had no thought whatever of becoming the largest life insurer in the world, if that is true, as has sometimes been said of me. I never started out to do any large thing, but I have been a great hand to work hard at everything I took hold of. I do not own a share in nor have I official connection with any insurance company in the world. I did not know until after it had been done that the amount was larger than any other. There is not any man that I would not willingly see have a larger line, and I will promptly yield the place to any of you or your friends. It was the influence of the man who thought about it, and I was the man. I simply worked out five conclusions, as the result of my own thinking, without any moving cause, except my own judgment.

1. That at the time I knew I was insurable and I could not be certain of accident or of ill-health, and it might be that at some future time I would not be insurable. That was the first step to the building of sixty-two policies.

2. That life insurance was one of the best forms of investment, because from the moment it was made it was good for all it cost and carried with it a guarantee that there was a protection in that investment that I could not get in any other way.

3. That life insurance in the long run was a saving fund, that not only saved but took average care of my deposits and took me in partnership into possible profits, that not infrequently returned principal, interest, and profit.

4. That life insurance regarded from the standpoint of quick determination was more profitable than any other investment I could make.

5. That it enabled a man to give away all he wished during life time and still make such an estate as he cared to leave.

The above from the Chicago Sunday Tribune, is a good article on Life Insurance. We have many companies represented in Auburn and among the best we know of is the National Life Insurance Co of Montpelier, Vt, represented by Herb D. Weaver. Get his plan, Office over Hebel Bros store.

Second Meeting.

The Auburn Improvement Association held their second meeting last evening in the office of Baxter & Brown. The president, Judge McClellan, was in the chair, and there was a majority of the directors present. These were, Baxter Boland, Bishop, Eckhart, Wilson and Will Schaab. Discussions were had over some propositions that had been under consideration and the secretary was instructed as to what replies to give them in continuing the correspondence. Mr. Wilson was given additional scope in the matter of getting subscriptions of stock, and other appropriate business was done. The Auburn Improvement Association is a living, working body composed of our best business men. We shall feel sorry if any of our citizens keep back from assisting them in making their work count for Auburn's benefit.

25 Percent Clean Gold — Saved on every dollar's worth of Clothing and Furnishing at G. H. Yesbera's mammoth Clothing Establishment, for the month of January,

From Saturday, Jan. 11 to Feb. 1.

We want to move $20,000 worth of stock this month. That will mean a $5,000 saving to the consumers of wearing apparel.

ONE-FOURTH OFF FOR JANUARY.

We greatly overestimated the probable demand for clothing in connection with the early continued warm weather, leaving us with a large stock on hand that we move even at a financial loss. We place in this sale every thing in read made clothing, overcoats and gents' furnishings. Nothing reserved. Everything marked in plain figures so you figure off one fourth yourself. Our former 1/4 off sale has made us conceited enough to confidently predict that this sale will eclipse anything we have ever before attempted. You need not have the remotest case for anxiety regarding price, for we conduct a strictly bon fide sale. Not a price mark has been changed for this occasion, and come and examine our stock and be convinced that there is a gold mine here for you. This sale is for cash and must be strictly cash.

1856 CARRIER'S ADDRESS

To the Patrons of The DEMOCRATIC MESSENGER

JANUARY 1, 1856.

Happy to see you all alive,
Now at the close of Fifty-five;
And in a comfortable fix,
To start afresh with Fifty-six;
The CARRIER—as in former times,
For love of you—and of the dimes,
Would fain his happiness express
In fitting terms in an address.
But, sad to tell, our stock of rhymes,
Is scarcely plentier than our dimes;
But while we try, in slip-shod verse,
Some past years' events to rehearse,
Should your attention fail or flag,
Draw forth your well fill'd money bag,
And take from thence a dime or quarter,
[Or more if conscience says you oughter]
And, full in my delightful view,
Just keep it, till my speech is through;
Then if you're tired (though I'll be brief)
I'll take it just for your relief.
First then—throughout the year that's gone,
Our town has been a favored one,
While Indiana has been shaking,
Till even the very frogs seemed quaking
And clattering teeth, and smiting knees,
Were heard in almost every breeze,
Though countless blue lif'd agues,
Might justly have been sent to plague us;
And with their long, cold fingers seize us
And rack, and twist, jerk and freeze us,
Till humbled in the sight of Heaven,
We bowed and prayed to be forgiven.
We felt the general scourge but slightly,
The rod has fallen on us lightly,
More lightly far than we're deserving,
So often found from duty swerving,
For gratitude we all have reason,
In the rich crops of the past season,
The farmer's ample barn is fill'd,
And town folks get it ready mill'd,
At prices pleasing to the vendor,
Whose conscience is not over-slender.
While Mars', red banner's wide unfurl'd,
Were waving o'er the Eastern World,
And thousands have been doomed to fall
In death around Sebastopol;
With peace our country has been blest,
Save that of late in the far West,
"Fire-eaters" of the great "Missouri,"
Roused by Stringfellow to a fury,
With pistol—gun—sword—bowie-knife,
Have waged with Kansas boys a deadly strife.
Sought to prevent the hardy, honest squatter,
From playing sovereign as he ought to,
But ah! old Wilson Shannon's thunder,
Will keep the bloody rascals under.
But here at home, in peace we've lived,
And industry and trade have thrived;
Our railroad's there—and no mistake,
The company have "stuck their stake."
Sam Sanders still has his "free show"
And Wolf is selling goods with "Joe;"
Keller and Willard—Kline and M'Bride,
In showing goods take honest pride;
Weaver, and Park, and Bowers still,
Are selling too with right good will.
Ralston and Cross, at Coe's old station,
In trade would like to beat the nation;
Rickel and Brant are proving whether,
The world wants boots and shoes and leather,
And Davis tries through thick and thin,
To furnish it with stoves and tin;
And Widney, though with sober looks,
Takes great pride in selling books.
Ben Ettinger and Henry Ford are striving
At saddlery to beat each other thriving.
Groves, Johnson and Ettingers at furniture
Are master workmen; that is very sure;
Making good clocks and watches Reyer sits,
While Downs, the tailor, gives the people "fits."
Dickinson, Morris, Mott, Blake, Brinkerhoff
Of legal "cuteness" still are giving proof;
Chamberlain, Keeslar, Ford and Kimsey still,
Deal out the quinine, ipecac and pill;
Of taxes, Fosdick takes the full amount,
While "Old Boss" Pierce now audits the account;
Squire Griswold records every body's deeds,
And Sprott notes down how justice still proceeds;
Our clergy—every one of them forsooth,
Are noted for teaching the plain truth,
While I, the CARRIER—a friend to all,
Still at your doors have made my stated call
To bring the latest news fresh from the mint
So now, as I am good to take a hint;
I'll take that sixpence, shilling dime or quarter,
If you insist upon it that I ought to;
A happy new year, may your path grow brighter,
With peace and plenty, your purse ne'er grow lighter.

Good Bye.

Also $1 for one dog, $2 for each female dog and $2 for each additional dog.

The Road and Special Road Tax are included in the first installment. The Poll and Dog Tax are included in the first installment.

Taxes of 1895 are due the first day of January, 1896, and may be paid in full or in two installments. The first installment must be paid on or before the third Monday in April, 1896, the second installment on or before the first Monday in November, 1896. If the first installment is not paid when due both installments become delinquent. Ten per cent will be added and I shall at once proceed, as the law requires, to collect the same, together with the costs that may accrue, by distress and sale of personal property.

The Treasurer will not be responsible for the penalty and charges on delinquent taxes resulting from any omission of the person paying, to state definitely on what property, in which name and in what township or corporation it was assessed.

Persons owing delinquent taxes should pay them at once. The law is of such a character that there is no option left to the Treasurer but to enforce the collection of the delinquent taxes, however much he may regret to collect the same by sale of property.

"The owner of property on the first day of April each year shall be liable for the taxes of that year. The purchaser of property on the first day of April shall be considered the owner in that data."

Examine your receipts before leaving the office and see that all your property is included.

No county order will be paid to any person owing delinquent taxes.

The annual sale of lands and lots for delinquent taxes will occur on the second Monday in February, 1896.

Come early and avoid the rush of the last few days. We have 6,000 receipts to make, and all can not be made in the last few days.

The books will positively be closed on the evening of the third Monday in April and no one will be allowed to pay after that date without penalty.

Parties sending by others or by letter, to pay taxes should not fail to send description of their land and lots.

No receipt will be made out for any party until they are ready to pay.

Assignees, guardians, administrators and others who pay taxes on property in in trust, and persons whose taxes are complicated, such as in individual estates, etc., are earnestly requested to settle such taxes before the last few days, as it takes considerable time to make the divisions and separate receipts therefor. As the Treasurer can not know the location of each person's property, tax-payer should designate the property on which they wish to pay taxes, and see that all property is specified in their receipts. If they have land in more than one township or town, or desire to pay taxes on lands not in their name, call the Treasurer's attention to the matter.

Our readers will remember the horrible disaster at Bristol, Ind. on July 4th, when the bridge gave away and many people were injured. Many were preparing to bring suit against the county for damages, but are now anxious to settle. A recent decision of the supreme court relieves the counties from all liability in such cases. The board of county commissioners first agreed to pay all claims for medical and surgical attention and the proposition was accepted by a number but was refused by others. Now the county is relieved from even this expense.

Wm. Carr was up in Central Michigan a week or so ago, near Lansing where he has some property. He says he believes his piece of land is about the only one near there that does not have a mortgage on it. He could hardly go in good society there as all the "elite" had mortgages to care for and to secure them entrance into the regulation society up there.

A visit to Mr. Husselman to-day found him resting very well, though in some pain. Yesterday there was little or no pain, but it is hoped the unfavorable symptoms are only temporary, and that he will continue to improve. His left side was paralyzed, but seems to be recovering the use of his limbs some. He can now move his leg, but not his arm.

And now the first good joke we have heard of this year occurred last night. A young school teacher from near Garrett came over to Auburn to take his best girl to the entertainment at the opera house. After calling on the young lady he was utterly surprised to learn that she was married. To treat the young man as mild as possible, arrangements were made with another of Auburn's popular ladies to accompany the gentleman to the opera house.

Gen Fred Knefler of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument commission at Indianapolis has thanks for tickets to admit one to climb the big structure, or rather to go up in the elevator. There was a lively, but brief runaway town Saturday evening. Two ladies were coming west along the north side the public square driving a light sleigh, when the horse started to run. In turning south onto Main street they were both thrown out, but the one who was driving held to the lines and was dragged as far as the town pump when some men and boys who had seen the trouble, got to the horse and stopped it. The ladies got in again and went off south giving the horse the whip to pay him for his meanness. Neither was hurt and did not seem greatly frightened by their mishap. They were from Garrett.

Spitting Blood.

S. F. Fritz, of 677 Sedgwick street, Chicago, says: "I had a severe cough which settled on my lungs. I tried a number of advertised remedies and also placed myself under treatment of several physicians, with no benefit. I was recommended to try Foley's Honey and Tar. While little expectation of getting relief, I purchased a bottle. I had taken but few doses when I felt greatly improved; I was enabled to sleep, spitting of blood ceased, and by the time I had taken the second bottle I was entirely well. It saved my life." Robbins & McCord.

INTELLIGENT PEOPLE.

And people of good taste are earnestly recommended to try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for disorders of the stomach. Constipation and indigestion cured. A trial of this great remedy can be made for 10c (10 doses 10c) also in 50c and $1 sizes, at F. E. Davenport.

A Battle Scarred Veteran.

Nearly everyone in Medina Co. Ohio, knows Stephen Rolph, of River Styx, the one legged veteran, who lost his leg at Winchester, Va., March 23, '62. In all probability the exposure and privations of army service, the effects of which are felt as they grow older by nearly all old soldiers, were the cause of the serious nervous prostration and sleeplessness of which Comrade Rolph complained. He says.

"People hereabout know me pretty well, but you can tell others that I was down for about six months with nervous prostration and sleeplessness for which I tried various doctors and medicines, but Dr. Wheeler's Nerve vitalizer has done me more good than all the doctoring I had done. The first bottle gave me such great relief that I have used several and feel almost restored to my former good health."

Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer can be relied upon by any who are suffering from nervous troubles, sleeplessness, etc. If all tired out and run down, you need a reliable nerve and system tonic and health restorer as this remedy is. The sale of Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad cannot be regarded as a mortgage foreclosure, strictly speaking. It is in reality the substitution of new securities for old ones, without any change of ownership. The par value of the old securities is $334,000,000 and the market value $125,000,000, and they are to be exchanged for a larger amount of new stocks and bonds which are expected to be worth more on account of the improved condition of the property under the reorganization.

Some one having written disparagingly of the commerce of the Western rivers, a Pittsburg paper says the loaded barges now in that port waiting for higher water are equivalent to 1,445 railway trains of thirty cars each, and that during the coming season 1,300 steamers of a thousand tons capacity each will leave that city for Southern and Western ports. Furthermore, it is stated that the delivery of heavy freights by steamer is much quicker along the rivers than by the all-rail routes. Unless the signs fail, one of the booms of the next century will be in American waterways.

From some English papers and from some timid souls in the East the public hears horrifying rumors of England's ability in case of war to sail down the St. Lawrence and the chain of lakes and "lay waste the city of Chicago." Gunboats and ships of war, it is said, could assemble off the Van Buren street pier and shell the town. Cruisers would enter the Chicago harbor and hammer the city hall and the postoffice with bombs and shot. For some mysterious reason the British press and the timid persons fail to speculate as to what the United States would be doing all this time. What would be happening on the American side while British keels were plowing the waters of the St. Lawrence and the straits of Mackinaw?

Miss Clara Barton, the organizer of the Red Cross Society, though now over 70 years old, proposes to go to Constantinople and thence into Armenia with a trained corps of assistants as soon as she is guaranteed a sum sufficient to begin her noble work among the suffering victims of the Turkish butchers. At present the society has $30,000 of surplus funds with which to prosecute its work, but this is a bagatelle in comparison with the money which will be needed to relieve the wants of half a million people. As this country cannot actively interpose to stop the inhuman butchery now going on with the sufferance of the great powers, owing to their mutual jealousies, the least it can do is to supply the funds to enable this noble and courageous Christian woman to relieve the sufferings of the Armenian martyrs. She ought to go full-handed.

The new woman is getting dangerous, if we may believe a paragraph in a New York paper. Young Mr. Drexel was visiting recently, and was walking home in New York City about eleven o'clock. Mr. Drexel is extremely good-looking, but he is so modest in his deportment that he thought he would not be molested. But four girls stood on a corner, and as he passed, one of them said: "Ain't he pretty?" Mr. Drexel turned and ran, but the four girls followed him, embraced him, and deliberately kissed him. He screamed for assistance, and Patrolman Farley came to his aid and arrested the four girls. The next day in court, when the judge interrogated the officer as to their offense, Patrolman Farley described it, and added: "They're what are called new women, your honor." The judge fined the new women two dollars apiece. Mr. Drexel doubtless will not be molested by the same women, but with his fatal gift of beauty he is liable to be in danger all the time. As to new women generally, we think they will be inclined to resent Policeman Farley's classification.

The recent death of Redfern, the lady's tailor, accentuates the fact that the two most prominent names in the gowning of women are men's names—Redfern and Worth. It is the contention of the modern woman that the reason women have not equaled men in the various avocations of life is because they have not been given a fair field. Men have replied that in the domain of cookery women have had control for centuries, but that all great cooks have been men. To this may be added the still more convincing fact that the field of devising fashions and costumes for women should belong exclusively to women, if anything calling does. Yet in the last quarter of a century it is admitted that no two names have reached such a pitch of pre-eminence in the confection of woman's costumes as the names of Redfern and Worth.

The page of the yearly history of the nation which is devoted to statistics of crime is always a depressing one to read. No doubt we are moving toward a higher and purer civilization, but the progress is slow and not always perceptible. In the year 1894 there were reported as having taken place in the United States 9,800 murders. There were only 132 executions of murderers a significant and surprising discrepancy; 190 lynchings, a small decrease from the preceding year, but still a much larger number than that of legal executions; nearly 5,000 suicides; and embezzlements and defalcations to the enormous amount of $25,000,000. With the exception of lynchings, there was a noticeable increase in the number of crimes committed in 1894 as compared with former years. This is attributed, at least as regards peculation and suicide, to the fact that the year was one of great financial depression and consequent personal hardship and distress. Idleness and poverty on a large scale mean increased temptation and lawbreaking. It is said that in New York State alone there is a "well-organized, well-equipped and well-officered" army of eighty thousand criminals. The prisons of the United States hold over three hundred thousand convicts. To support them costs more than the country's annual yield of gold and silver. Crime is costly—in money, lives and waste of possibilities. To prevent it by right education, moral and religious, and watchful care is even more necessary than to punish it.

TO CLEAN CARPETS.

A Preparation that Is Said to Be Excellent.

A clean barrel that will hold twelve gallons is required. Put into the barrel three gallons of lukewarm water (soft water is best), then add half a pint of ammonia. Take an iron kettle, and put in three pints of water and six ounces of soap bark, which you will find at a druggist's; boil twenty minutes, then strain into the barrel. Shave very thin, five bars of good soap, and put in a boiler with one gallon of water, and boil until soap is all dissolved, then add one pound of pulverized borax and boil ten minutes, stirring all the time, then pour it into the boiler, and add eight gallons of soft water, stir well and let it stand until cool and it is then ready for use. Brussels carpet can be cleaned nicely with this soap, also ingrain carpets which are soiled, if they have no dust under them. Take two pails of water, with a brush put on a little of this soap, and scrub with warm water, one breadth, not over one yard in length at one time, then with another brush and the clean water, scrub it over to rinse it, then proceed with the rest until you have cleaned the whole. It should be done on a sunny day, unless you have heat in the room.

An excellent scheme for cleaning ingrain carpets and art squares is to shake the carpets free from dust, then spread them on the bare floor, make a good suds with this soap, and with a stiff brush scrub the carpet, one breadth at a time; after you have cleaned a place have a pail of clean water and scrub it well to get the suds out. This takes out grease and dirt. It is equally good for cleaning children's and men's clothing. Lay the garment on a clean board and scrub with a small brush, which you can purchase for a dime, then rinse.

Where Flowers Do Not Live.

There must be a wide difference in the geological formation as well as in the climate of the regions surrounding the two poles of the globe—that is, providing the flora of a country is an index to its climatic or geological conditions. Explorers who have had charge of the botanical work in both the arctic and antarctic circles have recently met and compared notes, and from these comparisons we deduce the following curious information: Within the artarctic circle there has never been found a single species of flowering plant. In the arctic circle 762 different species of flowing plants have been collected and classified. Fifty of the above numbers are flowers of varied hue and of different degrees of odoriferousness; the remaining 712 are pale or entirely colorless, and with no perceptible perfume whatever. These latter are what the botanists term "types of true polar flowers."

Who Got the Money.

In speaking of the Keeley motor, "Megargee," in the Philadelphia Times, says: "What has become of all the money? That is a mighty difficult question to answer. Keely himself is a rough, rude, crude man, whose personal habits are not expensive. There can be no doubt, however, that vast sums have been expended in useless machinery, devices and tools. One piece of mechanism, which cost $40,000, was paid for and immediately rejected by the inventor because he claimed there was a flaw in it. He thinks nothing of spending $20,000 for a piece of machinery, and a few weeks afterward throwing it aside as useless. In that queer-looking workshop of his in Twentieth street, above Master, he certainly does perform the most marvelous things, but how he does it no one but himself knows. I doubt if any one ever will."

A Nation of Coffee Drinkers.

The Americans are a coffee-drinking people. The last fiscal year the value of coffee imported into the United States exceeded the value of any other single article, amounting to a total of $96,130,717. Ordinarily sugar stands at the head of the list of imports, but the excessive importations of sugar in 1894 in anticipation of the tax imposed by the tariff cut importations down from $128,898,882 in 1894 to $77,788,727 in 1895. During the current fiscal year a large increase in the revenue may be anticipated from increased receipts from sugar duties.

Unity seems to be true to anybody.

NEWS OF CONGRESS.

VISIT TO THE PRESS GALLERIES IN BOTH HOUSES.

How the Doings of the National Legislature Is Obtained for Newspaper Publication—Regulations Governing Admissions to the Galleries.

Quarters for Newspaper Men.

WHEN Congress is in session two of the busiest spots under the great white dome are the House and Senate press galleries. These galleries and adjoining rooms are the places provided for the use and convenience of the members of the corps of Washington correspondents in transacting their daily business at the Capitol. The only portions of the galleries visible to the public are the benches and desks set aside for the occupancy of the newspaper men, and in the House and Senate are located directly over the chair of the presiding officer. Back of these reservations are rooms to which the public does not have access.

In the House wing the newspaper men's quarters consist of three large rooms on the gallery floor, extending two-thirds of the length of the chamber of the House. The room nearest the elevator is occupied by telegraph operators, and the merry click of the instruments makes a lively din all day. The largest room of the suite is the general workshop of the men. A long table runs down the center, equipped with writing materials and flanking another telegraph office in the corner. The walls of this apartment are lined with paintings and crayons of distinguished newspaper men of the United States, the floor is comfortably carpeted, leather chairs and sofas invite the weary, and, with a crackling wood fire burning in the open fireplace, the room has a cheery and hospitable air. Little is heard in this place except the clatter of the telegraph instruments or the industrious scratch of pens on paper. Adjoining this chamber and separated by swinging doors, is the coat room, or, as it is sometimes called, "the gossip shop." There are racks and hooks for the topcoats and hats of the men and a number of chairs before an open fire. When there is a temporary lull in the proceedings, such as a roll call on an important question, this is a convenient retreat; but as a rule the correspondents are too busy to linger long, the legislative day for the gathering of news being short enough at best.

THE HOUSE PRESS GALLERY.

The press rooms in the Senate wing are similarly arranged and furnished except that one side of the outer chamber is occupied by the two associations that gather and disseminate the news of Congress.

The busiest hours in the two galleries are usually from 11:30 in the morning until 2:30 in the afternoon. Within this period the representatives of the afternoon newspapers do the bulk of their work, writing and sending most of their news from the galleries after having obtained the same from interviews with members or out of the proceedings of the respective legislative bodies. The majority of the correspondents of morning newspapers merely make the galleries a base of operations from which they inaugurate expeditions into the various news fields around the Capitol, gathering their information and storing it away in mind or notebook to be spread upon the wires at night in the privacy of their own offices.

Admission to the press galleries of Congress is regulated by strict rules formed partly by the correspondents themselves, partly by the requirements of the Congressmen, and receiving the indorsement of the Speaker of the House and the committee on rules of the Senate. The rules require that persons desiring admission to the press gallery shall make application to the Speaker, as required by rule of the House of Representatives, and shall also state, in writing, for what paper or papers they are employed, and shall further state that they are not engaged in the prosecution of claims pending before Congress or the departments, and will not become so engaged while allowed admission to the gallery, and that they are not in any sense the agents or representatives of persons or corporations having legislation before Congress, and will not become either while retaining their places in the gallery. Visiting journalists, who may be allowed temporary admission to the gallery, must conform to the restrictions of this rule. The applications required by this rule must be authenticated in a manner that shall be satisfactory to the standing committee of correspondents, one of the duties of which is to see that the occupation of the gallery is confined to bona fide telegraphic correspondents of reputable standing in their business, who represent daily newspapers. Not exceeding one seat is assigned to each paper; and it is the duty of the standing committee, at its discretion, to report violations of the privileges of the gallery to the Speaker, and pending his action thereon the offending correspondent is suspended. Clerks in the executive departments of the Government, and persons engaged in other occupations whose chief attention is not given to newspaper correspondence, are not entitled to admission. The press list in the Congressional Directory is confined to telegraphic correspondents. Members of the families of correspondents are not entitled to admission. The gallery, subject to the approval of the Speaker of the House of Representatives, is under the control of the standing committee of correspondents.

A FIELD DAY.

At the beginning of the present session a new rule was added to the list. By its terms the clerks of Representatives and Senators are not entitled to admission to the galleries. This regulation was made necessary by the fact that within the past year a great many men have come to Washington, drawing a salary of $100 a month as clerks of members of the House, and at the same time attempting to do newspaper work. It was immediately apparent that there was grave danger of the next few years showing the presence of 356 clerks to members doing alleged newspaper work and holding rank with the legitimate corps of Washington correspondents. The danger to the public in such a condition would arise from the control of the Washington correspondence of the great newspapers of the country by men in the employ of Congressmen and subject to their fear and favor. As matters stand now, no man who draws a salary from the Government, either as the clerk of a Congressman, clerk of a committee or otherwise, can have his name borne on the roll of correspondents and entitled to admission to the press galleries. It is expected that one result of this reform will be to stimulate a spirit of independence and fearlessness among newspaper correspondents, and the public is sure to benefit by it in the end.

IN THE SENATE LOBBY.

The corps of Washington correspondents is a representtive body of writers, and includes men who reflect credit and honor upon the profession. They are gathered from every section of the country, and in most cases held high rank on the papers they represented before being sent to Washington to perform the important and responsible duties attaching to the work of a correspondent at the national capital. Some of them are veteran newspaper men, but the majority are men who have received the best part of their newspaper training within the last fifteen years. The moral standing of the Washington correspondents is high. Honesty is a prerequisite of their profession, courage and independence essentials, and a love of fair play and devotion to truth a marked characteristic. False statements about public matters or public men are never knowingly made without involving loss of reputation to the writer, although mistakes sometimes occur, when efforts are made to conceal legitimate news from them. In the nature of things, a newspaper would rather be right than wrong, and conservatism in the dissemination of news from Washington is a dominant factor.

There are unwritten rules of procedure among the correspondents which are religiously observed. It is not considered good form for a correspondent to write about the personal failings or infirmities of public men, and those who violate this code find themselves suddenly isolated and alone. It occasionally happens that a black sheep gets into the fold, and attempts by means that are more thrifty than honest to advance his material welfare, but he is soon discovered and cut off.

MORE WAR TARIFFS.

INCONSISTENT WORK FOR THE CHRISTMAS SEASON.

A Sad Commentary on the Spread of Lofty Doctrines Preached from Thousands of Pulpits—One Republican Senator Who Favor Freer Trade.

Had Better Gone Home.

Instead of adjourning as usual for the Christmas holidays, a time for the universal celebration of the message: "Peace on earth, good-will towards men," the Republican House of Representatives remained in session at Washington for the purpose of preparing a high-tariff bill. Under the pretense of desiring to raise more revenue for public expenses in event of a foreign war, the McKinleyites who misrepresent the people in Congress have hurriedly constructed a protectionist measure which they have rushed through the House. Although not in all respects so bad as the infamous tariff of 1890, which the Democrats repealed in 1894, the bill is practically a restoration of that trade-prohibiting law. A horizontal raise of 15 per cent. in duties all along the line, will effectually shut out the goods which foreign nations are anxious to send us in exchange for our surplus products.

It is a sad commentary on the spread of the lofty doctrines preached in hundreds of thousands of pulpits at the time, that the people's representatives should be engaged in trying to enact laws so much at variance with the gospel of peace and good-will. That all mankind are brothers; that the boundaries of nations are but artificial lines; that war between two countries is as hateful as between two individuals; that the best interests of men everywhere are united by common ties; that all races and peoples should be friendly and helpful, this is the lesson of Christmas.

But the McKinleyites hold a different faith. They believe that it is the duty of each nation to be as exclusive as possible; that men should look upon their neighbors who live across the boundary line of a political division, as enemies to be hated and punished; that the foreigner should not be allowed to trade with us, and that the ideal state of society would be one in which laws were shaped so as to inflict the greatest possibly injury on the commerce of outside countries. Acting on these principles they now seek to shut out imports by high taxes, and thus to establish a policy which breeds isolation, jealousy and distrust, instead of free intercourse and mutual confidence.

That the threatened increase of tariff duties cannot possibly become law, owing to the President's steadfast opposition to protectionist theories, does not lessen the unchristian spirit of the men and party who are responsible for them. They are willing and anxious to check civilization, hinder human development, and delay the coming of universal peace and prosperity, for the sake of narrow partisanship and the spoils of office. If the people are wise they will at the next election put it beyond the power of these mischief-makers to carry out the schemes which they now advocate.

The Free Port Project.

Senator Frye of Maine has introduced into the Senate a bill which authorizes the establishment of a free port at Fort Pond Bay, a harbor on the extreme eastern end of Long Island, N. Y. The bill provides for what will practically be a great government bonded warehouse, with facilities for operating factories within its walls, under the supervision of the United States Treasury authorities. Vessels entering and leaving this port will be free from tonnage dues, from entrance and clearing fees, and from any harbor master's fees due under State laws. Foreign merchandise may transshipped in the port, or landed upon the piers, without being entered or specially bonded, and imported materials may be manufactured for exportation by the factories within the limits of the port. The final section of the bill authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury, under like circumstances and conditions, to establish similar free ports at any other suitable places in the United States.

Should the bill become law there is no doubt but that the novel experiment, for this country, of a free port would speedily be tried. Eminent capitalists have already expended considerable money on a railroad to Fort Pond Bay, and have purchased large tracts of land to be used as sites for docks, warehouses, and factories. An excellent harbor and broad deep channels to the open sea insure the safety of vessels entering the port. The advantages to the shipping interests, and the import and export trades, would soon make Fort Pond a center of commerce, and its success would be followed by the establishment of many similar ports.

That any changes in our tariff system which makes it easier to import and export goods will be greatly beneficial to the country, is beyond question. Democrats will therefore favor the project for free ports, as a long step toward the ideal condition of perfect freedom for vessels to come and go as they please, without toll or tax, bringing such goods as we need and carrying our products to every shore. But it is certainly very inconsistent for a protectionist Senator to aid in extending facilities for foreign trade. Only a few years ago this same Senator Frye stated before the Home Market Club that "we import annually $700,000,000 worth of goods, all of which could and should be made in this country." Now he appears in Congress to urge a measure which will encourage the importation of the hated foreign products.

Which is right, the Senator Frye who wants to totally exclude the goods of other countries by a high tariff wall, or the Senator Frye who wants to establish free ports where foreign goods can be landed, stored or manufactured, more easily than under the present system? Is it not the general opinion of all business men that the latter is the more sensible policy?

Buzzards for Pottery Workers.

Ex-Representative Buchanan, of New Jersey, who is in Washington, has felt it necessary to explain his presence at the national capital: "I came to eat Christmas turkey with my sister-in-law." But Mr. Buchanan took occasion to add, in an incidental way: "While I am here I shall see what can be done to restore the duty"—meaning the duty on pottery. From which it would seem that the pottery interests would like to feast on turkey all the year round, leaving to the consumer the less nutritious fare of buzzard.—Philadelphia Record.

CLEARED HIS CLIENT.

How a Western Lawyer Overcame the Preponderance of Evidence.

"My first case," said a well-known attorney, "was the defense of a negro preacher in Missouri who had been arrested for stealing wood from a railroad company. A great deal of fuel had been lost from time to time, so when the culprit was arrested the company was so anxious to make an example of him that it employed special counsel and prosecuted the case vigorously. The evidence against the old man was convincing. He had been seen sneaking around the woodpile and was arrested while carrying off a load.

"I had subpoenaed about twenty well-known business men to testify to the previous good character of the defendant. When the prosecution's case was closed I put one on the stand and asked:

"'Do you know the defendant's reputation for honesty and integrity?'

"'Yes,' was the answer.

"'What is it—good or bad?'

"'Bad. He will steal anything he can get his hands on.'

"A titter ran through the court room. It wasn't the answer I had expected, but it was too late, so I put on a bold front and called another. He testified as the other witness had, and the prosecuting attorney rubbed his hands with satisfaction. Before I got through with my witnesses I proved that my client was a most notorious thief, who was never known to neglect an opportunity to steal something, no matter how trifling it might be. Then I called a couple of physicians, proved the existence of a mental disorder known as kleptomania, read some authorities to show that it was a good defense if proved, and submitted my case. The old preacher was acquitted, and thereafter stole with impunity, for he considered his acquital in the face of facts equivalent to a license to steal."—San Francisco Call.

Wilson Bill in the South.

In his speech against the proposed tariff bill Mr. Underwood, of Alabama, said:

"It has been contended on the floor of the House that the Wilson bill has caused great loss to our manufacturing interests throughout the country and loss of work to those persons engaged in manufacturing in this country. As far as the district that I represent is concerned, the opposite has been the case. During the summer of 1894, before the repeal of the McKinley tariff bill, a large majority of the manufacturers in the Birmingham district were "out blast" and a large number of men were out of employment. After the repeal of the McKinley bill and the enactment of the Wilson bill, during the fall of 1894 and the winter of 1895, the furnaces in the Birmingham district commenced to go into blast, until at the present day instead of there being a large number of men out of employment all of the furnaces of this district are in operation except six, and four of these six are prevented from going into operation by reason of litigation in which they became involved prior to the enactment of the Wilson bill. Instead of a reduction of wages, as is claimed by the Republican members on the floor of this House, the wages of the laborers employed in the coal mines, iron ore mines and furnaces in the Birmingham district have been increased 25 per cent. These are facts and not theories, and go to show that where manufacturing industries are located at advantageous points a protective tariff is not necessary for their prosperity."

Not the Time for Tariff Revision.

As was to be expected, pressure is being brought to bear upon the House Ways and Means Committee to traverse the entire tariff law for the purpose of satisfying various interests preferring tariff for protection. Chairman Dingley and his committee should not suffer this pressure to alter their already designed scheme. This is not the time for general tariff revision. It may be that if the executive, the Senate and the House were of the same way of thinking on political economy the law might be reviewed not only for increasing duty at some point but for lowering it perhaps at others.

Whatever effect a deliberate reconsideration of the subject might have under other circumstances, this is not the time for tariff revision. The country wants rest and peace. Business is already showing confident reaction and steady revival. Manufacturers, merchants and farmers do not desire to start out in a new year apprehensive of radical changes in the customs. Trade and production are both accustomed now to the existing schedules, and to provoke irritation would be the chief result of opening up a tariff debate which, while wasting Congress' time, would inevitably be futile in the end.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Iron Workers Happy.

The Iron Age of Dec. 26 has an article summing up the year 1895—the greatest year for the iron industry ever known. After mentioning some of the unsatisfactory features it says: "Those who have least cause to complain, among all interested in the iron and steel trades, are the workingmen, who received substantial advances in wages and were better employed than for several years." It was not the iron workers who asked Reed and Dingley to increase duties on imported goods.

An If and a Why.

If a tax on wool to secure the vote of Ohio is a good thing, regardless of the best interests of our manufacturing industries, why is it not a good thing to tax hides as a means of securing the votes of Montana, Idaho and the other cow-punching sovereignties of the great sage-brush region?—New York World.

VICTIMS OF A PANIC.

FALSE ALARM OF FIRE CAUSES A HORROR IN BALTIMROE.

Carnage in a Theater—Men, Women, and Children Trampled Under Foot—Twenty-four Crushed to Death and Ten More Badly Hurt.

Mad Rush for Safety.

In a senseless panic, caused by a defective gas burner and a foolish cry of fire at the old Front Street Theater, in Baltimore, Friday night, twenty-four persons were killed, two fatally injured and ten more seriously hurt. Almost all of the victims are of Polish nativity and Hebraic extraction. The theater was filled with an audience assembled to listen to Hebrew opera. There were at least 3,000 persons present when the curtain went up. One of the attendants went to light a gas jet which appeared to have been extinguished. As he turned the cock and applied a match the light flared up, and it was seen there was no tip to the burner. The jet was in plain view of the greater part of the audience, but as the glare from it showed against the wall some one in the gallery shouted: "Fire, fire, fire!" In an instant there was a mad scramble, in which the whole audience took part. The vanguard reached the entrance on Front street, pushed on by the howling, shrieking mob behind them. There, those in the foremost rank were compelled to turn to the right and to the left to reach the double entrance way, built in the form of storm doors. As the crowds from the two doors, one on the right, the other on the left, reached the landing they met. There was a brief struggle, and then some one lost his or her footing and fell. In a moment the crowd, pushed with irresistible force from the rear, crowded upon the prostrate form and began in turn to stumble and reel, and presently to fall prone upon the floor under the myriads of feet coming like a herd of frightened buffaloes from behind. In less time than it takes to tell it, the landing was packed twenty or thirty deep with the panic-stricken multitude and the hundreds behind them were struggling over them to reach the street.

Crushed and Suffocated.

The tumult attracted an immense crowd from the outside, many of whom tried to gain entrance to the theater, thus adding to the confusion. A dozen policemen, also attracted by the shrieks of the frightened crowd, hurried to the scene, and, using their clubs on those outside, pushed through the door, to the writhing mass on the landing. Ambulances carried the dead to the morgue and the wounded to the city hospital, wherever practicable. In many cases the slightly injured and in a few cases those badly hurt were taken to their homes by friends.

When the mass on the landing had been cleared the frightened people on the inside were quieted down sufficiently to enable the police to clear the theater. Then it was found that there had been no danger, and that not a soul would have been injured had the audience but remained seated. Few of the victims had friends or relatives who are able to speak the English language sufficiently well to make themselves understood, or enough knowledge of the ways of this country to know where to go to look for their lost ones. The dead are of all ages, from mere infants to gray-haired men and women. All were killed or injured in the terrific crush on the fatal landing, not a casualty having happened inside the house, although the crush there was tremendous.

History of the Structure.

The theater is an old, tumble-down affair, on the west side of Front street, between Gay and Low. It has not been used for theatrical purposes for several years, but has recently been the scene of many glove contests under the auspices of the Eureka Athletic Club. The method of egress is confined entirely to two narrow doorways opening upon the stairways leading down to the narrow landing upon which the tragedy occurred, and the house has long been considered too unsafe to be put to public use.

The theater was first opened to the public in 1829, but nine years later was burned, and the present structure took its place. Jenny Lind, Macready, Charlotte Cushman and many other notables performed there, and in 1864 it was the scene of the Republican national convention which nominated Abraham Lincoln for the Presidency and Andrew Johnson for the second place on the ticket. The convention at which the Democrats nominated Stephen A. Douglas, after adjourning from Charleston, S. C., in 1860, was also held in the old building, and during its session a panic was started by the giving away of the flooring which had been laid over the pit.

HEROIC WOMEN.

Their Struggle Against a Common and Merciless Enemy.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Woman's heroism is not evinced by fearlessness or enterprise in time of danger, but her courage and fortitude are unquestionable in time of suffering.

Think of the woman who smiles and tries to make those around her cheerful, while she is racked with the excruciating tortures of womb trouble.

Think of one who, day by day, begs her physician to help her, while the torture of tortures could not add to her misery.

Does she yield? No! She endures her agonies, and meets her friends with cheerfulness.

This is woman's heroism, and few men realize how prevalent they are. Physicians rarely render relief in such cases.

After twenty years of success, with ever-increasing popularity, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is, to-day, woman's only sure and safe refuge from inflammation, ulceration, falling and displacement of the womb, ovarian trouble, leucorrhœa, painful and suppressed menstruations, kidney trouble, nervous prostration, and all manner of distressing and life-sapping female diseases.

"O my sisters, believe what is told you of this wonderful medicine! Before I took it I had falling of the womb and leucorrhœa. My womb came down so badly I could not walk across the floor; the pain was excruciating; now all is so changed, and I am so happy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved me from a life of misery. Don't, don't suffer, I say, when a cure is so easily obtained." — MRS. WILLIAM HOWE, 163 Antoin Street, Detroit, Mich.

Good Reason.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

POTATOES NOT WHOLESOME.

The Tuber Discussed from a Scientific and Culinary View.

John Gilmer Speed, Dr. Cyrus Edson (ex-president of the New York Board of Health) and Mrs. S. T. Rorer learnedly discuss "The Potato as a Daily Diet," in the Ladies' Home Journal, and pretty conclusively prove that the humble but popular tuber is not a healthful article of food. Mr. Speed asserts that the potato as a food is not nearly so valuable as we have very generally esteemed it to be. It is quite deficient in nitrogen, and as a sole diet is therefore unsuitable. It is hard to digest and therefore should be partaken of very sparingly by all save those who live active lives out-of-doors. * * * The potato provokes our great national ailment, dyspepsia, and the sooner the consumption of the mealy tuber begins the sooner will the dread pangs of the dyspepsia appear.

Dr. Edson in a rejoinder to Mr. Speed writes: I must quite agree with Mr. Speed in his condemnation of the potato. I am sorry to have to say anything against the humble tuber, but the truth, especially when it is scientific, and more especially medico-scientific, must be told. It is certain no one can at all times eat the potato with the assurance that it will do him no harm. * * * The practice of feeding potatoes to infants and young children cannot be too severely condemned. A potato diet may not kill them outright at once, but it is certain to injure their digestive organs permanently and effectually, so as to make their lives a burden to themselves and those who are brought in contact with them. Dr. Edson also contends that the potato is very deficient in nutritive qualities, and has less value as an article of food than most other vegetables and cereals.

Mrs. Rorer writes: I am not a potato prohibitionist, but I firmly believe that potatoes should be served only with strongly-concentrated nitrogenous food, such as roasted beef, or, for the vegetarian, with beans, peas or lentils.

ACETYLENE GAS.

Something About the Production of the New Illuminant.

By heating in an electric furnace a mixture of lime and carbon a combination of the two substances ensues, and a stone-like material, the calcium carbide, is produced. When water comes in contact with it, part of the hydrogen of the water combines with the carbon, forming acetylene; the rest of the hydrogen, with the oxygen of the water, combines with the calcium, forming calcium hydrate.

This apparatus is of the type of the familiar hydrogen gas generator of the chemist. In all such apparatus for the production of acetylene due regard has to be had to the extraordinary rapidity of evolution, comparable only to the evolution of carbon dioxide gas from sodium bicarbonate and acid. In the outer casing, which is about one-half filled with water, a fixed bell or receiver is inverted, whose lower lip reaches to within a short distance of the bottom of the containing vessel. A rod passes through the top of the receiver, the joint being made gas-tight by a stuffing box, so that the rod can be pushed up and down. To the lower end of the rod a conical wire basket is secured. From the top of the receiver a tube passes off to conduct the gas to the burners, and a hole with tightly fitting screw stopper is provided in the top for the introduction of calcium carbide.

Story of a Careful Man.

He was a careful and thoughtful man; in fact, it may be said that he was an extremely careful and thoughtful man.

He was resting comfortably in his easy-chair with his feet resting on a footrest when he discovered that his pencil needed sharpening. Any other man would have taken out his knife and begun work at once, but he was too thoughtful for that; also too careful.

He sighed, got up out of his chair and went across the room for a little waste-paper basket that was standing in the corner. Then he returned to his seat in the easy-chair and placed the basket on the floor between his legs.

His wife smiled approvingly, and he felt proud of himself.

He opened his knife, leaned over his basket and began work on the pencil.

"It is just as easy to be careful and thoughtful," he said, as he detached the first shaving from the end of the pencil.

"It is," replied his wife, as she followed the shaving with her eye and saw it go over his shoulder and land on the carpet behind him.

But why continue? There are few who have not tried to sharpen a pencil over a small basket in some moment of temporary insanity.

When he had finished there were three shavings in the basket and the rest were on the floor.

That is usually the way it happens.—Chicago Evening Post.

Things Found in Amber.

In many museums may be seen in the most perfect state of preservation in amber fossilized remains of plants and animals. The science of Egypt in its highest development did not succeed in discovering a method of embalming so perfect as the simple process taking place in nature. A tree excludes a gummy, resinous matter in a liquid state. An insect accidentally lights in it and is caught. The exudation continues and envelops it completely, preserving the most minute details of its structure. In the course of time the resin becomes a fossil and is known as amber. The history of fossil insects is largely indebted to the fly in amber. And to the preserving properties of amber we owe, likewise, our knowledge of some of the more minute details of ancient plant structure.

The coasts of the Baltic are, and have been from the days of the Phoenician traders, the great source of the amber of commerce. It occurs in rolled fragments in strata known to geologists as oligocene. These are tertiary rocks of a date little more recent than those of the London basin, and equivalent to the younger tertiary series of the Isle of Wight. The fragments of fossil resin were washed down by the rivers from the pine forests of the district along with sediments and vegetable debris. In them are found most perfectly preserved remains of the period, as well as of insect life. Fragments of twigs, buds and flowers, with sepals, petals, stamens and pistils still in place, occur. Pollen grains have likewise been found. A recent genus, deutzia, has been recognized by its characteristic stamens; the valves of the antlers of cinnamomum are seen in others. In one specimen the pendant catkin of a species of oak is seen as distinctly through the clear amber as if it were a fresh flower. And beside the insect and plant remains thus sealed up in amber stray relics of the higher fauna of the forest have also been met with. Fragments of hair and feathers have been caught in the sticky resin and preserved. Among others a woodpecker and squirrel have been recognized in the Baltic amber.—Gentleman's Magazine.

FACTS ABOUT COTTON.

The Money It Has Brought Into the South in Nineteen Years.

A study of the crop figures will show that seven years successively increasing crops from 1885-6 to 1891-2 were unprecedented in the history of trade. It is doubtful if any leading crop raised can show such an unbroken increase for seven years. Jumping from 5,700,000 bales in 1885-6, there was practically no halting until 1891-2, when the yield was 9,035,000 bales—a gain of 3,300,000 bales, or nearly 60 per cent. advance in seven years.

In nineteen years cotton has brought the South over $6,000,000,000—a sum so vast that the profits out of it ought to have been enough to greatly enrich that section. Unfortunately, however, the system necessitated by the conditions prevailing immediately after the war, of raising cotton only and buying provisions and grain in the West, left but little, if any, surplus money out of the cotton crop. The West and North drained that section of several hundred million dollars every year, because it depended upon them for all of its manufactured goods, as well as for the bulk of its food stuffs.

Hence, of the enormous amount received from cotton, very little remained in the South. The increase in the diversification of farm profits, the raising of home supplies, the development of trucking and the building of factories are all uniting to keep at home the money which formerly went North and West. Whether the cotton raiser himself be getting the full benefit of this or not, the South at large is necessarily doing so. The increase in the attention given to grain cultivation is illustrated by the fact that the South's grain crop of 1894 was 611,000,000 bushels, valued at $302,000,000, or more than the value of its entire cotton crop, and the yield for 1895 will probably exceed these figures by at least 50,000,000 bushels.

The importance of cotton in our foreign trade relations can be realized from the simple statement that since 1875 our exports of this staple have aggregated in value $4,000,000,000, while the total exports of wheat and flour combined for the same period have been about $2,600,000,000, showing a difference of $1,400,000,000, or over 50 per cent. in favor of cotton. Moreover, during the same period, we have exported about $20,000,000 of manufactured cotton goods, making the total value really $4,200,000,000. Compared with the exports of wheat, flour and corn combined—the value of which since 1875 has been about $3,200,000,000—there is a difference in favor of cotton of $1,000,000,000.

Going back to 1820, it is found that the total value of flour and wheat exported for the last seventy-four years is, in round figures $4,000,000,000, or $200,000,000 less than the value of the cotton exported during the last nineteen years.—Harper's Weekly.

Water Scoop Accident.

The accident to the water scoop on the New York Central's locomotive which prevented the Empire State express from making a record, says the New York Mail and Express, recalls the first experience of the officials of that road with that device.

General Manager Toucey and Superintendent of Motive Power Buchanan undertook to try the method, and the latter agreed to run the locomotive on the occasion of the test, while the former was to stand at a point where the water trough began, so as to enable the fireman to drop the scoop at the right time. Mr. Buchanan moved his engine along, and when that point of the track was reached abreast of Mr. Toucey the scoop was lowered. Instead of scooping up water the device tore up the ground and created a small-sized sensation among the onlooking officials. It was afterward discovered, on investigation, that the scoop worked all right, but that Mr. Toucey had inadvertently moved down the track and forgot to return to his assigned point. Mr. Buchanan subsequently tried the scoop again, but he took pains that it was dropped at the right time.

Another instance of a similar nature is recalled of an inquisitive yardmaster of an Eastern line who wanted to see how a water scoop worked and got on the blind end of a baggage car next the tender to make his observations. The train struck the scoop going at full speed, the engineer not slowing down because he was behind time, but more especially because he was aware of the yardmaster's presence on the platform behind him. For two hundred yards a perfect avalanche of water plowed up between the tender and car, half drowning the enthusiast on water scoops.

The Pingree Plain in New York.

Out of the 100 families who were given allotments of land in the vicinity of New York to cultivate on the Pingree plan some sixty made a good profit from the season's work. The land is on long Island, and is of only fair quality for cultivation, and yet, on the 200 acres divided into tracts of from one-quarter of an acre to eight acres over $11,000 worth of produce was raised, and of that amount over $6,000 was profit to the farmers. Seven of these farmers, who were all heads of families and needy, proved complete failures, while thirty-three were indifferent and hardly got paid for their labor. One family made $364 by only occasional work, while a woman who had a third of an acre made $134, doing all the work herself. The farmers averaged about $80 in profits, besides paying all money actually spent by the committee on their allotments. The committee furnished land, instruction, superintendence, implements and fertilizer. The experiment is to be repeated on a larger scale next year.

Town Isolation.

There is no solitude of island, desert or wilderness that can exceed that of the town and city where amidst the busy throng, so many walk as strangers. Not a few people have experienced this bitter sense of isolation or some part of the price of removal from another town or from the neighborhood of the farm. Only a few days since a young woman whose husband is employed in one of our manufactories, in response to a casual suggestion that she was not looking well, replied: "I am so lonesome, we came here months ago to get work and I have not been called upon by anyone in all that time. I cannot call on others first, and I feel so depressed that it makes me sick."

A well known and highly respected farmer far along in years, concluded to rent his land and live in town the rest of his days. He busied himself for a time in building a small barn and on Saturdays met as of old, his neighbors on the streets, but the barn being built, the labor of setting down finished, he looked around for companionship and found none.

No neighbors called in to pass the afternoon or evening in winter, he belonged to no club or society of which Auburn has so many, and left to himself he soon experienced the bane of town isolation, grew despondent and longed for the farm with its labors but also with its social features.

These two instances stand for many in our town. The same condition in all probability exists elsewhere. It is a result of changed social features and the neglect is as unintentional as it is unthought of.

It is said that two men had lived in adjoining dwellings in a city for years, neither knowing aught of his neighbor until by some chance, they met one day when they discovered themselves to be brothers when of course the barriers were swept away between the families. There are renters and residents who have lived in houses adjacent, strangers to each other for months and perhaps years, without interest in each others, welfare who might well and truly ask for information: "Who is my neighbor?"

There is a great and grand work in foreign mission, Again Clara Barton calls for millions to carry the ministration of the Red Cross or "rescent" to the helpless Armenian survivors, but their is a pleasant, costless home mission field in every town and city in the country. It is a mission for the young with words of cheer and sympathy as well as for those older. Why cannot our good people especially the lovers of existing excellent societies arrange to canvass their respective neighbors by a system of calls on those strangers in the town with a view to invite them to attendance at church or a return of call.

It is not believed that exclusiveness or indifference cause this town isolation but custom which has done away with the good old time solicitude for the neighbor so they who they may.

If we could for a week put ourselves in the place of these strangers, workmen and farmers, we would vividly realize what they suffer by social neglect. If we saw no friend recognition on the street hear no ring at our door, had no sympathy and help during times of sickness, there would arise in our minds such a feeling against community as gives rise to these menaces to society, the anarchists whose sole thought is to work retribution upon their prosperous and order loving neighbor.

Americans in whatever condition in life, are tenacious of pride in self maintenance and independence. No matter how nearly empty the board and shelf, how worn the garment of wife or child, how unable to find work or sometimes to do work, there is no complaint, no sign.

Rarely do we hear the sorrowful plaint: "I am so lonesome," from some one hoping in vain for a break of the barrier of town isolation, looking for friendly speech and neighborly call, that are not heard nor known for these our neglected townpeople would die before they would intrude and starve before they would ask charity.

Let us respect their manhood, bid them be of good cheer, visit them not as a duty but as a pleasure; invite their confidence, make them feel at home in Auburn and this very course will strongly supplement and support that more common and popular plan of building up a town by local largess to invite manufacturers.

Timely Item.

A correspondent reminds the La Grange Standard of an incident worth remembering just now. Franklin was once dining with some Englishmen and Frenchmen. When toasts were proposed an Englishman arose and with a Briton's pride said: "Here's to Great Britain, the sun that gives light to all nations." A Frenchman then arose and with a Frenchman's enthusiasm proposed "Here's to France, the moon whose magic rays move the tides of the world.' Then Ben Franklin, with a twinkle in his eye, arose and said: "Gentlemen, here's to George Washington, the Joshua of America, who commanded the sun and the moon to stand still they obeyed him."

The Regulators.

Comments As To The Proposed Reunion. What The Papers Say.

Considerable has been said in the columns of the local press lately concerning a reunion of the Regulators of Northeastern Indiana, but so far nothing has been done and no call has been issued. One trouble seems to be owing to the fact that the ranks of the members are sadly thinned and the survivors wait for some one else to move in the matter. This is not surprising when it is realized that many years have elapsed since the organization was in active operation. Many of the members, especially the older ones have passed from earthly scenes, and only those who were young men then are perhaps living now.

The first organization was made in La Grange county in September, 1856, and was known as the LaGrange County Rangers with headquarters at the Case school house. The object was to put a stop to the thieving, horse stealing, robbing, counterfeiting and general lawlessness which prevailed in this part of the state. A public meeting was held at Wright's corners January 9, 1858, and much feeling was worked up and strong resolutions adopted. Another large meeting was held at this city shortly afterwards. Several hundred men came on horseback and speeches were made in open air by Dr. Fuller of Huntertown, and others near the Baptist, now Catholic church. The people were intensely excited and carried a banner with the words "No expense to the county."

Shortly after this several men suspected of horse stealing were arrested, taken to Ligonier by the Regulators and given an examination, and Gregory McDougal was condemned to death and on Jan. 26, 1858 was taken to Diamond lake and hung. Before his execution he made a full confession and implicated many others. He fully acknowledged the justness of his sentence and warned all young men to turn from evil ways. He told Mr. E. B. Spencer, who was present, and heard his confession that John Wilson who was known as the "flying Dutchman," had stolen Mr. Spencer's handsome team of horses six months previously, and also informed him that the team had been taken to Hamilton, Ohio. Later the team was found near that place and returned to him. Mr. Spencer and N. B. Newnam were active regulators and are quite anxious to have a reunion of the survivors of the organization. They are of the opinion that Capt. Braden of Ligonier, is the proper person to issue the call, as he was a prominent member, and Mr. Spencer informs us that the captain was present with himself and a gentleman from Auburn when McDougal made his confession. Messrs. Spencer and Newnam give the following names as surviving members: O. P. Granois, Chas. Cochran, Nelson Stacy and Butler Gilbert of LaGrange county; Messrs. Henry Baum, M. F. Walters, B. S. Haines and Peter Bowman of Avilla; Henry Hill, Washington Engle and Samuel Engle of Jefferson township. They would like to hear from any one who may know of other living members. They are much in favor of a reunion and favor Ligonier as a suitable place for such a meeting.—Kendallville Sun.

The LaGrange Standard is of the opinion that a reunion of the Regulators will be of doubtful propriety while so "many relatives of the accused and implicated, now respectable people, survive. It might result as did a little incident came under our observation in the army. While our regiment, which contained companies from all these counties, was in camp at Battle Creek, Tenn., a number of the company officers met one evening in a tent for a social time. As the evening waned they became somewhat enthusiastic and proud of their respective counties, bragging of their achievements, when a Steuben county officer made some disparaging allusion to Noble county, because of blacklegs, that fired a passionate officer from that county and violence was narrowly averted. The offended officer was a messmate of ours, and we had to do our best at peace making to prevent a collision, for several days. The final results though, of the evening, and allusion to the regulator days made some of the unwritten history of that regiment. A reunion of the survivors of the regulators would have to be carefully conducted not to wound somebody."

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phœbe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her, and she says it saved her life. Mr Thomas Eggers, 139 Florida St., San. Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption. He tried without result, everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medecine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottles at Robbins & McCord's drugstore. Regular size 50c. and $1 5

The National Guard.

The war department at Washington has compiled a tabular statement showing the number of men enrolled in the cavalry, artillery and infantry of the National Guard in each and all the states. The aggregate numbers are: Cavalry, 5,040; artillery, 5,045; infantry, 83,261. South Carolina has the largest number of cavalry (1,519); California has the largest force of artillery (585); and New York has the largest number of infantry (12,134). There are more than 100,000 National Guardsmen, uniformed, drilled and ready for duty. Add to these the 25,000 man of the regular army and we have 125,000 men that can take the field on short notice in case of insurrection or invasion.

The Columbia City Daily Commercial of Jan. 2 says:

Yesterday morning Nickel Plate passenger train No. 1 struck a sleigh containing two men and one was instantly killed and little hope is held for the recovery of the other. Wm. Doddridge, a druggist of Claypool, was instantly killed and his companion, Daniel Rhoades, of the same place, received injuries which his physicians say will surely prove fatal. The whistle was blown to give the usual signal for a road crossing, but was probably not heard by the men who were huddled up in heavy coats and wraps to protect themselves from the cold.

Obituary

Simon Jonathan Lock was born in Monroe Co. N. Y. May 24, 1830, died in Waterloo DeKalb Co. Ind. Jan. 1, 1896, aged 65 years, 7 months and 7 days.

He came with his parents to Toledo O. at the age of five years, where he grew to manhood, and became identified with the growing city partaking in its interests, and acquired some considerable political prominence, having held the office of Marshal for several years. Naturally having to do with the police department, he became famous in his ability to deal with the lawless, and on several occasions did excellent service quelling mobs and subduing the violent. In that department now known as the detective service, he performed several daring feats.

He was married to Miss Mattie McCormick Jan. 8, 1856. They have had seven children born to them: Mrs. Ada Kelly, Mrs. Hattie Knowlton, Mrs. Effie Siegfried, Miss Cora, Dell, Richard E. and a darling little Gracie, who was taken to Heaven in her third year. So he leaves the companion of his life surrounded by stalwart sons and loving daughters, who will take up his greatest earthly care, that of shielding her from the hard and hurtful things in this life, and providing the comforts and support for her rapidly accumulating years.

During the Rebellion Mr Lock served faithfully and efficiently in several capacities for over two. When being wounded he was honorably discharged. He enlisted in 1861 and served in the 14th O. V. I. One of the tender emotions of of his life was for his old comrades in arms.

Mr. Lock moved to Waterloo in 1866 where they have reared their family. He was a thrifty and enterprising citizen, having given the town a wide reputation as a hotel keeper. He was a good provider for his family, a reliable husband, a tender, kind and careful parent. He reaches life's end having been successful, forceful and efficent to the end. Let us leave him in the presence and face to face with his God. He was a charter member of Waterloo Post No. 52 G. A. R. who were out in full force and took charge in the interment after their ritual. The funeral was largely attended by old neighbors and many friends from adjacent towns.

TO THE SUFFERERS OF RHEUMATISM.

After using Groff's Rheumatic Cure for some time in my practice I take great pleasure in saying that it is a most wonderful remedy for Rheumatism; in fact it is the only one I have found for the cure of this disease in all its various form. Dr. E. E. Tull, Chicago.

Visiting The Old Home.

John G. Ashley, now a resident of New Haven, is in the city visiting at the old home. His wife accompanies him, and they will remain several days. We presume Mrs. Ashley will be present at the meeting of her club, the L L C. to-morrow afternoon. Mr. Ashley has been for some time buying lumber for his brother-in-law H. F. Schoelker at New Haven, and is now adding to this, the purchasing of elm lumber and timber suitable for the wooden rims of bicycles. Mr Schoelker is a large manufacturer of staves, heading, etc, and now has gone extensively into the making of wooden rims for bicycles, he having taken out a patent for an improved rim. It promises to be a profitable business. He is also developing an invention for a rim that can be used on ice, making a skating bicycle. Mr. Ashley goes from here to the great bicycle show at Chicago. Our first acquaintance with Mr. Ashley, was when he was engaged on the Northern Pacific railroad, and got his paper at Bozeman, then a small town. It now has, according to Mr. Cobb's letters, a population of about 18,000

Attacked By An Owl

A Desperate Fight in The Woods At Night Time.

Springfield Republican.

Colwell Smith was passing through a piece of woods one night, and without hearing any sound or premonition his tall beaver hat received a terrible thump from behind which knocked it off his head to the ground. He heard no sound no flutter of wings—for the wing feathers of this bird are specially adapted by their downy edge to noiseless flight. He replaced his hat and proceeded, but wondered at the circumstance. which he could not explain, says the Springfield Republican. No limb of a tree, to which he naturally turned for an explanation, could have brushed his hat off, for it came forward. While he was busily absorbed in thought, thump two came, and off went his hat again and in front of him as before. He again replaced his beaver and, then, with every sensation on the qui vive, proceeded and awaited results. Again as before his head covering was unceremoniously removed, but the keenness and activity of his fully aroused senses enabled him to detect a slight flutter of wings. He was convinced now as to the source of his singular experience.

But he outwitted the bird in this way. He had a stout walking-stick and held it in front of him horizontally, firmly grasped so as to strike upward with it should he be again approached. He had walked but a short distance when the time came for the sudden stroke upward, and his owlship—for such it proved to be—met with an obstruction that was not "on the bill" in one sense, but was in another, and that a striking one. The owl's antics were ended and he paid the penalty for his continued attacks upon what he deemed an intruder on his dark domains. I have known them to pounce down upon dogs in the same way.

OUR WHEAT.

What Shall Farmers Substitute for this Valuable Crop?

The Indiana Farmer of a recent date has this item of interest to the people of the United States whether farmers or not, for all questions as to the prosperity of our farmers affect all lines of business:

One principal reason for the continued low prices of wheat is the large amount sent to European markets from the new, almost limitless fields of Argentina. Over 6,000,000 acres were harvested there last season, with an average yield of 13 bushels. Eighty million bushels is a very large amount and the most of this is shipped abroad. Unfortunately for our wheat growers the area and yield of this new wheat country are likely to increase rapidly for years to come. The exports of Argentina jumped from 827,000 tons in 1890 to 1,000,000 in 1893 and the present year it is claimed that the amount will reach twice the latter quantity, or over 66,000,000 bushels. In that country of cheap labor and cheap land 50 cents per bushel is a good paying price and it is useless for our farmers to try to compete against such odds. We must reduce our area in this cereal and try other crops in which the competition is not so great. The decline in wheat began with the bonanza wheat farming in the Red river valley of the North and it does not seem likely to recover the old time price of $1 a bushel. The question of what crop we can best substitute in its place is a most important one and we ask the opinions of our oldest and most experienced farmers to help work out its solution.

Nervous Prostration

Cured by Dr. Miles' Nervine.

Prolonged derangement of the nervous system not only affects the brain and mental powers, but develops disease in some of the vital organs. The most dangerous of these indirect results is when the heart is affected. This was the case of the Rev. N. F. Surface, Fawn River, Mich., who writes under date of Feb. 14, 1895:

"Fourteen years ago I had a slight stroke of paralysis. Overwork brought on nervous prostration. I was exceedingly nervous and the exertion of public speaking caused heart palpitation that threatened my life. I used two bottles of Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure for my heart trouble, and two of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine for my nervousness and feel better than I ever expected to feel again. I can speak for hours without tiring or having my heart flutter as it formerly did, and I have you to thank that I am alive today."

The Farmer's Handy Gate

ive Reasons why it is the Best Gate for armers:

FIRST. It is a good, durable gate, made of good material and well painted
SECOND. It has the horizontal retractile movement on rollers, and the swinging movement on hinges.
THIRD. It can be raised so as to allow hogs or sheep to pass under, or to swing over deep snow It can be changed in a minute without tools, and with mittens on if desired.
FOURTH. It requires but two ordinary posts to hang the gate to, and requires no more room than a common side gate.
FIFTH. Any child can operate the gate, can open and shut it, as it requires but the slightest strength.

Sample gate can be examined on the northeast corner of the court yard in Auburn. County, Township and Farm Rights for sale very reasonable.

Twelfth District

A FULL ATTENDANCE OF DEMOCRATS AT THE JACKSON DAY MEETING AT FT. WAYNE YESTERDAY.

T. R. Marshall, the Brilliant Yonng Whitley County Attorney made District Chairman.

Fort Wayne Journal

It is a little early for political conventions, to be sure, but that did not prevent a very large attendance on the Twelfth district democratic convention held in this city yesterday afternoon.

The meeting was called to order in the circuit court room shortly after 1 o'clock and Mr. J. A. Barns, editor of the Auburn Courier, was chosen chairman, with Mr. Frank Dildine, of the Sentinel, as secretary.

Mr. Barns thanked the convention and encouraged it with words of cheer. He said the business was the selection of a member of the state central committee from the Twelfth district, and asked the pleasure of the convention.

Senator Barrett was first presented but he declined, feeling perhaps, that it is labor enough to be chairman of the county central committee. He said his business would not permit him to give his time to the district affairs, and he declined, thanking the convention for the honor of considering his name.

The Hon. Thomas R. Marshall, of Columbia City, was nominated, as was Hon. Allen Zollars, of this city.

Judge Zollers said that he could not again serve, and moved that Mr. Marshall be elected district chairman by acclamation.

This was approved, and Mr. Marshall was called to the chair.

He accepted in a very cordial speech and made a prediction that the democratic party was not going out of business, for it had a mission to preform and great questions to present to the people. He had been in the ranks during darkness and defeat before and it didn't discourage him, because he had faith in its principles, and believed they would triumph as they did Out of the present darkness will come victory if we stand for principel, and to this end he asked the co operation of the people and of the democrats.

The meeting then converted itself into a love feast, and enthusiastic and inspiring addresses were made by Judge Allen Zollars, the Hon J. M. Barrett, Mr. J. M Robinson, Mr P. A Randall, Mr. S. M. Foster, Col. I. B. McDonald, Judge S. M. Hench. Dr. A. S. Parker and Mr. T E. Ellison.

The best of spirit prevailed and while the speakers indicated that there was a difference of opinion on the money or some other questions, there was no room for division or no reason why any man should let this ism or that ism interfere with its loyalty to the party, its candidates or its platform once it has spoken.

Indeed that spirit was best manifested in the selection of a chairman, for while Mr. Marshall is an outspoken sound money man, the free silver men were his most enthusiastic supporters.

As Judge Hench put it, "No man is greater than his party," and what ever it says shall be law.

Mr. Marshall adjourned the meeting asking every man to hold up his hand pledging allegiance to the party and promising that victory should again crown the efforts of the democracy of the Twelfth district.

Regulators Of The 50's.

(Goshen Times.)

The Society of the Northern Indiana Regulators was organized in the early fifties It's object was to suppress crime, which at that time was of common occurence. By an act of the Legislature, the citizens of Northern Indiana, embracing the counties of Noble, Allen, DeKalb, Whitley. Elkhart, Steuben, and Kosciusko, were authorized to organize bodies of not less than ten nor more than one hundred members, to suppress horse stealing and other felonies. Pursuant to this act, companies were formed in all of the counties, and work was at once begun to break up the gangs of robbers that had fastened on the communities. The first arrest was made in 1852, when one Kessler was tried for horse stealing He made a confession, and implicated one Gregory McDougle, who, in turn, was arrested, and who also made a confession. Acting as a jury, the captain of each company investigated his record, and found that he had killed a man, woman and child in Canada

As a result he was sentenced to death, the execution to take place on the 29th of September, at 2 p. m. On the appointed day, McDougle was taken from Ligonier to a spot about four miles away, a scaffold was quickly improvised, the noose was adjusted, and the captains pulled him up till life was extinct. The execution was a warning to the rest of the thieves, who gradually left this part of the country. Lawlessness having been abated, the regulators withdrew. Recently a call was issued for a reunion, to be held in Ligonier. There are now men of wealth and standing, living in this county who boast that they belonged to the Regulators, which suppressed crime with no expense to the county.

Kessler Robbery

Brown Confesses And Gets Twelve Years As One Of The Robbers.

Friday's Daily.

The Kendallville Daily Sun of yesterday, January 9, gives a pretty full account of the trial and confession of James W. Brown, one of the Kessler train robbers, who has been on trial at Albion. The train was held up a few miles west of Kendallville, at Kessler's sidetrack in September, 1893, but for a long time no clue was possible of any of the men who took part in it. Lately, the Smalley boys were captured up in Michigan, and being related to Brown, he was also taken, as it was thought all knew something of the Fennville train robbery. Brown was later induced to acknowledge that he and the Smalleys were in the Kessler hold up. Now he has made a full confession, and we think our readers will be suited if we give it to them also, even if it takes a great deal of our space.

He began by giving his name James W. Brown and said he was born in Barry county, Michigan, and is twenty-eight years of age, was raised on a farm and had worked at farming, cutting cord wood, peeling bark and general work all his life. He had lived in Isabella county for twenty-four years, though at one time he spent a few months at work at Kalkaska, Michigan. He owned no property, but worked where he could get employment. He first became acquainted with John Smalley in Michigan nine years ago. Smalley married his (Brown's) cousin for second wife. He said: "First met Abe Smalley in the spring of 1893. He came where John Smalley and I were cutting bolts in Isabella county. Abe stopped with his brother until in July, 1893. He was not at work, was away occasionally; do not know any other Smalleys. John Smalley and I worked in the woods; carried our dinners, had little to eat. John was discouraged. After Abe came there John and he decided to work at something that would pay better. They wanted to make more money, talked of train robbing and such work. They wanted me to go along, and not stay, there and work and starve. They finally persuaded me to go. When we started I did not know exactly where we would go. Abe blowed a safe and got $30 in a small town; don't remember the name. I did not assist in the robbery, I carried their things. On the way John and I went to some town and bought two Winchesters. We were thirty days or more before we reached Kessler. Four or five safes were blown open on the way, but little money was found. Sometimes we all went, but Abe always handled the cartridges, Had never been at Kesler before. We located the place for the hold-up the day before. We went to the railroad track about 10 o'clock the night of the hold-up. We had a railway guide and knew when the train was due. About ten minutes before the train came Abe blowed the switch lock in order to show red light to engineer so that he would stop and turn switch. Ties were piled on side track to stop the train if the engineer did not see the red light and stop. We then waited until the train stopped. Abe was at the switch, John on south side near the shanty, and I was on north side. The train stopped before it reached the switch We were ahead of the train. After the train stopped, Abe ran up and held up the engineer. John and Abe reached the engine ahead of me. I asked Abe if engineer had come down. Don't know what his answer was, I shot at the engineer. My gun was pointed in the direction of the cab. I only shot once I don't know that they shot at him. I did not hear any shots before I shot. I am the only one that I know who did shoot at the engineer although they may have. I did not wait to see whether I had killed him or not but followed Abe back to the express car. He He took a cartridge from his sachel and lit the fuse and laid it at the door. It discharged and blew a hole large enough to let a man enter. He lit another one and threw it inside, which exploded. He could have entered without this. Abe asked the messengers to get out. I then took hold of Abe's foot and helped him up into the car through the hole. John then helped me. It was dark inside Abe struck a match. There were two messengers in the car. Abe told me to keep the messengers back while he attended to the safe. Messengers held up both hands. Abe asked them to open safe. They said the keys were in Akron, and they could not. I had the gun leveled on them. It was not cocked but I had my hand on the hammer. He then asked them to unlock the express box, and they did so. It contained but little of value. Abe then told me to go to the engine and get a hammer. He pulled his gun on me, and I then went to the engineer's cab for a hammer, and found it on the coal pile. Took my gun with me. Did not know but that the engineer would shoot me I did not see the engineer, and did not look for him. Went back to the car and threw the hammer up in the car and John helped me up again. Abe knocked the plate off the safe with hammer. He then took dynamite and blowed the safe. Don't know just how he managed it. I watched the messengers. He put in three shots. We piled boxes across the alley and all got behind them when the shots were fired. Finally got safe open. Four sacks containing papers, currency and silver, were taken from the safe. Abe had two sacks when he jumped out of hole to the ground on the south side; the other sacks were thrown out. I followed him. I think we were at work about 15 or 20 minutes on the safe. We then went up the bank on the south side and across an open field to some woods, then turned and traveled parallel with the railroad about a mile to the next road and then turned north to our camp where we had been previous to the robbery. We were all masked, Abe lost his mask after leaving the car and went back a short distance and found it. My mask came off while in the car for a moment, but I replaced it. Our calculations before we started were to go back to the same place where we had stayed. We reached there before daylight. After daylight we counted the money, think there was $15,000 to $16,000. Can't give the exact amount because we did not count the silver but divided it in bulk. We stayed in that camp three days. Stole our provisions from the farm houses, had a small fire.

We left there about 10 o'clock at night and started for Michigan. All kept together until about 12 o'clok when Abe left us. John and I continued on north together, and reached home in about a week. Traveled at night only until we got to Ionia. John got a new R. R guide at Ionia. We had thrown away our first guide. I kept my gun until near Ionia where I hid it behind a log; have not seen it since. After I reached home I cut some cord wood and worked in cedar swamps, and worked on my brother-in-law's farm. Separated with John at Ionia. We committed no other robbing. The Kessler robbery was the last I had any thing to do with. Abe Smalley came to me in the spring of 1894 and asked me to go out again but I declined, and told him I had had enough of it. He said he did not blame me. I asked him if John was going and he said he would not be far away if he (Abe) went in. I was arrested before I came here for the Fennville, Mich., robbery. I did not participate in that and did not know it was to be done. From the testimony I learn that Abe did take part in it. I was in the Allegan, Mich., jail thirty-three days, while there. A detective called on me in jail but but I told him I was in Missouri and knew nothing of the Kessler affair. After he went away the sheriff told me I was suspected, that the detective was 'onto me' and that I could go 'scot free' if I would tell what I knew of the Kessler robbery. I asked him if he would give me a writ to that effect and he said he would, and such a writ was made out. I did not know but that he knew all about it because of the money I had been spending I furnished money to build a hotel at McBaine for may brother-in law. In my first confession I told the officers that I had lost $2,000 but that was not true. My wife had the $2000 hid in the ground. I altogether got $5,000, a watch and a shot gun. I gave back the $2000 to the express company and a deed of the hotel property, This was within $20 of all I received. I think I have been fair with the company and I hope the court will be merciful to me. I have a destitute family which needs all I can do for them. I was never arrested before or guilty of any crime."

In reply to the question why he did not accept Abe Smalley's invitation to engage in the next train robbery he said did not want to lead that kind of life; had enough of it.

Several of the crew of the express train that was robbed were present at the trial and J. H. Knapp, the engineer was examined; "I was shot at the first fire, was hit in the back, the ball ranging upward and was cut out near the shoulder. Was laid up fifty-five days. I dropped down in the cab after I was shot and laid still until the conductor came and told me the robbers had gone. I was very weak. Several shots were fired into the cab. I saw the man come up into the cab after the hammer. We stopped about an hour at Kessler."

A very lengthy petition was presented to the court, signed by Brown's neighbors, stating that he had always been a good, hard working man and was never suspected of any crime until this one, that he was influenced by the Smalleys, etc., and asked the court to be lenient or merciful.

Ms Fish, prosecuting attorney, at Allegan, appeared and made a plea for mercy; said he had been at Brown's home, and that he bore a good name there until the Kessler robbery took place; that the people of Allegan were friendly to him because he had told so much of the Smalley gang which they blamed for several depredations.

R. C Ball, of Ft Wayne, attorney for the railroads, spoke for the corporation he represented, and asked the judge to be just, as well as merciful and protect the people against lawlessness, of such a grave character.

The judge then announced that he would defer the sentence for consideration.

At 10 o'clock this morning the prisoner was brought into court, when the judge pronounced sentence upon him, fixing the penalty at twelve years in states prison.

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

NO POSSIBILITY OF WAR.

Lord Salisbury Believed to be Playing for Popular Applause.

London special: Though official and diplomatic circles are said to believe that Great Britain is facing a great crisis, the public refuse to believe that there is even a possibility of war. It is thought that naval preparations making are well enough in their way to impress upon foreign powers that Great Britain is ready to accept the gage of battle should it be thrown down, but the popular opinion is that England will not herself provoke a war. The belief grows, however, that the Transvaal government will need a reminder that Great Britain still exercises suzerain powers over the country, and does not propose to forego any other rights conferred upon her by the Anglo-Boer convention of 1884. Much dissatisfaction is expressed at the attitude of President Kruger. Though it is generally conceded that he is practically a dictator in the Transvaal, it is believed that the anger of the burghers against the British is burning so fiercely that he dares not release Dr. Jameson and the other prisoners at present, and that in making their release contingent upon the restoration of order in Johannesburg he is temporizing in order that the indignation among the Boers may cool down.

Masked Men Rob a Missouri Bank.

Eight masked men dynamited the safe of the Farmer's bank at Verona, Mo., and escaped with $9,000 in cash, all it contained. Telegrams from Cashier Fly state that the robbers made good their escape, riding in the direction of Monett. The robbers are supposed to be professionals. They entered the city on horseback, secured Night Watchman Hoover and bound him to a tree across the street. They then easily forced the front doors of the bank and in a short time literally blew the vault and safe to pieces with dynamite.

His Head Torn from His Body.

When the men were leaving Mine No. 10 of the Brazil, Ind., Block Company, Gabriel Antione ran down the entry and jumped on the cage. He fell and his head was caught between the cage and shaft timbers, tearing the head from the body and dropping it to the bottom of the shaft. The trunk was dragged through a five-inch space. The unfortunate man's blood was thrown all over his horrified companions on the cage, while the sound of crunching bones and flesh was sickening.

Cut to Shreds.

Allen Ballew, aged 65, stabbed a man named Willis Doty near Lancaster, Ky., from the effects of which Doty died. Ballew surrendered and is in jail awaiting an examining trial. Ballew claims that Doty has been too intimate with his wife, and catching the guilty pair in a compromising position, proceeded to cut him into shreds. Ballew is a respected and well-known old man.

Odd Fellows' Block Burned.

Fire destroyed the Odd Fellows' Block, at Fortville, Ind., a large two-story structure. The lower story was occupied by R. A. Burris' bakery and the Tribune newspaper. The upper story was occupied by the Odd Fellows and K. of P. lodges. The building is a total loss. A small portion of Burris' goods was saved.

Anxious to be States.

The three territorial delegates, Messrs. Flynn, of Oklahoma; Murphy, of Arizona, and Catron, of New Mexico, are waging a very vigorous campaign in Congress to secure favorable action upon their bills for the admission of the respective territories represented by them to statehood.

A Good Riddance.

Isaac Reed, in jail at Tennessee City, Tenn., charged with ravishing his own daughter escaped, went home and attacked his 18-year-old son with a knife and was shot and mortally wounded by the son.

Held for Murder.

West of Tiffin, Ohio, an unknown man was found burned to a crisp. His companion, John McCluskey, formerly of McConnelsville, Ind., is held in jail until after the coroner's inquest.

A Miner Killed.

An explosion occurred in the Swift tunnel on Carbonate hill, near Gillette, Col., in which a miner named Beuschett was instantly killed and another badly injured and a third is missing.

Blackburn Selected by the Caucus.

The Democratic joint legislative caucus at Frankfort, Ky., nominated Senator Blackburn as a candidate of that party to succeed himself in the United States senate. The deciding ballot resulted: Blackburn 37; McCreary, 13; Brown, 6.

No Caucus Necessary.

It has been decided that there is to be no Republican caucus for the United States Senatorship in Ohio. Ex-Governor J. B. Foraker is the only candidate, and it would be a useless proceeding to hold a meeting to decide upon a nominee.

Daring Robbery at Laporte.

At Laporte, Ind., the clothing house of Matt Kreidler was entered between 6 and 7 o'clock the other evening and the safe robbed of $800. The robbers found the safe unlocked and the vault containing the money was carried away. The proprietor had left the store to go to supper, the thieves taking advantage of his absence to loot the safe. Shortly after 7 o'clock a well dressed man, supposed to be the robber, boarded a west bound train for Chicago.

A Cardinal Dead.

Rome special: Cardinal Guiseppe Maria Granaiello died in this city. He was born in 1836 and created a cardinal in 1893.

BOLD ROBBERY.

Bank Robbers Secure Between $8,000 and $15,000.

One of the boldest as well as one of the most successful robberies that has ever occurred in Fulton County, Ohio, took place at Fayette. The Bank of Fayette was entered and every cent of the cash in the safes and the valuable papers were stolen. The robbery was not discovered until the time for the bank to open next morning. By that hour, of course, there was no clue whatever to the thieves, who left not a single trace of their identity.

The value of the money and papers taken is not definitely known, the officials of the bank observing the greatest reticence. It is believed, however, that at least $8,000 and probably as high as $15,000 was obtained. The robbers, of whom it is thought there were three, pried open the front door of the bank with jimmies. Once inside they must have quickly set about to open the safes. The door of one safe was completely torn off by the concussion.

Murdered by There Robbers.

Henry Baker, a veteran from the Dayton (Ohio) Soldiers' Home, was murdered by three colored men at Marion, Ind. Baker, who is a member of Company C, Eighty-second Indiana Intantry, was the guest of friends, with whom he was enjoying the evening at a saloon near the Soldiers' Home. During the evening he had cause to go out, when the colored men followed him and commenced to go through his pockets. Baker attempted to fight for his life, but a broken head and several bruises on the body, made with a club, soon floored him. The robbers made their escape with his money and watch. Baker was found several hours afterwards with hands and feet frozen in an unconscious condition. He cannot live.

Russia and France Will Help Germany.

A special cable dispatch from Berlin says: The Emperor has summoned to Potsdam the Chancellor Admiral Korr, Chief of the Navy, and Admiral Von Holtmann, Chief of the Admiralty, to concert military measures to be taken in the event of England's landing troops to occupy the Transvaal. The Emperor and the Czar of Russia exchanged dispatches regarding the Kaiser's telegram to President Kruger and the resulting conflict with England and Russia's co-operation with Germany is already assured. France will regulate her policy by that of Russia. The Transvaal representatives here are attempting to obtain French support.

The Queen Secures Peace.

The London Telegraph publishes a dispatch from Berlin stating that Emperor William received by special messenger on January 8, an autograph letter from Queen Victoria. The Emperor's autograph reply is now in the Queen's hands. It is understood that the Emperor remarked to his entourage that he believed the terms of his reply would be acceptable. The writer of the dispatch affirms that the letters referred to the political situation, and that his majesty in his reply, in brief, general terms, also confirms the assurances given by the German ministers that the Emperor had no intention of casting a slur on the dignity of England.

Trestle Collapses.

Cleveland special: The Akron, Bedford and Cleveland Interurban Railway Company's bridge which spanned Tinker's Creek, just southeast of Bedford township, collapsed, and a powerful 100-horsepower motor on which were three trainmen and attached to which was a heavily laden Pennsylvania Company's coal car, plunged to the bed of the creek, sixty feet below. William Young, one of the trainmen, was instantly killed. He was crushed and ground beneath the falling cars, until he was scarcely recognizable. The other two trainmen, Haymaker and Gieb, miraculously escaped instant death. They were both so badly injured, however, that they may die.

Sensational Arrests at Johannesburg.

Johannesburg special: Twenty-two members of the reform committee, including Col. Rhodes, brother of Cecil Rhodes, Sir Drummond Duncan, Mr. Lionel Phillips, and Sir Sauer, all Englishmen, were arrested at their club on the charge of high treason, and conveyed under escort to Pretoria. Perfect quiet prevails here. The population is indifferent and the Uitlanders are disarming.

British Activity.

Information has reached the Navy Department that the British Government is displaying great activity in storing coal at its well fortified naval coaling and supply stations of St. Lucia, near the Venezuelan coast. The disturbed relations between Great Britain and Germany are given as the reason for the activity.

New War Vessels.

Mr. Cullom in the Senate has introduced a bill providing for the construction and equipment of two steam revenue cutters of the first class for service on the Pacific Coast, at a cost not to exceed $400,000 each; also for two steam revenue cutters of the first class for use on the great lakes at a cost of $200,000 each.

Emperor William Firm.

Berlin special: At a special audience Dr. Leydes, Secretary of State of the Transvaal, had with Emperor William, his Majesty declared that he would not recognize any claim of suzerainty over the Transvaal. Great Britain, by the treaty of 1884, claims suzerainty over the Transvaal Republic.

LONDON'S WAR SCARE

GERMANY AND ENGLAND MAY FIGHT.

Great Britain Active in Military Preparations—Feeling Against Germany Gains Intensity—Emperor Declines to Recognize English Suzerainty.

Crisis in African Affairs.

London is for war. Jingoism, hysterical in its fierce intensity, has taken possession of the populace, and nothing will satisfy them but the immediate shedding of German blood. At least this is the tenor of late London cablegrams and newspaper editorials. The same rash cries that startled and thrilled the excited Parisians in 1870 are awakening the echoes of the murky and fog-enshrouded metropolis. The hoarse shouts are but a paraphrase of the impetuous Gallic yells, "On to Berlin." Tory newspapers of the ultra-conservative stripe are to blame for this menacing tumult. For days they have been fulsomely extolling the buccaneering exploits of Jameson against the Boers. The Times has fatuously stated in a double-leaded leading article that the "march will remain a glorious tradition for the Anglo-Saxon race," while the St. James' Gazette says it relieves to a certain extent the dark odium attaching to Majuba Hill.

But the principal cause of the excitement is a dispatch from Berlin that the German emperor has declared, in no ambiguous phrases, that he will no longer recognize the treaty of 1884, thus expressing an intent to dash aside the British claim of suzerainty over the South African republic.

Hardly had this news been published when the Globe issued an extra edition announcing under "scare headlines" that urgent and extreme activity prevailed in the war office and in the naval dockyards, and adding the following startling tidings:

"A dispatch received from the military camp at Aldershot says that the general belief, almost backed by proof, prevails there that the authorities are considering the mobilizing of the army reserves and part of the militia. The men employed in the ordnance stores are all very busy."

This announcement simply intensified the inflamed condition of the popular mind; and John Bull, as represented by the average pot-valiant Londoner, shouted in raucous tones his utter detestation and defiance of the German ruler and his army.

The activity in diplomatic circles has seldom been equaled, a correspondent says. It is feared if the dispatches announcing the bellicose intention of Emperor William be true that Europe will be in a blaze in a few days. But there must be no doubt touching the attitude of the Salisbury government. It will most assuredly fight for the maintenance of the treaty, and no diplomatic argument will be potent enough to swerve it from that stern determination. Already Sir Frank Lascelles, the British ambassador, has been instructed to demand of the imperial German minister of state, Von Bieberstein, an explanation touching these astounding reports affecting the attitude of the kaiser. This demand is expected to counteract in a measure the querulous note of the Berlin government in regard to the bushwhacking operations of Cecil Rhodes and his ministers in South Africa.

Emperor William's declaration to Dr. W. J. Leyds, Secretary of State for the Transvaal, that he would not recognize any claim of suzerainty over the Boer republic, coming as it does so soon after the note to President Krueger congratulating him on the defeat of the English invaders under the lead of Dr. Jameson, is particularly offensive to British pride. Popular feeling in both countries is at an excitable pitch. The feeling in Great Britain, according to the London correspondents, is much more intense and bitter than it was at any time while the Venezuelan question was at the front.

Great Britain boldly annexed the Transvaal to Cape Colony in 1877, at a time when the republic was in difficulty with the native Africans. Although the annexation was said to be in response to a request from residents in the Transvaal, the Boers soon rebelled against British rule. By the treaty of 1884 the independence of the South African republic was recognized in all matters relating to internal affairs. But Great Britain retained a suzerainty over the country, and it was through her ministers that all foreign negotiations of the republic were to be conducted.

In the eyes of the British, therefore, Emperor William is overstepping the bounds of courtesy in presuming to communicate with the Government of the Transvaal at all, except through the ministers of her majesty's government. William's declaration that he will recognize no suzerainty over the Transvaal, which the British claim by virtue of treaty, is an added insult that cannot be passed over without a serious humiliation to the pride of Great Britain.

The situation is complicated, too, by the unsettled condition of affairs in South Africa, from whence trustworthy information is exceedingly meager. Cecil Rhodes has resigned the premiership of Cape Colony, but the reason for the action is not yet apparent. Once before, when there was an intimation of interference from the home government with the action of the chartered company in conducting a war of aggression against the Matabeles, Rhodes, in threat, suggested the possibility of a British South African republic independent of Great Britain. It is highly improbable that Jameson's raid into the Transvaal was made without the knowledge and connivance of Rhodes. Possibly that uncrowned king of South Africa hopes for an early realization of his dreams of federation, and has resigned in order that he may not be hampered by official responsibilities.

HIS IS A SOFT SNAP.

HOW THE AVERAGE MEMBER OF CONGRESS KILLS TIME.

A Pen Picture of His Daily Life in Washington—Tells Stories, and Is an All-Around "Good Fellow"—His Secretary Works.

The Daily Grind.

Washington correspondence:

THE work of the average member of Congress is very light this session. Only the leaders have the slightest prospect of hard work before them. Most of the committees will have nothing to do. The Committee on Ways and Means, which is usually hard worked, has finished its labors, as far as any one can see, and can look complacently upon the future. The committees on elections have a great deal to do, but the work is divided up, and it is expected that all will be soon over with. The Appropriations Committee has its usual work, and those other committees having appropriation bills cannot enjoy immunity from labor, but beyond that there is hardly any work in sight that the committee will have to do, unless, to get campaign material, they take up investigations. Bills are numerous enough, but very few of them demand attention, or are likely to receive any. Upon two or three members on the Democratic side and half a dozen or so on the Republican side will fall the labor of looking out for party politics.

The average member of the House has ample time to think over his own affairs, or to study and prepare himself for a career, or to devote to theater going and pleasure. He does not have to get to the Capitol much before 12 o'clock, unless he happens to have been assigned to one of the few working committees, and he does not always have to go to the Capitol at all. The average man breakfasts about 9 o'clock. Half an hour before this his morning's mail is brought around. It will consist of maybe half a dozen newspapers, a lot of pamphlets, tracts and advertisements, and from ten to twenty-five letters. All the newspapers except the local paper of his own home goes into the waste basket promptly. These are followed by the pamphlets and advertisements, and finally by some of the letters. Most of the latter have to be answered. Some of them require something to be looked up at the departments or elsewhere, and involve work before they can be answered. Generally, the reply can be made at once in a line and all of the writing is done by the Congressman's stenographer, provided at Government expense. After the letters are given to the member reads his home paper and looks over the principal features of one of the Washington papers, and then sets out for the day. If he has a committee meeting at the Capitol, all this morning work will be shortened and much of it postponed until later in the day. If there is no meeting of this sort demanding his attention, the hour of his arrival at the Capitol is regulated largely by his fondness for being seen in his seat, or for mingling in the gossip ante-session assemblage.

At the Capitol.

Whatever time he has to spare between his arrival and the hour of prayer is devoted to gossip with his colleagues. Near the elevator, by the basement entrance principally used, is the House postoffice. Here the member stops on his way to the hall of the House and gets his second morning mail. He may get from two to half a dozen letters. These he usually reads during the session of the House. If he did not have a clerk, he would have to answer them as he read them, but, as it now is, a note on the back will remind him of their contents, and he puts them away until he can get hold of his stenographer.

If the member has any bills he has been asked to introduce, or which he has had his stenographer prepare for him, he hands them to one of the clerks at the desk or puts them in the receptacle designated for bills at some time during the day. If he has a bill or resolution he wants unanimous consent to have considered during the morning hour, he endeavors to see the speaker before the House meets, to arrange for recognition, and if he does not succeed in this he takes his place in the semi-circular space in front of the speaker's desk immediately after prayer, and, with bill held in the air, awaits the speaker's recognition, meanwhile making frantic efforts to catch that evasive orb, the speaker's eye. When the recognition has been arranged beforehand, he has but to stand in his place on the floor and address the speaker. During the session, after the morning hour, the member seldom pays any attention to the regular proceedings unless they personally interest him.

KILLING TIME IN THE CORRIDOR.

His time is then demanded between reading letters or the newspapers, looking over the Congressional Record, discussing some question or exchanging gossip and stories with some of his colleagues, at his seat, in the cloak room or in the speaker's lobby, receiving visitors in the lobbies, going to lunch and making an occasional visit to the other wing of the Capitol to see his Senator. If he is easily entertained, and not given to talking, he may lean back in his chair most of the day, with his hands folded, and listen in an abstracted, inattentive sort of way to what is going on about him, without participating in it or fully realizing what it is. Sometimes seized with a fit of industry or with the view of having his evening free, he may retire to the speaker's lobby or to a committee room, with his clerk, and finish off his correspondence. An occasional trip to the restaurant may relieve the monotony, or he may saunter through the corridors, seeing the crowd and being seen, or he may sit for awhile with a visitor in one of the galleries. Usually as much time is occupied in going to the corridors in response to cards as in any other way. It is seldom that he pays any attention to the business of the House, except on some special occasion, or when he has a direct interest in what is up. After adjournment he either gets another mail at the postoffice or it is delivered at his lodgings, and this again demands his attention. All told, he may have a dozen letters during the day, or he may have fifty. The lighter mail of the afternoon he may dispose of before dinner or he may let it go over until morning. After dinner it is a call, the theater, visitors, an evening in the parlor with the ladies, a loaf in the hotel corridors, or a hunt through volumes in preparation of a speech held in contemplation, to be delivered at some time, according to sentiment and circumstances. The theaters and the hotel lobbies are the most common places of resort in the evening.

GETTING THE MAIL.

THE G. A. R. CITY.

Veterans of the War Founding a Town In Southern Georgia.

Many veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic are again "marching through Georgia," says an Atlanta correspondent. This time they are coming on a peaceful mission, and are coming to stay. They have started in to build a city in the southern part of the State. Thirty-five thousand acres of fine rolling land have been purchased and options have been secured on 65,000 more. The co-operative colony, for such it will be, is located in Irwin County, on the ground made historic by the capture of Jefferson Davis after the fall of Richmond. The colony now has a population of 3,000 which it is believed will increase to 25,000 before the close of the year.

A town site has been laid off covering 1,000 acres. The streets are being graded, sewers put in, and a water supply is being provided by a system of artesian wells. It was not intended for the settlers to go in until after the first of the year or along toward spring, but the "sooners" could not be held back. However, upon their arrival they were corralled in one corner of the reservation and given permission to put up any temporary buildings they pleased. Hundreds of shacks made of rough pine boards have been nailed together, and the immigrants are roughing it. But they are all contented and believe thoroughly in the future of their experiment.

The idea of a Grand Army colony was started by Philip Fitzgerald, a pension attorney and capitalist of Indianapolis. He says that he found the old soldiers complaining of the cold in winter. The exposure of their campaigns is telling on them in their old age and they cannot stand what they once could in the way of snow and ice. There was a very prevalent wish among the veterans for a home amid congenial neighbors in a mild climate. So a co-operative colony was projected.

Thus far the members of the colony represent a population of 54,000, the most of which is expected to migrate southward and settle at and around Fitzgerald. It is a thoroughly organized movement, and has a great deal of significance not only for the South, but also for the West. Many mechanics from Pullman, Ill., have joined the movement. They come for work and a home which they can get for very little money. The land costs only $3.50 an acre, and it is good land, too, covered with the long-leaf pine and the best fruit soil in the South.

An important order for the expedition of the mails across the Mexican border has been issued by Assistant Postmaster General Neilson, providing for the first exchange of the mails of railway postoffices of the United States and Mexico. This does away with the stopping of the mails at the postoffice of both countries along the line and effects a saving of twenty-four hours and more in some instances. The mail allowed to pass without interference is restricted to unregistered letters, postal cards and periodical publications.

McBeth and McCoy lamp-chimney factories at Elwood have resumed work. They employ 1,200 men.

Rev. Joseph Messbaum, Elkhart priest who died recently, in his will gave each priest present at his obsequies $5.

Municipal ownership of electric lights at Logansport is said to cost consumers but half as much as private ownership.

The Elwood City School Board will at one advertise for bids on a $15,000 school building and will let the contract Jan. 27.

Richmond is still engaged in an attempt to find natural gas. The drill is down 2,100 feet, and it will be sunk 400 feet deeper if necessary.

The Pennsylvania bottle works at Anderson has secured the contract to make whisky bottles for South Carolina. That State manages its own liquor business.

One of the oldest women in the State is Mrs. Emaline Post of Aurora. She boasts of 112 years, good health and ability to do her own work. She was born in Ireland in 1783.

On account of the weak pressure of natural gas as furnished by an Indianapolis syndicate, the consumers in Lebanon are very much dissatisfied and are talking of organizing a home company.

Muncie bankers are ready to except $125,000 worth of the government bonds. The Union National and the Delaware County National will accept $50,000 each, and the Merchants' National $25,000.

Sherman F. Chandler, formerly a Richmond printer, who was sent to the penitentiary from Hamilton County for shooting at Miss Bird Davis, now has friends interceding in his behalf for a pardon.

Harry McDougal of New Albany, engineer on the Airline local freight, was badly injured near Princeton. His engine was derailed and overturned between two stations while running at a high rate of speed.

Thomas Sutton, a young man living near Selma, was accidentally killed while cutting timber on the farm of Louis Keesling. When the tree started to fall he ran the wrong way, and was caught and his head crushed.

At a meeting of the Lebanon directors of the proposed new Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, armory in that city, it was decided to commence the erection of the new building at once. The estimated cost is $10,000.

The German Baptist Fire Insurance Company of Wayne, Fayette, and Union Counties, with headquarters at Hagerstown, began to issue policies last week, with nearly $100,000 worth of property offered to begin with.

The free scholarships at Purdue University apportioned to Boone County are going a-begging. S. T. Stephenson, President of the Farmers' Institute, has called the newspapers to his aid in finding young men willing to accept.

At Hagerstown a very strong gas well has been drilled in by the local gas company. It is the best in that section and will supply sufficient fuel to the consumers there, who, so far this winter, have not had enough to be comfortable.

The English-speaking catholics of Hammond are asking Bishop Rademacher of Fort Wayne, to allow them to have a church for themselves. The priest approves the division, as well as many of the congregation speaking a foreign tongue.

Ed Shannon, a convict who escaped from the Prison South, Oct. 6, 1893, has just been captured at New Orleans. He was sent from Terre Haute, March 3, 1892, to serve four years for robbery. He has a reputation as one of the worst hotel thieves in the country.

While performing his duty as trackwalker on the C., H. & D. Railroad at Connersville, John Davitt was instantly killed by a freight train that had broken in two. The last section of five cars passed over him. He was 53 years old and leaves a wife and family.

Lebanon expects to have free mail delivery next year. During the first three-quarters of the current year the postage sales at the Lebanon office reached $4,826.41. As the law only requires $6,000, it will only be necessary for the sales during the present quarter to be $1,183.59 to reach the required amount. From present indications they will run several hundred dollars above this sum.

Ed Taylor, who killed officer Knox at Vevay two weeks ago, was taken to the Madison County jail the other night, for safe keeping. Shortly before that time a mob moved on Vevay jail to string him up. Sheriff Banta received warning, and before the mob arrived the officers, with Taylor, were on the way to Madison. The Madison jail is being prepared against an attack, for it is said an effort will be made to get at Taylor.

Governor Matthews has granted a pardon to Harry J. Lewis, who was sent to the Northern Prison in July, 1894, for two years, for passing a forged check for $25 at the Grand Hotel, Indianapolis. Lewis was a stranger in the city, and pleaded guilty to the indictment. The Mayor of Michigan City was well acquainted with him, and interceded with the Governor. Ex-Warden French and the present Warden, Harley, joined in the recommendation for a pardon. He has made a good prison record, and investigation shows that he had a good character before his conviction, and that the cause of the forgery was desperation on account of being among strangers without money.

As a result of a mad dog scare in the south part of Boone County and the north portion of Hendricks County, upward of fifty dogs have been killed. A horse belonging to William Cook, suffering with hydrophobia, had to be killed and other stock bitten has been confined to close quarters.

During the year 1895 there were seventy-three deaths in the city of Wabash proper and twenty-three on the south side, a total of ninety-six. This, in a population of nearly 9,000, is a remarkably low death rate. Since 1863, when the principal cemetery of Wabash was opened, there have been 1,646 interments therein.

Boone County farmers have tried boiled water as a remedy for hog cholera since Prof. D. W. Dennis of Earlham College, recommended it. They are surprised at its result, many marvelous cures being related. The new cure has resulted in a good undertone in the prices of shoats. They have been a drug on the market since the ravages of cholera.

There was a wreck on the Michigan divison of the Big Four near Wabash. Freight No. 61, south-bound, stalled on the hill and the engine went to the summit with part of the train. Returning rapidly, the engine crashed into the rear section, wrecking two cars and the tank of the locomotive. No one was injured. The track was blocked several hours.

But Valentine Graeme would not hear of any compromise. He was stage-manager, and was especially bent upon these theatricals being a success. Nor had he now any fear for the result. Colonel Prinsep was one of the best amateur actors in India, and particularly good at the love-making, which was the principal part of the small comedietta they had chosen, while Jane, too, had considerable talent, as she had shown at Simla.

The first rehearsal she had with Colonel Prinsep was a decided failure. She had gone through the piece with Val Graeme several times and had been pronounced by him letter-perfect. Now she missed her cues, stumbled over the simplest sentences, and by her general awkwardness and stupidity sent down the enthusiasm of the stage-manager to zero.

Nor was the next rehearsal more promising. Jane spoke her words correctly, but infused no spirit into the part. And this time Colonel Prinsep was also impracticable, repeating his lover-like speeches with parrot-like precision, but avoiding carefully any sentimental inflection.

Barry Larron, who was generally present when they rehearsed, guessed the reason of the stiffness which was mutually assumed whenever any tenderness was required. He knew that they loved each other still, and therefore dared not trust themselves to pretend what they really felt. Yet he did not give up hope.

And so the evening arrived. The time had been so short that they had no full-dress rehearsal; and the station, being a small one, would scarcely furnish an audience for two performances.

"It will be only for this once, so we can make a supreme effort," said Colonel Prinsep to her as they stood alone in one of the wings waiting for the rising of the curtain.

She was trembling visibly; but as he spoke encouragingly she tried to smile.

"You must not be nervous," he went on. "After all, it is only acting, and no one will misunderstand if you throw yourself into your part, as I know you could."

The bell rang; and a minute later she was called to go on the stage.

A storm of applause broke from the audience as she stood before them in her old-fashioned, short-waisted frock and sandal shoes, her white arms almost hidden by her long mittens, and her brown hair gathered on to the top of her head with a huge comb. The enthusiasm increased when Colonel Prinsep came on, boyishly impulsive, and betraying the love he felt in every glance and gesture. And Jane was so daintily coquettish, so bewitching even in her declared heartlessness, and again so pathetic in her despair when he left her; and the curtain fell as she laid her head on the table and sobbed aloud.

They were encored vociferously, Jane responding to the call, led on by Colonel Prinsep, her cheeks crimson from excitement, and her eyes still red from the tears that had really fallen.

Then the band played during the twenty minutes' interval, which was supposed to be equivalent to thirty years.

Jane was now a sweet old lady. Quakerishly robed in plain gray satin, prematurely silver-haired, and leaning for support on a gold-headed stick. Her voice, which before had been so joyous, was subdued into habitual pathos, and manner and appearance both spoke of the sadness which had pervaded her life.

The years had dealt very differently with her lover. The romantic boy had grown into a crotchety, matter-of-fact, middle-aged man. Yet her loyalty never faltered, though it was keenest pain to see how entirely he had forgotten the events of the past which by her had been so treasured.

Jane was acting almost beyond herself. It was all so like a dream that for the moment she believed it might be actually true that she and Stephen Prinsep had met in the after-time of their own life, she loyal as her nature was, he oblivious of everything save the merest details of time and place.

In his careless, boisterous way he declared she had never loved him, and as she sadly put aside the doubt, an accent so pitiful and tender came into her voice that Colonel Prinsep himself forgot that it was acting, and involuntarily glanced into her face. There he saw the whole truth written so plainly that he was on the point of answering very differently from the book. Recollecting himself, he tried to recall his part, but for a moment failed.

The prompter came to their rescue, and to most it had appeared only a momentary forgetfulness of their parts; but to two of those who were looking on it seemed clear enough. Major Larron bit his lip with rage.

The other who had noticed, and understood what passed, had no such command of facial expression.

He stood up, his eyes glaring, his face distorted with the violent passions that moved him. Several of the men around him looked at him curiously, but he never heeded them, he saw and knew only what his jealousy had shown him. The play was ended, and when Jane had spoken her last word she allowed her glance to sweep the audience, but it was arrested by the first object on which it fell—the tall figure and passion-distorted face of Jacob Lynn.

She shuddered so violently that her hand, being in Colonel Prinsep's, he detected her agitation, and led her at once off the stage more quickly than was laid down in the book.

"The strange thing about it all," confided Valentine Graeme that same night to Major Larron, who rode back with him to their quarters, "was, that they did their best just where I expected them to fail—in the love-making."

"Humph!" ejaculated the Hon. Barry, and made no other remark.

CHAPTER XXIX.

A lovely morning in November—not November as it is known in England, with leaden skies and bleak, biting winds that whistle mournfully among bare trees—but November as it is in India, warm still, yet gratefully cool after the exhausting heat that has gone before; the sun shining in the cloudless heavens, bright-hued birds singing in the leafy branches, all nature fluttering and trembling beneath the caressing touches in the ambient air.

It was the 7th of November. Jane never forgot the date, though the thought had crossed her mind several times during the morning how uneventful the days were, each resembling the other in its dullness.

Nearly a week had passed since the theatricals, and she had seen nothing of Colonel Prinsep. Though the weather had been fine, once or twice there had been a shower of rain in the evening.

The clock had just struck four on that especial afternoon of that date, when she heard footsteps in the veranda. It was the hour Stephen Prinsep had generally chosen for his visits, when they were engaged; and she thought it might be the Colonel now. But when a few moments passed and no servant came to announce him, she opened the sitting-room door and went into the hall. No one was there, but almost immediately Mrs. Knox came out of the quartermaster's writing-room looking flushed and put out.

A native came running from the adjoining compound belonging to a house which, on account of the reputation it had gained for unhealthiness, was unoccupied, and now formed a convenient short cut to the parade-ground.

Looking up with casual interest, Mrs. Knox's attention was arrested by his terrified expression, and she stopped short in her complaints.

"What is it", she asked, sharply.

The man, a respectable-looking servant of the Mussulman caste, was for some time unintelligible by reason of his fright, and could only fold his hands and implore pardon for the fault he declared he had not committed. It was only after an impatient cross-examination that Mrs. Knox elicited the fact that a "Sahib" was lying dead some few yards away.

"More likely tipsy," was her contemptuous observation.

It took them some minutes to reach the spot indicated, and then when they came within a few yards of it, Mrs. Knox hurried on, to spare her daughter what might be an unnecessary shock. But as she came up and saw who it was, she forgot every consideration in her own horror. The first glance had assured her that the servant's supposition was correct—the man was indeed dead; and as she had swiftly scrutinized his features another truth was borne upon her, that he had not died by his own hand. She could not repress a scream.

"It is Jacob Lynn—murdered!" she cried, and turning, was just in time to catch her daughter in her arms or she would have fallen to the ground.

"Mother, say he is not dead! It can't be true! He is ill, hurt; but not that—not that!"

Against her firm conviction Mrs. Knox knelt down, and laid her hand upon his heart, his pulse, and even upon his forehead, from which the blood was trickling slowly down. He was warm still, and for a moment she thought he was alive. She raised his head upon her knee, and sent the native for water in the almost forlorn hope that it might be of use.

For the first time Jane acknowledged the good looks which to every one else had been always patent; and looked upon him with pity that though in nowise akin to love, was yet so tender that the tears came welling into her eyes as she thought of his lost opportunities and possibilities of good.

Whose hand was it that had struck him down? The question fell upon her mind's ear so clearly that involuntarily she turned to see if any one had spoken.

They were alone still, her mother and she, with all that remained of the man to whom she had been engaged, and to whom she had been so dear. He would never vex her more! She wished she had been less impatient of that love which she had never valued. Now that it had vanished from her life, she felt it as a loss. Yet only a week before she dreaded his very presence, and begged Stephen Prinsep's aid in delivering her from his attentions.

"I will get rid of him somehow, never fear," he had assured her.

Was it possible that in that lay the answer to the question which was troubling her? Had he taken these terrible means of removing Jacob Lynn from her path forever? Oh, heaven forbid!

Mrs. Knox laid the head of the handsome hussar gently on the ground again and rose to her feet.

"It is no good, Jenny—he is dead!"

And as she spoke some troopers from the barracks came running up. Full of conjecture as to the cause of his death, they surrounded him at once, and as they did so, a sudden remembrance struck Jane that, before their feet had obliterated it, there had been the mark of a boot so distinctly printed on the soft, sandy soil that a triangular cut in the sole had been clearly visible. There were no such marks on the boots of Jacob Lynn.

The only clew lay in Jane's keeping, and it seemed to her as though the footprint had been seen by her alone—that she, who had been the indirect cause of his death, might be also its avenger.

A court of inquiry was convened by the Colonel, but nothing transpired at it beyond the fact that the murdered man had once been engaged to marry the quartermaster's daughter. This lent to the affair an adventitious interest, and public curiosity was proportionately disappointed when it was decided that to call Mrs. Knox and her daughter to give evidence would be needlessly distressing them.

"Died by the hand of some person or persons unknown," was the verdict.

And so the matter was allowed to rest. The deceased had no relations to insist upon further investigation, and the general opinion seemed to be that all inquiry would be of no avail.

Yet his death had been a great shock to the whole regiment, and the sympathy felt was shown by the number of those who followed him to the cemetery. Most of the officers were present—among them the Colonel and the Adjutant—and just as the service began the wife and daughter of the quartermaster came up quietly and stood beside the grave. Mrs. Knox was darkly dressed, though not actually in black, out of regard to the melancholy occasion; but Jane was in rigid mourning, and her pale face looked the whiter by contrast with her sable gown.

The quartermaster was not with them; and when the funeral rites were ended Stephen Prinsep moved toward them with the intention of seeing them home. But Jane, with a gesture of repugnance that he could not understand, still less account for, shrunk back behind her mother and drew her quickly away.

For a moment their eyes had met, and the Colonel stood inert, utterly incapable of speech or action, transfixed by the look of fear strangely mingled with contempt that she had cast upon him.

When he recovered himself, she and her mother were out of sight, and the troops moving noisily away reminded him that there was no reason he should remain behind.

THE EMINENT DEAD OF 1895.

BEAVERS AS MECHANICS.

These Animals Rank Next to Man as Practical Engineers.

The best, most skillful, and adroit engineers and practical mechanics upon the face of the earth, next after man, are the beavers, whose intelligence in these directions is only equaled by their providence in laying up stores against the conventional "rainy day."

It is fairly proper to state that man conceived his first idea of water power from the operations of these kings of rodents. The latter were, of course, headed off by man in the invention of water wheels and other machinery and appliances for the utilization of the power thus obtained, but man selects a dam site for the same reason that the beaver does—viz.: That he may hold the water and get out of it all he can.

In other words, the beaver goes to the trouble of felling trees, cuts them into blocks of from two to four feet in length, bears them to the water, sinks them, plasters and packs them down in mud, and raises the wall above high water mark solely that it may hold and retain in all seasons a sufficient quantity to enable it to live comfortably and enjoy a daily bath without paying taxes for the same.

There never was an ancient setting hen that more pertinaciously clung to its nest after the eggs had been removed again and again than does the beaver to its work of building. Brutal and inconsiderate man may tear down and destroy the work of its hands, but with the coming of night and the departure of the enemy it will proceed to fell trees and to saw them into proper lengths for repair of damages with as cheerful a heart as the well-worked donkey turns homeward at dinner time.

The beaver it not confined to North America only, but is also encountered in northern parts of Europe and Asia; yet has gained a firmer foothold on this continent, or else is more successful in eluding the pertinacious search of remorseless trappers. Unfortunately for the beaver, it gives forth an odoriferous substance which it carries in two sacs located near the base of its tail and is known in commerce as castoreum. This is a valuable perfume and offers aditional inducement to zeal on the part of hunters who would scarcely need this incentive, because, as nobody has to be told, the beaver is itself very valuable. What, however, with the castoreum and the fur also in prospect, the hunter will swim streams and climb mountains, go through fire, and risk the tomakawk of the Indians in his search after them. While hunted and pursued, driven from pillar to post, still the beaver is fruitful, and, except in localities where man has overrun stream as well as land, is moderately plentiful.

No Counterfeits Allowed.

A very delicate legal question as to the right of a citizen to have counterfeit money in his possession for the purpose of conducting a legitimate business has arisen in the case of the firm of Dickerman & Holler, publishers in this city of a periodical devoted to the description of counterfeit bank notes.

Mr. Dickerman was recently arrested in Philadalphia, charged with violation of a Federal statute which prevents the holding of any fac-similes of currency issued by the government. Mr. Dickerman proved conclusively and to the complete satisfaction of the officers who made the arrest that the counterfeit money he had was in his possession for no ulterior purpose, but, on the contrary, was held for the purpose of warning the public and preventing the general circulation of bogus currency.

It is part of Mr. Dickerman's business to visit banks and bankers and explain to them in person how new counterfeits may be detected. In order to do this he is obliged to get hold of a counterfeit note and make a thorough examination of it. He has always been careful not to permit any of this bogus money to get out of his possession, and there was not the slightest danger of it getting into circulation. He had quite a collection of these notes and they formed part of his stock in trade and were certainly personal property. Nevertheless, the government agents confiscated them and destroyed them.—New York Mail and Express.

DISMANTLED WHITE CITY.

Fate of the Beautiful Statuary at the World's Fair.

The court of honor does not look so grand now as it did when it was surrounded with the white palaces or when illuminated at night with thousands of incandescent lamps or tinted with all the colors of the rainbow from the electric fountains. The buildings are gone. MacMonies' grand work of art is gone. All is gone save a lone Neptune and a shivering horse or two, and, rising majestically above the ruins, unharmed by the fire or winter, the statue of the republic. The monumental figure is in white now instead of gold, but with only the sky for a background it shows its proportions and lines to better effect now than before.

Other statues have not fared so well. Most of them were destroyed in the various fires which laid waste the entire central portion of the grounds, from the terminal station to the lake. If Columbus should come to Chicago and take a train out to Jackson Park in order to get away from his specter on the lake front he could stroll all around the court of honor, where in former days he was so populous, and only find one of himself. The only Columbus standing is the one in front of the machinery building, and inasmuch as this is headless, it is doubtful if the real Columbus would recognize it. If he did he would beg to be given a Christian burial or at least to be taken to the convent of La Rabida, in the bare rooms of which he might find a more congenial atmosphere.—Chicago Chronicle.

According to Custom.

Even after entering the Government schools Indian children are not at all ashamed of their odd names, but seem to be as proud of them as if they were Smith or Jones. The following list is furnished by a teacher in one of the schools of the Oklahoma Territory: Lucy Little Standing Buffalo, Atkins White Sail, Anna Bull Frog, Lee Little Turtle, Marie Buffalo Head, Clarence Black Hair Horse, Jennie Boy Chief, Grace Yellow Flower, Mary Big Goose, John White Eagle, Martha Crief Pipe, Mary Cries for Ribs, Cora Frizzle Head.

The Cheerful Idiot.

"Which city is it that has the name of the city of homes?" asked the boarder who is always forgetting.

"It is a little doubtful just now," chipped in the cheerful idiot, "whether the title of 'city of Holmes' belongs to Philadelphia or Chicago."—Indianapolis Journal.

Swallows in All Seasons.

It is stated that swallows have been in England during every month of the year. As partial confirmation of this assertion a correspondent writes to a London publication that he saw two at Whitely on the evening of Nov. 2.

The way of the transgressor is sometimes a puzzle to the detective.

CURIOUS MUSHROOM.

A Tropical Plant Called the Lady with the Veil.

One of the most curious formations of tropical vegetation is the Dictyophora, a sort of mushroom, which, while not poisonous, is not edible, on account of its disagreeable smell. This plant is very rare, and is found exclusively in the tropical zone. The cut shows a specimen grown in the Cameroon, in Equatorial Africa. The Lady with the Veil appears at first as a small egg-shaped mushroom; the stem then grows to a height of from five to seven inches, raising the first growth to the height. Afterwards the top turns to a hat-shaped, greenish and spongy structure, beneath which the white net of fibers grow downward. The top of it has a strong, disagreeable smell, which makes the plant noticeable for quite a distance.

The French-Hova War.

Since 1885 the French have claimed a protectorate over Madagascar, imposed simply by force of arms. For some years the Hova Government has been restless under this protection, under which the French claimed the sole right to conduct all foreign relations. Frenchmen were killed, French houses and plantation destroyed, without the Hova Government lifting a finger to prevent or punish. Concessions were made to foreigners, notably to John Waller, formerly American Consul in Madagascar. The French President protested, but in vain. Finally the French sent M. Le Myre de Viler as plenipotentiary. He proposed a new treaty, by which the Hova Government would admit every French claim and practically surrender to the French. The Hovas rejected it, and M. de Viler left the island, a proceeding equivalent to a declaration of war. Thereafter the French determined to conquer Madagascar, and to make it a dependency instead of a mere protectorate.

A Foxy Plagiarist.

It is not often that public speakers with a reputation own to the value of their delivery, but a certain popular preacher once found it very useful. Some wicked members of his congregation pressed him to publish his sermons, which they had good reason to believe were plagiarized from other divines. But he was even more aware of it than they were. "No," he said, "I will not do that, for if I publish them they would lose so much in manner."

The City of Mecca.

Mecca is a large city, and a principal one of the East. The temple of Mecca, to which so many pilgrims annually travel, forms a spacious square about a quarter of a mile in each direction, with a quadruple row of columns. A number of steps lead down to Mohammed's house, and within it is the black stone said to have been brought by the angel Gabriel for its foundation.

You'll hear of a woman one day that she is about to die, and the next day that she is giving a reception.

An Apiary in Prison.

The Arizona teritorial prison management has embarked in a bee-keeping experiment, in which the prisoners will be employed. An apiary, with twenty-five stands of bees, has been installed, and it is expected the business will prove profitable. A single hive at the prison is said to have last year produced 200 pounds of honey. It probably induces curious sensations and many vain longings in the prisoners to see the bees fly serenely and at will over the prison walls and yet return of their own volition to their home with-

The Railroad Sandwich.

W. R. Hart, Traveling Salesman, Dayton, O., says: "Like many other traveling men, I made the acquaintance of the railroad sandwich, who afterward introduced me to old 'General Dyspepsia,' an acquaintance I was unable to shake until I met with LYON'S SEVEN WONDERS, which I am happy to say, has put the unwelcome guest to flight. Dyspepsia and headaches are things of the past. I feel like a new man and can eat anything."

Could not Sleep at Night.

To whom it may concern:

Following an attack of la grippe and typhoid fever, I was left with a bad condition of blood and serious stomach troubles. I had no appetite, was exceedingly nervous and could not sleep at night. To tell the story briefly, LYON'S SEVEN WONDERS cured me.

Spencerville Institute

We have received a report of the Teachers' Institute held at Spencerville Saturday. It was sent in by Mr. B. F. Walter one of the teachers, and shows that the work done was fully up to the standard of work that Supt, Merica has been pushing all over the county. We only regret that our space will not permit publishing the full report so kindly furnished Every teacher of the township was present at roll call and J. P. Connell presided. Every teacher assisted in the work. Among these, were Mr Walter, Mr. Bonnell, Mr. Echolz. Mr E. Berry, Miss Murray, Miss Widney, Miss Eviston, Mr. Fisher, Mr. Kimes Mr. Lake, Mr. Henderson, Mr Hadsell Trustee Henderson was present, as was also Supt. Merica. To the latter was given a full share of the work, and reports give him credit for a most excellent discussion of the subjects before the meeting Of course the good people of the village and vicinity turned out as they usually do, and listened with great attention to the instructions given. Miss Widney was secretary, Miss Murray was made president of the next meeting which is to be held at St. Joe, Feb. 8. The COURIER heartily congratulate Concord township teachers and Co. Supt Merica on the good work they are doing.

Hiram Griswold.

Word came this morning that Hiram Griswold had died at Ligonier, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Charles McDonald. The remains were brought here for interment, reaching Auburn over the Lake Shore road on the afternoon train. He was the oldest and last surviving child of the late Wyllis Griswold. He he was a nephew of James Griswold. He was born in Connecticut, April 4, 1827, and died January, 11, 1896, his age being 68 years, 9 months and 7 days. Mr Griswold moved to Auburn about forty years ago and made this place his home till a few years ago, when he went to live at Ligonier, with his daughter, Mrs. Chas. E. McDonald, who had been his housekeeper for many years in Auburn. His wife died here, in 1869, and he never remarried He leaves one daughter, Mrs McDonald, and two sons, Alfred and Grant, as well as four grandchildren. He was one of the best known citizens of this place, being a contractor for building bridges, and similar work that took him all over the country.

Democratic Primaries

The democratic voters of the several townships will hold their township caucuses at the usual place of holding such meetings on

SATURDAY JANUARY 25, 1896

At the hour of 1:30 p. m. for the purpose of electing a committeeman for each precinct in such townships, such committeeman to serve for two years. Among the important duties that fall on these committeemen will be the election of a county central committeeman for the coming two years. It is hoped these meetings will be well attended.

JOHN F. SHUMAN,
Chairman Co. Com.

Populist Meeting.

There will be a meeting of the people's party of DeKalb Co., Saturday, Jan. 25, 1896, at Auburn, Ind., at 10 o'clock a m. for the election of county chairman, vice chairman, treasurer and secretary. Also to select delegates to attend the district convention. See to it, that the attendance is good. A good speaker will be present.

Mr. Walker Believes In The Germ Theory.

LOUISVILLE, KY, Jan. 10, 1896.

To the Editor of the COURIER.

"I read with a great deal of interest in your columns the letter of Mr. Foster, of Port Huron, Mich., in which he states that a French chemist nearly fifty years ago, adopted the theory that disease is caused by external or internal parasites especially Catarrh. I have always been a great believer in the "germ" theory of disease and have also always believed there was nothing like, even common camphor, that would as quickly kill these germs. That Pretzinger's Catarrh Balm carries a quantity of camphors is patent to anyone who smells it. I heartily endorse everything Mr. Foster has to say as to the remedy. It is universally used here in Kentucky by the best families and is a household remedy. It certainly cures a common case of cold over night. Mrs Walker had a very aggravated case of Catarrh, the mucus at night would drop down into the throat and nearly strangle her. These attacks sometimes lasted an hour. The first dose of Pretzinger's relieved instantly and permitted sleep. Its effects were like breathing into the nostrils the breath of life."

Chas L. Walker, 4th & Chestnut.

A small sample will be sent by Pretzinger Bros., Chemists Dayton, Ohio, on receipt of a 2 cent stamp.

Obituary.

George Wise, eldest son of William and Christena Wise, was born in Greentown, Stark county, Ohio, August 14 1825, and died in Spencerville, Indiana, January 2, 1896, aged 70 years, 4 months and 18 days.

In July, 1855, he was united in wedlock to Harriet Snyder, with whom he lived for more than fifty years. To this union were born five children, of whom two preceded him to the better land in their infant years. The wife of his youth and three children, namely, Mrs. Sarah E. Koontz, Franklin and Sylvester are left to mourn his loss In 1850 he moved to Indiana and settled near Spencerville, and lived in and near Spencerville until his death In his boyhood he united with the Methodist church and remained a faithful and consistent member. Father Wise was an affectionate husband, an indulgent father and an honored citizen. He has hoped to that reward offered to all who endure to the end, in the conflict of life.

We wish, through the columns of the COURIER to thank our neighbors and friends of Spencerville for all their kindness and sympathy. Showers in our recent bereavement, the death of my beloved husband. (And our father) We asure them that it is appreciated in the spirit in which it was given.

Court.

Work has been going on rapidly but we have not been able to get the reports very well as court begins early and then the books are in use, either by the judge and clerks. We have no cause of complaint however, as public business has the first right, and should have.

Pearl Feagler who was mixed up in a shooting case is "at home" with Sheriff Stroh as he could not give the required bail.

Frank Frederick got $20 and costs on a case in regard to selling liquor.

Frank Smith vs Wabash Ry. appealed from J. P. court, has been dismissed and costs paid.

The case about the Knight ditch is continued at request of both parties.

The case of Rosenberry vs Lake Shore road for damages has been called up, but little done

Jennie and William Fidler will fiddle only in solos hereafter, They are divorced.

The case to have Thomas Gard declared of unsound mind, was dismissed at cost of defendant.

M J. Thomas vs Childs et al to have title quited, judgment that title be quieted.

Case of Henry A. Brown to have Peter Humbarger declared of unsound mind, decided that Humbarger was still unsound.

The ejectment case of Zeigler vs Linder goes to Whitley county with 20 days time to get it in shape.

Wm. B. and Eretha Campbell were divorced.

The B. & O. Improvement Co. gets judgment of $561 against Venzey.

Ida M. Baltz receives a divorce from Geo. Baltz, with $25 to pay her attorney and $300 alimony, which is to be satisfied by his paying off a mortgage on lot No. 76 in Western Addition in Auburn and conveying the same to her. Belle Murray vs Ralph Miller asks for partition of property. J. J. VanAuken J. W. Platter and C. C. Walter are appointed commissioners to make the partition.

The jury came in this morning with a verdict in the Hudson case that has been going on for some days Lou Henning had bought out the grocery of Mr. Letsinger, and the latter agreed to work for Henning and not go into business there again. In other words he had sold Henning the good will of the establishment He did not go to work for Henning, but went into business for himself. So Henning sued for damages for failing to work for him and also for a certain sum to represent the good will. The jury gave Henning $150 to cover the amount that Letsinger should have worked for him, but nothing for the good will. Roby & Shuman were attorneys for Henning, and Baxter & Brown for Letsinger. The verdict is satisfactory to both sides, as Letsinger knew he could not avoid damages in some amount and was glad to get off with $150.

The case of Alonzo W. Ramsey vs Miller and Clark of Ashley, Ind. was tried Wednesday. This was an action upon a bond in attachment proceedings, which was brought by the defendants in this action against Mr Ramsey, and the attachment proceedings were dissolved. Then the plaintiff brought this action and recovered $130 damages. Baxter & Brown for plaintiff and Roby, Wickwire and Strayer for defendants.

Rebecca Gard vs Thomas Gard, is not done. It is for a divorce, and she has been allowed $25 for an attorney, $15 to be paid in February, and $10 later on.

Berdan vs Seely gets $637 on an account.

Edward Kelham as trustee of Keyser township, and overseer of poor, asks the court to allow him to apprentice a boy, Wm. Petoski, who has been abandoned by his parents, to Michael Shondel. Court having examined the case, and finding the charge against parents to be true, granted the request.

PROBATE NOTES

The court has called up and examined reports etc., of various guardians, and the following are among those continued for two years:

Isaac Dirrim guardian for James Dirrim, non comp;

John C. Dove for Marion Dove; John W. Brown for W. W. Freeby, non comp; Alfred Kepler for Cora Kepler.

The matter of bond of M. E. Griswold, guardian for Harry Draggoo was considered. The bond is $50,000 with Nicholas Ensley, H. C. Shull G. W. Gordon, Perry Noel, A. G. Jones, James B. White, G. L. Ashley, P. Dittmar Isaac Hague, and J. W. McElthenie on his bond.

The jury was discharged Saturday morning but court lasts this week and next.

Blown Meat

The Southern Experience Of Two Innocents From DeKalb County.

We do not confine this term to "fly-blown" meat although as a matter of fact, the two usually go together. But the term brings a feeling of seasickness into the anatomy of Charlie Kelley and Reuben Sawvel every time you mention it. It happened this way. The two gentlemen, as will be remembered, lately took a trip through the south, and Mr. Kelley, we thought, being a man who had no particular job to work at, would stay all winter. Both had the means, but they soon came back and we have often wondered what shortened their stay. Charlie Kelley has explained a part of it. Among the chief points of their visit south was the famous city of New Orleans, and there they proposed to stay and enjoy the fine, warm winter climate, see the odd sights and delight their palates with its famous dinners And right here is where the failure come in. Everyone who goes to New Orleans, goes to see the famous "French Quarter" and especially the "French Market" for here the "Crescent City" gets its daily supply of meat. Well, the boys went all through the market, and saw many things that opened their eyes. They admired the juiciness of the poultry that had been hung up a week or two to "ripen," and so on, etc But the straw that broke the camel's back, was found in the mutton department. There they saw an old darkey who had a recently slaughtered old ram, poor and lanky and altogether uninviting in appearance Their attention was directed to him at once as he proceeded to cut several little holes in the pelt of the ancient animal. Then he took a long, pointed rod, resembling the old fashioned iron ramrod, and putting this into the holes in toe pelt, he proceeded to run it through the carcass in several directions. His next step was to insert an old bellows into these holes, and give them a vigorous "blowing up." The lanky old cadaver straightened up, grew fat and plump, and at once took on the airs of respectable mutton. Our private opinion is, that at this point, two pairs of DeKalb county eyes were staring wide at the object lesson before them It may be that Sawvel swore, (Charlie wouldn't do such a thing, not even in the south.) and they wandered out into the open air and held a hurried consultation to decide whether the light and delicate meats they had been enjoying at different restaurants and hotels had been "blown up," to give them the appearance of fatness and freshness, which they did not other wise possess. The decision they came to was, that this was the way they had been taken in, and with a "deed and double, and cross my heart," they then and there made a solemn vow to each other with the blue southern sky above them, and the reeking gutters full of slugwash, muddy sewage around them, that they would eat no more fish meat in New Orleans It was to be fish from that time on. The next meal they took fish. Ah, that looked nice, fresh and plump. But on the first cut of the knife it "fell" like a "sad, sad, cake," the first cake baked by the daughter of the household The two DeKalb innocents put down their eating tools and looked at each other. The looks were more in sorrow than anger. Silently they gathered up their belongings paid their bills and sadly turned their faces to the clear skies and wintry air of the north. "They reached their homes in safety" as the old stories read in the Christmas books. But their taste for mutton and fish and several other southern delicacies has departed forever.

The stockholders of the Farmers Bank held their annual meeting yesterday. The following directors were elected. A. Robbins, J. C. Henry, C. C. Shaffer, F. T. Zimmerman, and A. C. Robbins. The old officers were re elected. The directors declared the usual semiannual dividend, besides carrying a large sum into the surplus fund.

Alba Heywood is giving entertainments in several of our neighboring towns, and is meeting with good patronage as far as we have heard. He is assisted by Marguerite Boland, who is quite a musical genius, and is a daughter of Dr. M. J. Boland, the pile specialist. We have only the best wishes for the young lady, but every time we see that name, we think of the printing bill the old Doctor owes us. We wish the young lady would get married so she would have a different name, then we would have the heart to write her a good "critique" should they give an entertainment in Auburn.

Wife—Here's an account of a man who shot himself rather than suffer pain of indigestion. Husband—The fool! Why did'nt he taken DeWitt's little Early Risers? I used to suffer as bad as he did before I began taking these pills.

J. A. Campbell visited Chicago last week and reports the bicycle show as one of the biggest things of its kind ever seen. A floor space almost as great as a fair grounds cut up into small spaces, each one vying to out do the other in decorations dazzled the eye with its brilliance. There were wheels and wheels from the common two wheeled machine to the three wheels abreast, one a new device to overcome rough, roads, running as smoothly over cobble stones as over asphalt pavement, the double seated one, and climax the fare seated wheel geared to 112 that its exhibitor assured us could make a mile a minute. Bicycle devices and improvements beyond number, among them a time gage that indicates the rate of speed the rider is making, whether it be five or twenty miles an hour. The crowd was immense netting the venture more than $15000, and puzzling the managers to know what to do with the money.

Spitting Blood.

S. F. Fritz, of 677 Sedgwick street, Chicago, says: "I had a severe cough which settled on my lungs. I tried a number of advertised remedies and also placed myself under treatment of several physicians, with no benefit. I was recommended to try Foley's Honey and Tar. While little expectation of getting relief, I purchased a bottle. I had taken but few doses when I felt greatly improved; I was enabled to sleep, spitting of blood ceased, and by the time I had taken the second bottle I was entirely well. It saved my life." Robbins & McCord.

INTELLIGENT PEOPLE.

And people of good taste are earnestly recommended to try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for disorders of the stomach. Constipation and indigestion cured. A trial of this great remedy can be made for 10c (10 doses 10c) also in 50c and $1 sizes, at F. E. Davenport.

A Battle Scarred Veteran.

Nearly everyone in Medina Co. Ohio, knows Stephen Rolph, of River Styx, the one legged veteran, who lost his leg at Winchester, Va., March 23, '62. In all probability the exposure and privations of army service, the effects of which are felt as they grow older by nearly all old soldiers, were the cause of the serious nervous prostration and sleeplessness of which Comrade Rolph complained. He says.

"People hereabout know me pretty well, but you can tell others that I was down for about six months with nervous prostration and sleeplessness for which I tried various doctors and medicines, but Dr. Wheeler's Nerve vitalizer has done me more good than all the doctoring I had done. The first bottle gave me such great relief that I have used several and I feel almost restored to my former good health."

Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer can be relied upon by any who are suffering from nervous troubles, sleeplessness, etc. If all tired out and run down, you need a reliable nerve and system tonic and health restorer as this remedy is. Sold in Auburn by F. E. Davenport, and by all dealers everywhere. 1-5

The St. James Gazette says that "in the event of war an English man-of-war could be sent into the great lakes and capture Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit and Chicago." But what would this country be doing in the meantime? The Welland canal locks could be blown up by American troops without leaving American soil.

The cable brings the interesting information that a "Miss Viola," of London, is coming over to this country "to try going over Niagara Falls." We think she will experience little difficulty in going over the falls if she tries hard enough, but we advise her to court undying fame by engaging in a pie-eating contest in New York.

In the year 1865 the navy of the United States consisted of 180 fighting ships, including a number of monitors, the most formidable battle ships in existence. It was said at that time that the American navy was stronger than the navies of any three European powers combined. Our fleets then were the creation of four years and the application of some strikingly original ideas. The achievement can be repeated if necessary and on a much greater scale.

Panic is a contagion, but a few men with cool heads and plenty of nerve could have prevented that horror in a Baltimore theater. In a dangerous crisis the average crowd is almost sure to do the wrong thing, but a strong check promptly applied can render them amenable to reason. Time and again this has been denonstrated under circumstances far more threatening than those which led to the Baltimore tragedy.

An Ohio judge has decided that wives are legally responsible for the support of their husbands and their families, provided the husbands themselves are unable to furnish the support. The decision is said to have greatly surprised the lawyers, and also the new woman. But the judge contends that the law of Ohio in this respect is the same as that in Illinois, Iowa, California and the territory of Oklahoma. In the Ohio case the amount sued for was a balance of $22 on a tailor bill of venerable date, and the wife, who has real estate valued at $10,000, will have to pay it.

There might perhaps be a more utterly imbecile project than the erection of a monument to the newspaper men who served as war correspondents in our late unpleasantness, but up to date it has not been made public. Never has there been so crying an instance of the monumental mania developed to the point of acute insanity. There is absolutely no more reason why the gentlemen—brave and brilliant gentlemen, no doubt—who earned their living by reporting campaigns should be thus favored with a pinchbeck immortality than for a monument erected in honor of the sutlers.

After looking the field over very carefully General Miles announces that American coast defenses are considerably shopworn, raveled and run down at the heel. He says that before we fight England something ought to be done along the Atlantic coast in order to give John Bull a proper reception. He suggests a few trifling improvements which he would like to see made as soon as possible, and estimates that they would require the expenditure of only $80,000,000 at present. These are hard times, and many of our delinquent subscribers are so shy, financially, that they are positively timid, but if a good fight will be spoiled unless General Miles receives $80,000,000 right away, we are ready to do our full duty to have the show go on. If General Miles will call at our office to-day after the last edition goes to press, we will let him have the money.

The appalling disaster in a Baltimore theater, when a false alarm of fire threw a large audience into a panic, is a lesson which every habitual attendant upon theaters or other entertainments ought to heed. There was not the slightest particle of danger in the Baltimore theater until some foolishly frightened woman, seeing a flaring gas jet, started the cry of "Fire!" The entire audience might have remained in the house all night without any risk whatever. But the outcry set the people into a senseless, furious rush for the door, and a long list of killed, with another long list of wounded, marks the result. In the vast majority of cases where life is lost in a theater fire it is not the fire but the mad scramble for the exits that does the mischief. The fire itself is not half so dangerous as the word "fire" on the lips of some terrified idiot. In most theaters, supposing a fire to have broken out on the stage—where theater fires usually do break out—the entire audience would have time to saunter away coolly and lazily before the flames could by any possibility cross the footlights or block the attendants' egress. The average time required for the departure of an audience is much less than that which must elapse before an incipient fire can get hold of an entire theater. It should be kept in mind, also, that there are always many persons behind the scenes who are watching what goes on there and who know a great deal better than the audience just what is happening when a gas jet flares up or an unexpected light falls in the scene. The theater-goer has but to remember that so long as he keeps still and keeps out of the way of the panic-stricken ones who may be bent on rushing out he is almost absolutely safe. The panic itself can last at the utmost only about two minutes. At the end of that time the way is clear. The danger when a fire breaks out in a theater is far less for the man sitting in the middle of a row next the stage than for one a great deal nearer the door. He is out of the path of the panic. In theater fires the way to escape quickly and safely is to go very slow. Until audiences keep this fact in mind they will always run a certain risk—not from the fire, indeed, but from their own actions.

WOMEN'S EXALTED MISSION.

Better to Create a Good Home than to Excel in Any Other Endeavor.

Certainly there is wisdom for two young people who have sworn to love each other, no matter whether there is poverty or wealth, no matter whether the days are bright or dark, to have a home of their own, writes Ruth Ashmore discussing "The Mistress of the Small House," in the Ladies' Home Journal. Boarding-house life is bad for women, and I do not believe that any man has ever really enjoyed it. God created women to make homes—to make homes for the men they love and for the children whom God will send to them. And a home must be started at the beginning of this new life. Do not wait for a big house and many servants, but make happiness exist in a little house with one maid as a help. It can be done. I know it can. Do not shrug your shoulders, and say you do not like housework. Work is only disagreeable when it is badly done, and from washing the silver and glass to dusting the bric-a-brac and beating up a cake, everything may be daintily done and well done if you go about it in the right way and with the right spirit. You will have to be considerate and you will have to be patient. You will certainly make mistakes, but each mistake is one step toward success. Burden yourself with patience, consideration and tenderness; you will need to make calls upon them often and often. Then you will gain so much. You will be the happy housewife, the lady of the house who has the right to dispense hospitality and good will; the mistress, not only of the house, but of the heart of your husband, because for him you have created a home. And that is a womanly work—a better monument to you, my dear, than the painting of a wonderful picture, the writing of a great book, or the composing of a fine piece of music. From out a home all virtues and all great works may come. No man ever made a home. He does not know how. The woman's brain, heart and hands are necessary, and a home is such a beautiful thing. It means rest, it means peace and it means love. Make one for your husband and let him find these three great joys in its four walls.

A Judge's Blunder.

Although Judge Bacon has often adjudicated in the Bloomsbury County Court on the fit and cut of ladies' dresses in the old style, he is not yet accustomed to the new woman. When he took his seat in the tribunal yesterdey, he happened to glance at the public gallery, and saw some one there with a stand-up collar round the neck and a cloth cap on the head. "Take off your cap up there," cried his honor. The person addressed made no movement. "You man, there, take off your cap," repeated the Judge, louder than before. "It's a lady," your honor," replied an unknown voice from the gallery. "A what?" said Judge Bacon. "A woman, is it? Then why does she dress like that?" And when the laughter had subsided he commenced the business of the court. From the new woman's cap there flowed a wealth of flaxen curls, and a clerk was heard to whisper facetiously to the usher, "She's waiting to be called to the bar, and has already bought her wig."—London Telegraph.

Animals Killed by Pure Air.

That nature generally knows what she is about better than some scientific experimenters Professor Kijanizia of Kiew has found out to his sorrow. He thought people would be better off if the air was sterilized. Thereupon he destroyed all the microbes in a certain quantity of air and fed it to a number of small animals. But the pure air did not seem to agree with the little beasts it seemed, for they all died.

HOODWINK UNCLE SAM

MANY ARTICLES ON WHICH NO DUTY IS PAID.

Some Dear Friend on This Side Wishes a Dress Pattern or Some Jewelry—A Careful Examination of All Articles Is an Impossibility.

Mania of Returning Tourists.

Most travelers, on returning from Europe, have a mania for and have very few conscientious scruples against, evading the payment of customs duties. They bought some articles on the other side, not to sell, but to give away. When they started away they were commissioned by various acquaintances to make purchases—a dozen pairs of gloves for one, a diamond pin for another, a collection of pipes for a third, some small works of art for a fourth and so on. Under the strict interpretation of the law these articles are dutiable and should be "declared" to the customs officers of New York as soon as they come aboard down the bay. But the policy of the travelers appear to be, "Declare nothing unless it is separately packed and too bulky to escape attention."

Perhaps the total value of the dutiable articles is $100. The traveler puts the small articles in his pockets, distributes the others through his trunk and valise and is reasonably confident that they will not make a sufficient showing to interest the inspector or excite his suspicion. Is he a smuggler? If so, then a majority of Americans returning from Europe are smugglers.

LOOKING FOR DUTIABLE GOODS.

No one knows better than the inspectors, however, that these small articles are being brought in. The inspectors overlook their presence and seldom make any trouble unless the article is so large or so valuable that to pass it would be a gross neglect of duty. If a man has five trunks filled with clothing there may be a question as to whether all the garments are his and have already been worn. A traveler with one or two ordinary steamer trunks is not an object of suspicion.

It is not to be inferred from this that travelers are subject to no restrictions, or that an American may bring in a cartload of foreign goods with impunity. It is true, however, that the inspection of baggage during the tremendous rush following the arrival of an ocean liner is not the ordeal that many persons imagine, and that inspectors are not ordinarily inclined to be suspicious and proceed on the theory that every returning American is attempting to cheat his own country. If they unloaded every trunk and valise and cross-examined passengers as to every article that might technically be called dutiable it would require a month to "clear" all the baggage swung from the hold of a mammoth steamer. The passenger who unlocks his trunk, removes the tray and gives satisfactory answers to a few questions is not liable to have trouble. Lifting one or two of the garments and patting to see if anything bulky is hidden underneath usually constitutes the "inspection."

Made Him Apologize.

That Christian IX. of Denmark, whose illness is at present causing much anxiety, brings up his children in the way they should go is sufficiently evidenced by the following anecdote: One day at the dinner-table the young Prince asked his father what was the meaning of a word he had never heard before. This word, "lusing," is the Danish equivalent for our "box on the ears." The king asked his son where he had heard such a word. The boy, blushing to the roots of his hair, confessed after a little natural hesitation that he had been out in the streets amusing himself by ringing the bells and then running away. But at one door an angry porter rushed out and shouted after him that he would give him a "lusing" if ever he did such a thing again. When the prince had finished his explanation, his father exclaimed, "Very well, to-morrow you shall go with me to that very house and beg the porter's pardon for such rudeness." Accordingly, the next day the king went with his much-abashed son and made him apologize.

HER FIRST REHEARSAL.

Mary Anderson de Navarro Tells of Her Stage Debut.

In writing of her first appearance on the stage Mary Anderson de Navarro tells in the Ladies' Home Journal that the opportunity to play was presented her by Manager McCauley at his Louisville Theater. The star who was playing at the theater had failed to attract paying houses, and Dr. Griffin, who was Mrs. de Navarro's stepfather and her business manager, suggested to Mr. McCauley that she be given a chance to play. The offer was gladly accepted, and Mrs. de Navarro writes that there was only one rehearsal, and it was called for the next morning.

"On my way to the Cathedral," she adds, "I was enchanted to see posters on the fences making the announcement.' The main part of the poster was devoted to advertising Milnes Levick in 'The Spy,' and at the bottom in smaller type the show bill read:

"Saturday evening, November 27, 1875—MISS MARY ANDERSON, a young lady of this city, will make her first appearance on any stage as Juliet, in Shakspeare's 'Romeo and Juliet,' Milnes Levick as Mercutio, and a powerful cast of characters.'

"As I was in the quiet church the hour for rehearsal struck, and I started for the theater in a radiant frame of mind. Passing with my people through the darkened house and private boxes covered with their linen dusters, I found myself for the first time upon the stage. How strange and dreamlike it semed, that empty theater, lighted only here and there by the faint glimmer of the gray day without, bereft of all the eager faces it had always been peopled with! And the stage! How dismal it was with the noisy patter of the rain on its tin roof, a small gas jet burning in the center, throwing a dingy light on the men and women (they did not relish the extra rehearsal), gloomily standing in the wings. On seeing me, all looked surprised. Some made remarks in whispers, which I felt to be unkind; others laughed audibly. Scarcely 16, my hair in a long braid, my frock reaching to my boot-tops, tall, shy and awkward, I may have given them cause for merriment; but it was as cruel, I thought, as under-bred, to make no effort to conceal their mirth at my expense. However, their rudeness was salutary in its effect, putting me on my mettle before the work began."

His Ground Stated.

As I sat on the hotel veranda in a Georgia town, I noticed a colored friend and brother working my way. When he finally stood before me, hat in hand and bowing in much earnestness, I asked:

"Well, George, did a cyclone strike your meeting house?"

"N-o, not zactly, sah."

"Want to raise money for the preacher?"

"Ha'dly, sar, ha'dly."

"After a bell for the steeple?"

"N-o, sah—can't say as we am."

"Then you want Sunday school books?"

"No, sah."

"But you came here to strike me for a quarter. I can see it in your looks."

"Well, yes, sah."

"And don't you intend to ask for it on church grounds?"

"No, sah, I has other grounds, sah. I has a particularly ground of my own, sah."

"Well, what is it?"

"Why, sah, I was going to ask for it on de ground that you didn't know I jess got outer jail for stealin' a bag of cotton!"

A Patron of Music.

The Emperor William's interest in music was (a Berlin correspondent says) lately shown in a very practical way. The other day, when he was shooting in the forests of Letzlingen, the band of the Uhlans played selections during dinner. The Emperor, with his suite, went up to the musicians and made some observations about the way in which an Italian popular song, "Funiculi Funicula," had been played, saying that it should have been taken quicker. Thereupon the Emperor took the baton, and under his conductorship the song had to be repeated. He further conducted some military marches. Five songs by Count Philip Von Eulenburg, the German ambassador in Vienna, pleased the Emperor so much that all had to be repeated.

STREETS KNEE-DEEP IN SUGAR.

Ex-Gov. Hoard Recalls an Incident of the Late Unpleasantness.

Among the distinguished gentlemen who are at present in the city, fresh from the meeting at Vicksburg in relation to the establishment of the national park at that place, is ex-Gov. W. D. Hoard, of Wisconsin. Gov. Hoard is an old friend of New Orleans, notwithstanding the fact that his first acquaintance with the city and its attractions was made under peculiar circumstances. It was during the time that tried men's souls; when the forces of the Union were encamped at the outer gates and the Confederate troops were seriously thinking how best to get out of the warm location. Gen. Lovell, who was in command of New Orleans when the Federals in charge of Gen. Butler were knocking for admittance, finally concluded that the best thing to do under the circumstances was to evacuate, and by this action turn the city over to the tender mercies of the opposing forces.

Gov. Hoard was among the Federals who constituted the troops of the great and only Butler, and when this general, with his soldiers, marched into the city Gov. Hoard marched with him. It was then that the Governor—he was not then a Governor—received his first impressions of a city which at that time had achieved greatness among the commercial centers of the country. These impressions have never died in his memory.

"Why," said Gov. Hoard, "I was one of the most surprised men in the whole world. I had heard of fairy lands in which the rivers ran wine and the hills were made of great lumps of sugar, but I had never conceived of a city whose streets were knee deep in sweetness. Yet this was just the case when we entered New Orleans. I absolutely waded ankle deep in sugar, and that in the streets along the river. While the affair has become a matter of history, I shall never forget the sight. You see, the fact of the blockade of the port had caused a vast quantity of the products of the South, chiefly sugar and cotton, to pile up in the city, and the inability of its owners to ship the stuff resulted in the warehouses being filled to overflowing. When Gen. Lovell realized that he must give up the fight and leave the city he determined to render it impossible for the Union soldiers to make use of the accumulation of stores. To this end he gave orders for its destruction, and hundreds of hogsheads of new sugar were violated and their contents cast into the streets just like so much sand. It was a useless commodity for the time being, and great masses of the stuff were piled up where the destruction occurred. When we marched into the section of the city where the sugar had been stored we literally waded in sugar. I never saw such waste in all my life in this respect, while all along the levee front were the evidences of the burning of the cotton which had been stored there waiting for an opportunity for shipment to Europe."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Father's Teachings.

The boy loves his mother probably more than he does his father, but so far as relates to the affairs of life in general and on its hard side, he has ten times the confidence in his father's practical and available wisdom that he has in that of his mother. And if his father finds it necessary in the conduct of business to strain one or two of the commandments the boy will keep on repeating the commandments to his mother and commence breaking them with his father, and that, too, without feeling that the sinuosity of the procedure involves any great amount of inconsistency. * * * The only thing that will save the boy and hold him in such a way true to the fixed pole of rectitude that no considerations of place or circumstance can deflect him is that he be under the domination of a father whose life in the midst of the world incarnates the principles learned from the mother in the midst of the home. The boy will believe in the feasibility of his mother's doctrine of righteousness if he sees his father take it out and exemplify it under the stress of business.

The father's life to this degree measures the power of the mother's tuition, and is as the hand of God hastening or postponing the fulfillment of her longings and prayers for the children of the household.—Charles H. Parkhurst, D. D., in Ladies' Home Journal.

A New Dodge.

A new trick was worked on one of the charitably disposed citizens of Washington recently. A woman in great distress went to him and told a pitiful story of poverty. Her husband had been sick for a year, and one by one the articles of furniture had gone until the only thing left was a chair and a pile of old bed clothes. Her husband had died and his body lay in a wooden box, she not being able to procure a coffin. The gentleman appealed to put on his hat and accompanied the woman to a vacant room. There was the box, the pile of filthy rags and a broken chair, just as she had represented. He put his hand in his pocket and gave her what money he happened to have with him, about $30, and left, promising to return in a few hours. Suddenly recollecting that a cane he prized highly was placed against the wall, he went back after it, and sitting upon the wooden box was the supposed corpse, counting the money. He got the cane, but the swindlers kept the money.

A Rosicrucian Wedding.

One of the notable weddings in Paris this winter will be that of the Sar Paladan, the poet, novelist, and picturesque chief priest of the Rosicrucians, to Vicomtesse Josephine De Barde, a young, lovely and wealthy widow. They met at Trouville last summer and fell in love at sight. The lady appears to be somewhat of a Delilah, for she has made the Sar shear his coal-black locks, which were more profuse than Paderewski's, and gave him the most prodigious head of hair in Europe. It is likely that with his new wealth he will drop his other eccentricties.

She—No, Ned, it wouldn't be judicious for us to marry until after you have had your salary increased. He (pleadingly)—But two can live cheaper than one, you know, Nellie. She—Yes, I know, that's what people say. As a matter of fact, they have to.—Somerville Journal.

CRISP FORMS OF THOUGHT.

SOLOMON AND TUPPER TWISTED TO SUIT A MODERN TRADE.

The Wisdom of the Sages and the Wit of the Masses, Even the Work of the Missionaries, Are Grist in the Mill—They Are Poached Upon by Authors and Advertisers.

Whether Solomon invented all his proverbs or gathered them from many sources with a nicer sense of permanent worth than Mr. Tupper exercised in his later compendium is and ever will be an open question. Solomon's copyright ran out long before Tupper's time, and both are now poached upon with impunity by all classes, from authors to advertisers. But, taken by themselves, proverbs well repay careful study. Students of ethnology find in the proverbs of the different races the clearest proofs of their real characteristics, for they are the shrewdest and yet most intimate expressions of their daily life.

Judged by the comparison of these homely sayings it will be found that all nations are of one kindred, possessing common needs, common aspirations, and seeking similar reliefs from toil and labor. On the dustiest shelves of our libraries may be found collections of all the proverbs of the different nations, quite a large proportion of the work having resulted from the interest which missionaries have taken in their earnest studies of the uncivilized peoples whom they seek to instruct. That the shrewd sayings of the Scotch or the bright hits of the Irish should be carefully collected gives little cause for surprise; but a collection of Abyssinian proverbs, of those of the Tamil language, of Icelandic lore, of the Sanscrit, South Sea Island, Chinese, and Hottentot Solomons does excite curiosity. The missionaries have found it a pleasant as well as a profitable task. It delves deep into the idioms of the language, tells with unerring accuracy the mental tendency of the people, and by introducing the foreigner into the inner thought of both home and trade shows him the real life of those who adopt them as everyday expressions.

It is impossible to read the well-collated proverbs of the Chinese without realizing that a home life exists in that flowery kingdom which rivals that of many more civilized countries. No Solomon, no descendant of Abraham, could eclipse the trade proverbs of the Chinese. They touch on trade with a keenness and thoroughness which proves them to be masters in that school. The baser life of the Hottentot, the loose morals of the fellah, the independent spirit of the Briton, are all crystallized in their national proverbs.

In England and many other countries it was formerly very usual for a tradesman to select some proverb as his motto, and thus post his principles plainly over his shop door. It remained, however, for an American house to appropriate the proverbs of the world en masse, and use them for their own advancement. New Yorkers who ride on the elevated roads, or people who in less favored localities still jog along in the slow street cars, are familiar with the blue and white proverbs which proclaim the merits of Sapolio to the world. Every omnibus in London and almost every "tram car" in England is similarly adorned.

They made their first appearance on the Broadway omnibuses, were gathered out of over 4,000 pages of the world's collections, and twisted to suit the case. Many of them are beyond easy recognition in their new dress, many are entirely original, but these are also printed between inverted commas, which lends a glamour of antiquity to them. To-day we are told that over 20,000 of these blue cards are displayed in public conveyances carrying over 6,000,000 passengers daily.

Condensed thought generally requires padding to make it intelligible to the masses, just as the stomach of the horse must be distended with hay to make the oats digest readily; but with proverbs it is quite otherwise. Their popularity is only reached because they have passed muster as being clear to every mind. They tell their story with a directness and brevity which pleases the public, as the dictionary did the old Scotch woman—"They air braw stories," she said, "but unco' short." Turned to tell the practical story of Sapolio, they often acquire new interest. Who reads the advice, "Be patient and you will have patient children," without an innate respect for the advice which follows, not to fret over house cleaning, but do it easily with Sapolio? And who can repress a smile when the Sapolionic artist pictures the patient father and the impatient twins defying the proverb? But the mother will be back sooner if she follow the advice. Our familiar "The pot calls the kettle black" takes a new interest in its Italian form. The pot says to the pan, "Keep off or you'll smutch me." The universal toil of the world finds expression in the Catalan phrase, "Where wilt thou go, Ox, that thou wilt not plough?" Almost all nations possess a proverb which declares that "if you forbid a fool a thing, that he will do," and with confidence in the good will of the public the advertiser of Sapolio puts it in this form:

"Forbid a fool a thing and that he will do." So we say for variety: "Don't use Sapolio—but then you're not a fool."

"A touch of nature which makes all the world akin" springs out of the quaint thought that "A needle, though naked itself, clothes others." Who can hear it once and ever see a needle without recalling it? Who fails to recognize the picture it suggests of the aid given to the poor by the poor, and of the help which is everywhere gained from the humblest of assistants?

Slang never can be confounded with proverbial phrases. It seems universal, but it is merely a local form used to express a transient but popular idea. Years ago, when a general rush at hotel keeping resulted in many failures, the slang ran: "He's a very good man, but he can't keep a hotel." All such phrases are local and temporary. They do not survive—indeed, rarely possess merit enough to reach a second year without evident decline in popularity. We have noticed that none of the advertisements of Sapolio make use of slang, and probably for this reason.

Naturally many of the best proverbs used in this connection relate to household cleanliness, and all the original ones are framed to that end. "Dirt in the house builds the highway to beggary," deserves recognition, despite its origin. Household sayings, in the sense of four-walled buildings, full of furniture, are quite lacking in many Eastern tongues. We believe that no reference to clean housekeeping can be found in the Koran or even in the Bible, except that of the woman who swept the house to find her lost coin. Shakspeare rather slights the subject, but whether because it was not deemed important in that intellectual but dirty age or because he soared to grander things, we will not discuss, but the England of to-day well says of home, "The cleaner 'tis the cosier 'tis," and our American advertiser improves the opportunity to add that humble homes made bright with Sapolio are better than tawdry palaces. Alas, for the thoughtlessness of the man who forgot to ask whether his bride used Sapolio. The Scotch proverb records his case: "Ye hae tied a knot wi' your tongue ye winno loose wi' your teeth."

BOMBSHELL, AN ARTILLERY DOG

He Saved Two Little Children from Serious Danger.

While a gun was being loaded, Bombshell would sit on the parapet and watch the operation. That finished, he would jump up and look out to sea over the range, and then scamper down from the parapet and follow us into the bomb-proof.

As usual, Bombshell was on hand to see the test of the new big gun.

He superintended the loading, and, while I was aiming the gun, he looked over the range as carefully as did the lookout; and from his air of responsibility one might have supposed that to him had been intrusted the duty of seeing that the range was clear.

But when we started for the bomb-proof, instead of following us, as was his custom, Bombshell remained on the parapet, looking out to sea and sniffing the air. In a moment he dashed off through the bushes which covered the narrow beach between the parapet and the sea.

Though thinking his actions peculiar, I was sure that he would not remain in front of the gun, because he had done so once, when quite young and inexperienced, and the burning grains of powder—which are always thrown out by the blast of a gun—had buried themselves in his skin, burning him badly. He had never forgotten this.

Certain that he would take care of himself, I paid no further attention to him, but went with the others into the bomb-proof, and took my place by the electric key, ready to fire at the command of the captain.

Just as the command "Fire!" was about to be given, Bombshell reappeared on the parapet and began to bark furiously into the very muzzle of the gun.

I called to him, but he would not come. Annoyed at the delay of the test, I tried to catch him, but could not do so. As I approached he retreated, still barking and apparently urging me to follow him.

Finally, convinced from the dog's actions that something was wrong, the electric wire was disconnected from the gun, and I followed Bombshell. Wagging his tail with joy at having accomplished his object, he led me through the underbrush to the beach.

There, concealed behind a clump of bushes, were two little children quietly digging in the sand and entirely unconscious of the danger in which they had been.—St. Nicholas.

Coyotes and Cattle.

A novel scheme for saving his cattle from the droves of coyotes that infest the region has been hit upon by a rancher of Glen Rock, Wash. He has placed bells on the necks of a great number of cattle in his herds, and the result has been to scare the coyotes away. In the two months since he belled his herds he has not lost a single animal, while previously his loss averaged at least one steer a day. Coyotes are becoming more of a pest every season in many parts of Washington and Oregon, despite all the efforts of the cattlemen and farmers to exterminate them. Thousands of dollars are spent every year in waging war on the beasts, but with little result. Poison availed for a time, but now the coyotes refuse to touch the poisoned carcasses of steers strewn about for their consumption. The only way of killing them is by shooting them, and this is a feeble and wholly inadequate means. Occasionally the residents of a district combine and have a grand round-up hunt, driving the coyotes toward the center of a circle and slaughtering them there, and this is the only means of appreciably thinning them out occasionally. In some regions the packs of gray wolves are as numerous and troublesome as the coyotes. The coyotes are particularly adept chicken thieves, and, indeed, are a general pest around the farm yards.

Thought.

Thought of any kind, to be valuable, must be conservative—that is, it must hold with a firm grasp all the truth that the past has handed down. It must accept humbly and reverently that which the wisdom of the ages has stored up, and so thoroughly incorporate it that it may form its very bone and muscle. Only thus can it acquire stability or permanence. At the same time it must be expansive, it must have the power of growth, it must be hospitable to new truths and fresh thoughts, willing to pursue inquiries, to attack difficulties, to solve knotty problems. Thus only can it hand down to posterity something worthy of its acceptance, and pay to the future the debt it owes to the past.

His Memory's Use.

The Philadelphia Times tells a pathetic story of poor, patient little Ned, who had been kept after school again and again to learn a simple stanza which all the rest of the class had mastered.

At last he broke down and sobbed, "I can't do it, Miss Gray; I just can't do it. Father says it's because I have such a poor——"

"A poor what, Ned?"

"You know what it is," a glimmer of light flickering in his face; "the thing you forget with."

HOW MANY WOMEN DO YOU KNOW

Who Can Say They Are Thoroughly Well? How They Can Be Strong.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

I don't feel very well; I am so tired all the time; I don't know what is the matter with me.

You hear these words every day. As often as you meet your friends, just so often are the words repeated. More than likely you speak the same pregnant words yourself, and there is no doubt but that you do feel far from well most of the time. There is a cause, And — There is a remedy for all that is covered by those words so constantly spoken by women.

Lydia E. Pinkham discovered the source of nearly all the suffering endured by the sex.

"Women's Complaints,"—these two words are full of more misery to women than any two words that can be found in the language of the world.

Sudden fainting, depression of spirits, reluctance to go anywhere or to do anything, backache, "bearing down," and kindred symptoms of serious disturbance seldom imagined by your family physician, and reluctantly mentioned by you.

The remedy is found; the same noble woman who discovered the cause of all your misery also worked out the remedy. All druggists have it.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the greatest blessing that ever came into the lives of suffering women.

Straw Plaiting.

The straw manufacture owes its introduction into England to Mary Queen of Scots, who on quitting France, was so struck with the making of straw plait by the women and children of Lorraine that she persuaded a number of the folks to come over to England with her, in the hope that the peasantry might be able to learn the art. From their arrival in 1561 the plaiters had but sorry times, until James I. took the colony under his protection, and established them in the Luton district, where thousands are now engaged in this great industry.

MISSOURI has 14,006 working oxen; or 7,003 teams, causing every year 100 times that number of profane expressions from the drivers.

The Greatest Medical Discovery of the Age.

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, OF ROXBURY, MASS.,

Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston. Send postal card for book.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the right quantity is taken.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it. Read the label.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Sold by all Druggists.

AN "IMPREGNABLE" TARIFF.

The Washington correspondent of a Chicago Republican organ says that the most of Dingley's committeemen frown down the suggestion that $30,000,000 more revenue be raised by doubling the beer tax. "They say that while revenues could undoubtedly be raised quickly and abundantly by internal taxation, to do so would render the Gorman tariff impregnable."

Indeed! This is an admission that the people will not stand a restoration of McKinley duties unless upon the pretext that higher duties are necessary in order to raise revenue. If more revenue is not needed the new law is impregnable. And if more is needed and it can be raised otherwise than from imports still the new tariff is impregnable. This explains why the protectees and their attorneys in Washington insist that more revenue is absolutely indispensable and that it must be raised by tariff taxes of the protective sort and in no other way.

This is complimentary to the new tariff and the reverse of complimentary to the McKinley tariff. But what do these tariffites for private revenue mainly think of the intelligence of the American people? Do they think that people who are sharp enough to prefer paying $100,000,000 for public revenue to paying $300,000,000, one-third for public and two-thirds for private revenue, are so dull as not to know that the plan of paying for public revenue only is entirely practicable?

If so they are much mistaken. The people know that taxation for revenue only is entirely practicable, even if the protectees do not admit it. And they also know that no more taxes of any kind are necessary or are likely to be unless in the unlikely event of war. And they know still further that if more revenue is needed at all it is needed immediately, that it can be obtained immediately and without additional expense for collecting by increasing the tax on beer, and that it cannot be had immediately by imposing duties to increase the prices of their clothing. If Mr. Dingley's committee has nothing better to offer than the McKinley wool schedule and double prices for clothing the people will understand the matter perfectly and improve the opportunity to express their opinion of the Republican policy of forcing McKinleyism back upon the country when they go to the polls next November. They will cause it to be understood that the new tariff is impregnable in so far as it is a departure from the McKinley system of licensed robbery.

Wants Free Refined Sugar.

The wicked Cobden Club is at it again. Its dark designs against American industry are once more exhibited, this time in an assault on the very citadel of protection. As everybody knows the only safeguard for our infant industries is the Protective Tariff League, an organization of kind-hearted, unselfish, noble-minded citizens, who purely out of love for their fellow-men devote a great deal of money to teaching the people that high taxes are a blessing and increased commerce an evil. The stories published in Democratic papers to the effect that the League is a gang of selfish boodlers, who are engaged in fooling the public so that they can get rich through tariff legislation, are not believed—by those who do not know the facts.

To aid in its good work of loving mankind the League publishes an organ called the American Economist, probably because its editors know nothing of political economy. This paper is devoted to the expression of trade-hating sentiment; was an ardent defender of the late McKinley tariff, and urgently advocates its restoration. So learned and logical was its exposition of trade prohibition doctrines that the secret emissaries of the Cobden Club determined to destroy it at all hazards. A plot was formed and several tons of yellow British gold imported for the purpose of corrupting the honest men who stood as a bulwark between the American people and the opportunity to purchase cheaper and better goods.

The villainous scheme of the bold, bad Cobdenites seems to have been only too successful. For in its issue of November 29th, the Economist renounces McKinleyism as applied to an important industry, and declares in favor of free trade in refined sugar. "Free refined sugar, and protection for domestic beet sugar, will kill the sugar trust. The sugar trust is a public nuisance, an excrescence abhorrent to free Americanism."

Clearly this is the work of British gold. Else how would a staunch protection paper be found advocating free trade in anything? Are our great sugar refineries to be subjected to the competition of the foreign refiners? Must the highly paid (in the minds of Republican orators) workmen employed by the protected sugar trust, have their wages cut down by free trade in sugar? If free sugar will kill the sugar trust, would not free rails kill the steel rail combine, or free glass the window glass trust?

That an organ of the Chinese policy of prohibiting foreign trade should favor free refined sugar is ridiculous. There are only two explanations possible. One is that the organ has been bribed by foreign gold. The other is that its editor has discovered the truth of the Democratic claim that free trade in the products controlled by trusts, will kill those monopolies. In either case it is evident that protection is being wounded in the house of its friends.

From a Business Standpoint.

So damaging to all trade would be another general tariff discussion that many expressions of anxiety on the subject have reached the Dry Goods Economist from both sides of the Atlantic.

Unless, however, the logic of the situation and the signs of the times are equally at fault, nothing so disturbing as a new tariff will be seriously proposed by this Congress. In the first place there is not time. It takes many months to formulate a new law and talk it through to an agreement in both houses, and months more must elapse before it can be put into operation; and just now the great necessity is for a speedy increase in the revenues.

Again, such a tariff law as would alone satisfy Republican traditions and make it worth their political while to give business a year's paralysis would probably be too highly protective to have the desired effect on the revenues, in which case it could never get by the President.—Dry Goods Economist.

Breaking the Eleventh Commandment

All good Americans are familiar with the ten comandments, which contain the moral law as it was delivered to Moses. It is true that these commandments are often violated, the one, "Thou shalt not steal," being openly broken by protective tariff laws, which take the products of the people's labor and give them to monopolies and trusts. But although the principles of common morality are thus denied by protection, it is generally believed that the responsibility rests wholly with the men and party which make the laws.

It is time that it should be distinctly understood that there is another commandment, equally binding with that quoted above. It is not found in the Mosaic law, but is inherent in the nature of things, and reads: "Thou shalt not allow thyself to be stolen from." That men should refuse to allow others to rob them, is as necessary to the association of mankind in orderly civilized society as that they themselves should not steal. A manly assertion of the individual's right to his own property is a duty which cannot justly be ignored. If it is wrong for one man or set of men to steal, it is also wrong for other men to allow them to steal.

The highest judicial authority, the Supreme Court of the United States, has asserted that: "To lay with one hand the power of the government on the property of the citizen, and with the other to bestow it upon favored individuals to aid private enterprises and build up private fortunes, is none the less robbery because it is done under the forms of law and is called taxation." That this is true no fair-minded citizen will deny. It follows that the whole system of tariff taxation for protection's sake; that is, for the purpose of aiding private enterprises or industries, is robbery, pure and simple.

The duty of every honorable man is therefore plain. He must resist the aggression on his rights, must refuse to allow others to steal from him, and must join in wiping from the statute book every vestige of protective laws which make private gain out of public loss. It is not enough that good men should not steal the property of others. They must insist that others should no longer steal from them, and that the great abomination of wholesale stealing under the forms of law, should be completely done away with. By so doing they will keep the eleventh commandment.

Paying for Dead Horses.

On the last day of last year the treasury department had a disagreeable reminder of an unfortunate venture made by the United States some thirty-odd years ago.

Among the bonds that fell due, principal and interest, on the first of January was a total of $3,680,000 of the principal sum issued in aid of the following railroads:

Central Pacific Railroad	$1,600,000
Kansas Pacific Railway Company, late Union Pacific Railway, eastern division	1,440,000
Central branch, Union Pacific Railroad Company, late Atchison and Pike's Peak Railroad Company, assignee of the Hannibal and St. Joseph Railroad Company	640,000

These roads were to have made good their indebtedness to the government, but they have not done so. This is but small part of the grand total, which is over $125,000,000. But Uncle Sam has to pay it. There are, notwithstanding this lesson, persons in the United States who believe it entirely proper for the government, which is a pauper, because it subsists only on the taxes wrung from the people, to encourage private enterprises with its credit, with substantial land donations, and in any other way that adventurers may suggest. Among the various schemes contemplated by persons ready to raid the national treasury is a contribution to the Nicaragua canal scheme for the benefit of Warner Miller and politicians of his class.

We may expect just such legislation at the present Congress in behalf of the Nicaragua canal scheme as the Congress of 1862 and 1864 during the war period, when the distress of the country was great, made in behalf of the selfish scoundrels who manipulated the Pacifics.

Credit to Grover.

A Republican newspaper says: "It is a lucky thing for Grover Cleveland's present purpose that the financial credit of this Government is not on a par with the political credit of this administration." During the twelve years beginning March 4, 1885, and ending March 3, 1897, President Cleveland will have been in office eight years, with a Republican President four years in the meantime, and with a Democratic majority in one House of Congress or in both a portion of the time. But for the evils and ills produced by the Sherman silver act and the McKinley tariff act this era would have been one of the most prosperous ever experienced by the country, and the average of prosperity is as high as that of any other twelve years in history. If there is anything creditable in this record it belongs to President Cleveland's Democratic administration, both financially and politically.—Chicago Chronicle.

Marriage with a Stick of Candy.

But of all marriage rites of which we have ever heard, that described to us the other day by a lady who has passed many years of her life in Burmah certainly bears away the palm for conciseness and sweet simplicity. Here it would appear to be upon the dusky lady that the pleasing duties of courtship devolve. She sees a youth whom she deems calculated to make her happy and forthwith offers him a stick of candy. If he accepts her proposal, he promptly eats the token of affection, and they are thereby made man and wife. There is no further ceremony, and no witnesses are necessary.

In the act of eating alone this most primitive marriage rite consists—so we are assured! But if, on the contrary, the youth has no mind to enter the estate of matrimony with the proprietor of the proffered stick, he merely assures her—with a fine consideration for her feelings not always shown in more civilized countries—that that particular kind of candy is not to his taste; and with that the whole matter is at an end.

She, presumably, goes contentedly away to offer her rejected candy and affections to some more appreciative youth, by whom, let us hope, it may be speedily devoured; and everybody must feel satisfied that no unnecessary time or trouble has been wasted over these unsuccessful matrimonial negotiations. —Household Words.

Danger from Fire.

Each year the forest fires which rage throughout the Northwest count a number of victims, and are attended by many thrilling escapes. One man was overtaken by fire while journeying up a canon, on his way to a friend's house. With the utmost difficulty he succeeded in reaching a small cascade, and took refuge behind the fall of water, where he remained for hours. His horse was burned to death.

A train on the Northern Pacific road had an exciting race for an hour through a district narrowly bordering upon the fires. The heat increased and the flames drew nearer and nearer. Finally a burning tree which had fallen directly across the track stopped the train, and nearly sent it over a precipice.

The heat was so intense that the mail and baggage cars caught fire, and the paint of the passenger cars was blistered. A panic among the passengers was eminent. There was no possibility of escape, for the fire was all about them. All hands went to work. A stream of water was turned upon the cars, and by great effort the fallen tree was removed from the track; then, crowding on steam, the engineer ran ahead.

The train emerged at last from the burning region, and a load of badly frightened passengers was landed safely at the next station.

Ghosts Are Pale and Shadowy,

Say those who profess to have interviewed them. Whether spooks are tallow-faced or not, mortals are whose blood is thin and watery in consequence of imperfect assimilation. When invalids resort to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and use that unequaled tonic persistently, they soon "pick up" in strength, flesh and color. It should be used also to prevent malarial, rheumatic and kidney complaints, and to remedy constipation, sick headache and nervousness.

Mother of Pearl.

Mother of pearl is the hard, silvery, brilliant substance which forms the internal layers of several kinds of shells. The interior of our common oyster shells is of this nature, but the mother of pearl used in the arts is much more variegated with a play of colors. The large shells of the Indian seas alone have this pearly substance of sufficient thickness to be of use.

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarrh. Send for testimonials, free.

When a man is trained and educated to work with his head, and not his hands, and hunger and want stare him in the face as a result of idleness enforced by the conditions of society, he is the best material in the world to make a socialist of, and very likely, getting no relief in that faith, he takes the next step and becomes an anarchist. The world has treated him badly. He seeks revenge as well as food and clothing.

MRS. ADAMS' LETTER.

LYERLY, Chattooga Co., Ga., Oct. 4, 1895.

Two medicines have done me so much good I cannot find words to express my gratitude for them. I was down with a complication of troubles, catarrh of the bowels and falling of the womb. For seven weeks I could not sit up. Two bottles of McElree's Wine of Cardui and one package of Thedford's Black-Draught cured me.

I have recommended the Wine of Cardui Treatment to a number of suffering women, and not one has failed to find relief by its use. If I can do anything to help bring this good medicine to the attention of sufferers, I will be glad. MRS. E. C. ADAMS.

RIPANS TABULES

Mr. P. T. Barry, who has general charge of the advertising contracts of the Chicago Newspaper Union, is compelled to pass a large portion of his time in journeying to and fro in the interests he represents. Speaking of Ripans Tabules, Mr. Barry says that he has carried them with him in his satchel on all his trips, since he first became acquainted with their excellent qualities. He uses four or five a week, being always particular to take one after a hearty or, more especially, after a hasty meal. He never requires more than one. Mr. Barry does not remember how he was first induced to make trial of Ripans Tabules, but now he buys them of the nearest druggist whenever his supply is exhausted. "They are specially convenient," Mr. Barry says, "and a mighty nice thing—just what a man needs when traveling, if he needs a medicine at all."

Ripans Tabules are sold by druggists, or by mail if the price (50 cents a box) is sent to The Ripans Chemical Company, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York. Sample vial, 10 cents.

The Road and Special Road Tax are included in the first installment. The Poll and Dog Tax are included in the first installment.

Taxes of 1895 are due the first day of January, 1896, and may be paid in full or in two installments. The first installment must be paid on or before the third Monday in April, 1896, the second installment on or before the first Monday in November, 1896. If the first installment is not paid when due both installments become delinquent. Ten per cent will be added and I shall at once proceed, as the law requires, to collect the same, together with the costs that may accrue, by distress and sale of personal property.

The Treasurer will not be responsible for the penalty and charges on delinquent taxes resulting from any omission of the person paying, to state definitely on what property, in whose name and in what township or corporation it was assessed.

Persons owing delinquent taxes should pay them at once. The law is of such a character that there is no option left to the Treasurer but to enforce the collection of the delinquent taxes, however much he may regret to collect the same by sale of property.

"The owner of property on the first day of April each year shall be liable for the taxes of that year. The purchaser of property on the first day of April shall be considered the owner on that day."

Examine your receipts before leaving the office and see that all your property is included.

No county order will be paid to any person owing delinquent taxes.

The annual sale of lands and lots for delinquent taxes will occur on the second Monday in February, 1896.

Come early and avoid the rush of the last few days. We have 6,000 receipts to make, and all can not be made in the last few days.

The books will positively be closed on the evening of the third Monday in April and no one will be allowed to pay after that date without penalty.

Parties sending by others, or by letter, to pay taxes should not fail to send description of their land and lots.

No receipt will be made out for any party until they are ready to pay.

"Assignees, guardians, administrators and others who pay taxes on property in trust, and persons whose taxes are complicated, such as individual estates, etc., are earnestly requested to settle such taxes before the last few days, as it takes considerable time to make the divisions and separate receipts therefor. As the Treasurer can not know the location of each person's property, tax-payers should designate the property on which they wish to pay taxes, and see that all property is specified in their receipts. If the land in more than one township or town, or desire to pay taxes on lands not in their name, call the Treasurer's attention to the matter.

DAVID W. FAIR, Treasurer.

Mr. Cobb's Letter.

In the distance great clouds of inky black smoke is seen making its way above, what seems to be a dense vapor, though in reality the smoke from the mines and smelters whose shafts and works are all about the city, we are once more in the great and only Butte, the largest copper and silver mining camp in the world and second to none as a lively business town, and said, by the traveling men who have opportunity to feel the business pulse of the country, to be the best business town in the United States to-day. The altitude is a little over 6000 feet which together with the smoke heavily charged with sulphur and arsenic makes this a "Butte" of a place in which to live, (pardon slang.) Our eyes smarted and could scarcely see to do business. One can almost spit sulphur there and as has been said the wicked certainly get a taste of the hereafter here. Hang a white handkerchief from your window at night and by morning it will have turned yellow. No danger from contagious diseases in Butte. The writer was compelled to remain four days in this city to finish up business matters and was glad to get a sniff of the pure mountain air once more.

Butte gets away with more whisky and has more licensed gambling houses, etc., than any town of its size in the world This is generally conceded. In fact every thing this world has to contribute to sinful pleasures, Butte takes first place. The throttle is pulled wide open here Am told that the average man gets only 4 to 5 hours sleep. Butte has a population of 40,000 every modern improvement, electric and cable cars, reaching all points in the city and the surrounding mountain tops where are located the mines and mills. The entire city is built on the sloping mountain side. No trees can live here, no green thing is to be seen. The alarm of fire was turned in while passing the engine house and inside of ten seconds the horses were in their places, electrically harnessed and off for the fire in time to be of valuable service. As strange as it may seem, every one looks well notwithstanding the poisonous atmosphere about the city, people can become acclimated most any where. However, if some one would provide a smoke consumer, this city alone would give millions for it. Many devices have been tried, even running the smoke through water, but the sulphuric smoke is here just the same. The Butte foot ball team are the strongest team in the west. The bicycle club was organized about one year ago with 300 members and $10 000 in the treasury. The city is noted for its millionaires. Marcus Daly, Mr. Clark of the Clark Bank, Senator Hogan of Calif., being among the most prominent. "The Anaconda" copper mine alone employes 7000 men under ground at $3 to $5 per day, making the pay roll of it is mine a heavy one At Anaconda is located the largest copper milling and smelting works in the world. One can easily imagine its capacity, when an English capitalist takes eight to ten million stock and yet has no controlling interest. All of the ore from the Anaconda mine is taken from Butte to the Anaconda, Mont. smelters where it is treated in the stupendous works at that place.

The writer had the pleasure of meeting our friends, Rev, and Mrs. Healy, here, who are finely situated in this aggressive town and amid beautiful mountain scenery. We remained over one day. Mr. Healy procuring a permit, we visited the reduction works of these great copper mills, a detailed discription of which would fill a volume so we will not begin it here. The pay roll in these mills run $300,000 per month and it is claimed that they get silver enough "even at its present low price" to pay all expenses, making the copper production a net gain. We procured some very fine specimens of copper ore and quartz which we will add to our cabinet collection Anaconda is building rapidly probably doing more business than any other town of its size in the country and every thing is rich and of a substantial character. It has one of the finest hotels in the west called the Montana. Wages in the west are about double that in the east and to offset this it costs about as much more to live here. It is claimed that every meal served in a first class hotel costs 90c., but we doubt that a little bit The hotels are crowded and no doubt are making money.

The best commercial rates here in the west are $3 to $6 per day nothing first-class for less than $3 per day by the week. Railroad fare, 5c to 8c per mile. The writer had a clever little experience yesterday while coming over to Helena from Butte a distance of 75 miles. In all of his travels had never rode on the engine in the mountains. A good opportunity was here afforded and we took advantage. Well it would have been moderately tame had we not been delayed by a freight car off the track, and having an hour's time to make up, in a distance of 60 miles, made it quite interesting to one accustomed to taking a back seat, but we stayed with it and made some kodak shots from the cab window as we went thundering down the grades, around sharp curves, over trestles and through tunnels. We don't know what the pictures will look like when developed but will take chances on getting at least enough to recall the time and places, if not, we already have the entire run visibly photographed up on the mind, which we will not likely soon forget.

We left Butte quite early and witnessed a sunrise on the mountain tops west of the city. It was quite dark in the deep valleys and ravines of the city, and as we climbed up and above the city, swinging around the west slope of the mountains. Butte far below, underneath a cloud of smoke, beyond the golden snow peaks catching the first rays of sunlight was certainly a grand sight to behold.

Helena is a beautiful city of about 60,000 though very dull at present. At one time this was very rich in placer mining. The Famous Broadwater hotel and natatorium is situated about 3 miles from the city. The electric cars go out and return every few minutes. This is a great resort for tourists. The Hot Springs swimming pool is beautifully enclosed, the architecture being of oval design, similar to that of the Mormon Tabernacle at Salt Lake though more stylish. It is 300 feet long by 150 in width Its waters are heavily charged with minerals and has a natural temperature of 160 degrees at the fountain which is tempered to suit those who indulge in the plunge.

There are no finer buildings any where than those to be seen here, both in the business and residence portion, but a gold mine will have to show up here before the town goes ahead any more.

Great Falls 100 miles north is a point of 14,000 and promises to be the best town in the state, it being the gateway to the mountains north, where are the cattle, horses, sheep and other large industries The Falls at this place and from which the city derives its name, are truly wonderful, the great volume of water gushes from a great Spring in the foot hills, forming beautiful falls some 100 feet drop, and a large stream below which furnishes power for the mills.

Time being limited will have to break off here abruptly, leaving you in charming Helena. Yours Truly

R. W. Cobb.

AUBURN GETS THE FACTORY.

Thursday's Daily.

This forenoon, Will Schaab secretary of the Auburn Improvement Associations, received this dispatch, sent from Chicago.

WILL SCHAAB,

Have secured the Spring Co, for our proposition.

W. H. McINTYRE

This settles it, Mr. McIntyre has been in Chicago several days, and the Messrs. Ulmstead, the gentlemen who control the Spring Co, have been in consultation with him. Mr. McIntyre acting for the Auburn Improvement Association was empowered to make them a definite offer of a bonus, which, it seems they have accepted This is the company about which so much has been said, and several of our exchanges have made very unfriendly remarks about the prospects of getting them at Auburn. Now it is settled and they are to come. They are to be assisted by a comfortable bonus, but one which our people can afford to pay. They make buggy springs and similar steel goods, and employ, 75 to 150 hands, according to the season. This will be a convenient establishment for Auburn, whose three large buggy factories, together with the smaller Richey factory can use a considerable amount of the output right here in Auburn. It is estimated that the various factories here will put up about 20,000 buggies during 1896 Now, that we have secured this factory, more will follow.

Utah A State.

The new state officers began their terms last Monday, January 6, The constitution and laws of new state have some features For example, it provides that juries shall consist of eight men instead of twelve, and that in civil cases three fourths of the number may render a verdict Another provision is to the effect that the state shall never go into debt exceeding $200,000, except in case of insurrection; and another guarantees to every citizen the right to obtain employment wherever possible, and makes any interference with this right a crime. It is generally known, of course, that suffrage is given to women on equal terms with men. There is considerable wealth in Utah. Its population is greater than that of any of the other recently admitted western states, and the probabilities are that, having become a state, Utah will experience a more rapid growth than heretofore.

From Dr. L. A. Hines

Tampa, Fla., Jan. 6, 1896.

This morning I will write you again. This may be the last letter you will receive from me for a time as I am liable to ship any time. After I leave this place you will not hear of me because no correspondence is allowed from Cuba. Reporters are not admitted to the Island under any considerations. The weather here is very fine, no rain, and the mercury never goes below 40 degrees above zero. This place is on the boom now but if the Cubans are successful in their struggle, Tampa will be a dead town for all the cigar factories will go to Cuba. The streets here are all white sand and very deep. Niggers are drawing wood with 4 mules and ¾ of a cord to the load I was in Ebo City yesterday. This place is one mile from Tampa and is a Cuban town. Every thing runs open Sunday, and I saw every kind of game imaginable The orange trees that were frozen last winter are sprouting up very nicely and the sprouts will bear fruit next year if they are not frozen this winter.

I don't remember whether I told you the population of Tampa or not; it is 25,000. This morning I will go again to Ebo City and will then know more when I will leave for Cuba. The Cubans are very nice but unless you have their confidence, look out. The ladies are very nice here but can not be compared to the northern ladies. The public buildings of this place are very fine. The people here are very peculiar and call us fellows "Yanks." There are many northern people here now and they are all very nice. This town is full of sharks who are looking for suckers. Last week they caught one here in the room and robbed him in a poker game. He made a holler and got his money back. These niggers expect a tip for every thing they do for you The engines here all burn wood and when they stop you would laugh to see them wood up. This place is a great buzzard town, for hundreds can be seen flying over the town any time. They are very tame and light in the street or yard. They are protected by the law, penalty $25 for killing one.

Fruit is as expensive as in the north and other things much higher. They never mark goods twice or discount from marked price. The meals are far inferior to the meals in the north. Hidy's meals are all O. K. There are no paved streets and sidewalks are in miserable condition. There are some very fine churches and almost every one attends on Sunday (especially the young people.) I was at one yesterday, the M. E. and heard a very able discourse. I will say to you now frankly the only thing the people can boast of in this country is the climate. Northern people who come here are very much disappointed in the country. The soil,—well there isn't any, and where there happens to be, it isn't more than one inch deep. I have many funny things to tell you but will wait until I see you for that. Tell my people I am well and very happy. I am asked by people every day if I won't locate here. I don't know how I would like it. I hardly think I will, for they kill people here and hang niggers. I think I could make money here but will determine as to location after I come from Cuba. The insurgents are near Havanna, and no doubt will take the place soon. A Spaniard said to me that last summer, Cubans killed one and yellow fever three; so you can see the odds the Spaniards have, two enemies.

Now, I will close this letter and try and learn when I ship and will write you before, unless I am jerked away before I may time.

From Dr. L. A. Hines

Who is on his way to Cuba to Secure a Position as Surgeon.

Dr. L. A. Hines is now at Tampa, Fla. and writes an interesting letter back to one of his Auburn friends. He expects to remain in that place a few days yet and will be glad to hear from his Auburn friends. In his letter he says:

TAMPA, FLA., JAN 4, 1896

Now as I have had a good nights rest, will try and write you more fully the various incidents of my journey. Until after I left Cincinnati my journey was uneventful. After leaving Cincinnati, we passed through some very strange country especially strange to a Hoosier like my self. The principal things of interest is high bridges and tunnels as there is 28 between Cincinnati and Chattanooga. Snow line extended to the latter city. We arrived at Atlanta 6:30 p m and remained over night in that city Jan. 1, 96. Many people still remain in Atlanta as the Exposition closed Dec. 31. We left Atlanta Jan. 2 nd at 7 a. m. and after traveling about 20 miles in one and one half hour the porter discovered a hot box on the nigger car We were delayed about one hour as the car had to be jacked up and new waste put under the axle. After that we traveled at about the rate of 15 or 20 miles an hour. I forgot to mention my traveling companion Mr. Comcook from Adrian. Mich, who was on his way to Lake North, Fla. We parted at Atlanta. My companion from Atlanta to Savannah was Att'y Keach a very pleasant gentleman from Troy N Y After leaving Macon, Ga, we passed through Dover Ga., where the Zeigler Bro's are located and defy the law in every way. At Camiron six miles above Dover the train was boarded by six of their gang who the conductor told us were spies for any U. S officer, I tried to look like a traveler then but they kept a suspicious eye on all of us. Tell Jno. West to come down if he wants a scrap Delayed in Savannah Jan 2 arriving there at 6:30 p. m. This is an awfu slow city all mules and negroes. A gentleman told me for the month of Sept. onl. 3 building permits had been taken out and Nov. 5, and Dec. 6. Oh yes I forgot to tell you where we took dinner Jan. 2, it was in the Turpentine district 140 miles from Savannah at Rocky Ford; two hotels there and such fun to see the niggers trying to get you to the house they represented and after you got there you would be surprised. The dinner was typical Southern dinner sweet potatoes, pork, corn bread, and black trap. Mr. Keach said he was wanting some stamps The man said he had them but they had no mucilage on them but would furnish mucilage if we cared to use them at once. We took them and found they had been taken from letters. From Savannah our train had 3 nigger cars and they were all well filled with a white man in charge who had hired them in Virginia and were taking them to the Turpentine forests of Fla. The Turpentine business is on a boom here but it will take me to long to day to describe process now. The hotel business is good after you leave Cincinnati. I told some of the you people all the southern people wanted was revenge and their money and if you stay at their hotels there get both. I arrived at Tampa at 7:30 last evening and stayed all night at the Amon hotel but have transfered this morning to the Palmetto, which is a very nice home-like place, Mr. Webb the proprietors claims to be a Hoosier People are here from Illinois and one man from Peru, Ind. Now as for Tampa it is a very beautiful place of 25000 inhabitance and the people are very nice. Several have asked me already if I won't stay here and practice here, of course I say no. This is the best city south of Atlanta but is very slow, not the equal of northern towns The thermometer was 40 degrees above zero last night but they all say frost to-night. The niggers are not plenty here but mules are abundant. I have learned very little as yet in regard to the Cuba matter but will see the Cuba minister this afternoon, will write you all them.

The main industry, of Tampa, is hotel and tobacco business. Mr. Webb told me that every month there was paid and expended by tobacco men $100.000.

The War Spirit

W. E. Curtis the Washington correspondent of the Chicago Record, gets hold of a great many good items. Among them we find this:

A gentleman by the name of Col. C. C. Ritter, of Granville, O., has sent copies of an original poem to every member of the senate and house of representatives. His theme is patriotic, and he appears to have been inspired by the recent message of the president. The following stanza will indicate the character and the merit of the whole:

"The American people shouted,
All hail, our Grover eats no crow,
Although Salisbury pouted,
And made a big fuss and a show,
Yet with caution he respected
The doctrine of Monroe."

The World's Fair Tests showed no baking powder so pure or so great in leavening power as the Royal.

Nervous Prostration

Cured by Dr. Miles' Nervine.

Prolonged derangement of the nervous system not only affects the brain and mental powers, but develops disease in some of the vital organs. The most dangerous of these indirect results is when the heart is affected. This was the case of the Rev. N. F. Surface, Fawn River, Mich., who writes under date of Feb. 14, 1895:

"Fourteen years ago I had a slight stroke of paralysis. Overwork brought on nervous prostration. I was exceedingly nervous and the exertion of public speaking caused heart palpitation that threatened my life. I used two bottles of Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure for my heart trouble, and two of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine for my nervousness and feel better than I ever expected to feel again. I can speak for hours without tiring or having my heart flutter as it formerly did, and I have you to thank that I am alive today."

U. S. Mint.

An Auburn Man Visits The Mint At San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 11, '96

EDITOR COURIER:

The United States gold mint through which we were shown would be of special interest to most of your readers. The hours the mint is open to visitors is from 9 to 11:30 a. m. On entering we are required to register, after which we are under guard by one of Uncle Sam's loyal subjects, an old gentleman of white hair and whiskers and of strong proportions, whose duty it is to show the visit or through every department. Our first instructions are, not to touch the coin, yet we are told we can have all the gold we want, if we can get away without being caught. We are then taken into the basement and are told that we are now in the largest mint in the world, and of course we have no reason to doubt this, there being four others, of lesser size in the United States, viz. in Idaho, Denver, Philadelphia and New Orleans, the first two however being principally assay departments, though Denver is to become a coining mint, in the near future. The first vault shown us, contains $11,000,000 of standard silver in canvas sacks. The dimensions of this vault is 12 by 16 feet. Second vault contains $11,500,000 in bullion, deposited some two years ago, and will probably be held until there is a change in the administration. For this amount, silver certificates have been issued. We are then shown into the furnace room where the motive power is generated. Next into the engine room on next floor above. The engine is a magnificent one of 150 horse power and has worked for twenty one years in this mint. It was built in San Francisco, of which fact the city is proud. We are next shown through the melting room, where depositors can leave their gold and get it in coin the next day. In what is termed the gott room, both gold and silver are melted, all of which is alloyed 10 per cent. copper. Perforated iron grates about ¾ inches in thickness, are used on the floors, which are taken up in sections and the floor swept twice a year, by which $5.000 in gold dust is saved annually At one time, carpets were used on the floors, and burned annually, saving about $2 500 but by this method much of the dust was tracked away and lost. The silver room at present is not in operation, though promises to start up at a lively rate as soon as it's "16 to 1". It should be understood that gold coin contains its face value in gold. In the rolling department the metal is made the proper thickness by a 250 ton pressure which makes it so hot as to form blisters on the hands of the workmen, without gloves, hence the latter are used. These gold bars are about five feet in length and the thickness of a twenty dollar gold piece, or the thickness of the coin intended to be made from it, are placed in a 5 inch copper tube, then in ovens 30 minutes, when the tube becomes heated to a cherry red. One of these tubes contain $30,000. The bars are then removed and placed in water, and when cooled are loaded on wooden carriers and rolled into the cutting room where the bar is placed under the cutter or die. The first cut is weighed accurately and if even a half grain is wanting it goes back and is melted over again, otherwise the work goes on rapidly, the machine cutting 190 gold and 400 silver coin per minute. The coin being cut, it is then taken through the process of stamping and milling which is interesting and instructive, not giving us time to pick out a good collection of 1896 coin we are referred to the basement floor again and shown a vault containing $400,000,000 in bullion, and another vault containing $21,000,000 standard silver In the press and stamp room are seen the dies used for gold and silver coin There are five presses with a capacity of 7000 $5, $10, or $20 gold pieces per hour. The coin receives a 150 ton pressure to make the corrugations, which are to prevent the coin from wear and the people from stealing it The latter clause may not be clearly understood, if not, the writer will be pleased to explain further. We were visibly impressed that 1896 coin is now being made. In the collection department are to be seen coin dating 1,000 years B C.

About leaving for Los Angeles and if we stay on the track, enroute to Alberquerque N. M, you may hear from this source again.

Went Home Horseback.

Harry Beck, son of Henry Beck at South Whitley has been making a visit with friends in this section and yesterday, he wanted to get a rig to take his best girl to a literary society in the evening. They had a good time and enjoyed the literary part all right, and at the close he brought the rig up to the school house door, and he and his girl were about to start, when the horse started, ran into the fence and broke the rig. And they do say, the young lady went home on horseback. Oh well, that is the good old-fashioned way. But it won't do to tell the girls down at South Whitley.

New Train.

The Lake Shore is Asked to Give Auburn More Passenger Service.

L. J. Miller, the grain buyer of the Lake Shore is where he can see every day the need of another train over the Lake Shore to accommodate our people. He has been talking it up for some time, but for the past day or two he has been canvassing the business part of the town with a petition that comes right down to the point and bids fair to secure the accommodation asked for, He and the petition are every where welcomed and not a man so far has refused to sign it, or has even hesitated. The request made of the Lake Shore is for a train to run from Ft, Wayne each morning to Waterloo and thence to Toledo, and then return the same evening via Waterloo and Auburn to Ft. Wayne. If the Lake Shore will do this, "we the citizens of Auburn" will feel greatly pleased. It will enable us to go to Tolendo and other points on that road and return the same day, whereas now a person going to Toledo must stay somewhere over night.

San Francisco

A Great City. Chinese Population Diminishing.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 11, '96.

EDITOR COURIER AND READERS:

While so much has been said and written of California, its wonderful resources, charming scenery and delightful climate it has become as a fairy tale and can be read in books. It is generally understood that the summers are dry and hot in the unirrigated valleys, although wheat and other grains do well providing the winter rainfall is sufficient. The occasional rains at this season, favored with a mild climate, cause the buds to start and the rose to bloom, as in May or June in the east, and where land and garden are under irrigation and proper care, the climate is such as to favor the growth of both flower and vegetation twelve months in the year as well as most of the citrus fruits, and it goes without saying that, together with the many inland and seaside resorts, this is the ideal spot in America for winter tourists be it in pursuit of health or pleasure.

San Francisco is a great city, not so large as many, it being about 400,000, but it being made up of every race of the continent, not more than 10 per cent of the population being American. The French, Italian, German and of course the Jew, rule. In the Chinese portion of Frisco, the population has fallen off nearly 100 per cent within the past two years, there now being only 25,000 celestials in the town. Frisco is not only a city built on "Seven" hills but "twenty-seven" would come nearer being right. Her cable systems are enormous extending from the ferries to all parts of the city, Forts, Golden Gate Park and the noted Cliff house and Seal Rocks. The city presents a lively appearance at all times, the streets being thronged with pedestrians and traffic over coble stone and fine cement pavements, which are kept scrupulously clean by the use of large coarse brooms, manipulated by hand. The accumulations of dirt when cleaned up is held in galvanized tanks, of a barrel capacity, which are stationed by lamp or telegraph poles, and are looked after by the dump carts, and driven out of the city, thus the city is kept clean. The water supply is from driven wells and reservoirs for domestic use, while the city is practically surrounded by salt water which is also quite domesticated by the constant use made of it by water craft from all parts of the world and the ferries that play between Oakland and this city every 30 minutes, "this being the only means of reaching this city from the States." We have been aboard these large ferry Boats a number of times, where 2000 to 3000 people crowded her decks, crossing San Francisco Bay the distance being about four miles. Many people who have business in Frisco, reside either in Oakland or Alameda, or other towns bordering the Bay, thus the ferries are crowded at the beginning and end of each day. Much might be said of the business part of town, its brokers, jobbing houses, banks, markets, commission houses and other enterprises that are carried on here a little different than elsewhere, but time prohibits.

Spitting Blood.

S. F. Fritz, of 677 Sedgwick street, Chicago, says: "I had a severe cough which settled on my lungs I tried a number of advertised remedies and also placed myself under treatment of several physicians, with no benefit. I was recommended to try Foley's Honey and Tar. While little expectation of getting relief, I purchased a bottle. I had taken but few doses when I felt greatly improved; I was enabled to sleep, spitting of blood ceased, and by the time I had taken the second bottle I was entirely well. It saved my life." Rensberger Trial.

The Fire Bug Gets His Just Deserts In Court At Albion.

The men who set fire to the buildings on the Kendallville fair ground last fall, have been up for trial at Albion for a few days. Judge Penfield sat as judge, and the case being an unusual one, created a great deal of interest. Five men had been arrested on the charge, and one of them, Chauncy Baker, turned states evidence, and it is expected he will be set free. Rensberger, the man who is supposed to have started the fire, will have to bear the worst of it Baker said Rensberger took a cigar from Hornet, another of the party, lighted it and then threw the match on the ground, and that the fire was started in this way, Baker said that after throwing the match down all started north and went around the fair ground, and coming to the main gates, bought tickets and went in. In the preliminary trial Baker had said that Rensberger set the grass and stubble on fire purposely. But now he swore it was accidental. But N. B. Newman, who had heard him at first and the stenographer who took his first evidence, went on the stand and contradicted him. But from other testimony it came out that the party had been prevented from getting into the grounds by climbing over the stable roof, that all got down and one of them lit a match and appeared to be putting it through a crack into the stable. The fire started at once, and our readers will all remember how quick the flames spread and destroyed a number of stables and several valuable horses. The men had been drinking very heavily. Judge Penfield charged the jury about four p. m. Wednesday evening and at two o'clock that night they had agreed on a verdict of guilty and a term of ten years in the penitentiary. We do not know what will be done with his accomplices.

Mammoth Cave

This most noted of earth's caverns has been described so often, that it would be useless to try to say anything new of it. Yet a recent letter of a former Auburn citizen will be found of interest to the student of natural phenomena. Rev. N. J. Myers, now in the south writes to the Newcomerstown Index, a letter, a part of which reads:

This marvelous subterranean temple of splendor is in Edmonson county, state of Kentucky. It is about ninety miles south of Louisville. It was discovered by a hunter named Hutchins in 1809. He was pursuing a wounded bear. This place of natural grandeur does not consist of one large room, but a series of magnificent chambers, beautiful avenues, and stone paved streets paved by the hand of nature. These avenues, streets and chambers have all been worked out of the sub-carboniferous limestone of the Cave, since the Miocene period in geological history, not as some might suppose, by volcanic eruptions, or violent earthquakes, but by the mechanical and chemical action of water. Here in ages gone by in the midst of awful silence, oppressive darkness and endless gloom, the waters coursed their winding way, wearing little by little, until the sublime temples, gigantic stalactites, deep pits, colossal domes, marvelous grottoes, astonishing formations of peculiar images, awful chasms, bubbling springs and beautiful flowers were created. It requires six months for this subterranean world to fill its lungs with air. As soon as the mercury reaches 54 degrees, and begins to descend from that point the mighty cavern begins inhaling, and the current, strong enough to blow out any ordinary oil lamp, continues rushing inward until the summer heat brings mercury back to 54 degrees. Then it begins inhaling and ceases not until cold weather comes again.

Within the last few days a rivulet has been discovered falling from a height of 130 feet and a dome one mile in length and one hundred feet high, varying from six to thirty feet in width. One of the most remarkable features of this cavern is the peculiar gypsum rose formations extending a distance of two miles in one avenue. Here you may look upon all kind of beautiful flowers, lilies, daisies, pansies, and roses with their crystalized substance sparkling like jewls beneath the light of your lamps.

Pulpit Rock is a large rock at one side of the subterranean auditorium. This Dr. Hazen desired to have consecrated to Almighty God, and being the first clergyman who visited the cave, I was called upon to perform this solemn service. The party from Newcomerstown, consisting of Mrs. Harriet Rehard, John Rehard, Byron Davis, Mrs. Catherine Davis, Mrs. Myers and Lauron Myers, with the guides, Dr. Hazen, and Mrs Elson, of Canton, joined in singing "Praise God from Whom all Blessings Flow" and "Nearer, My God, to Thee." The cave underlies a large portion of the country measuring an area of more than 8,000 square miles.

THE NEWS RECORD.

SUMMARY OF A WEEK'S HAPPENINGS.

The Latest News as Flashed Over the Wires from All Parts of the World—Regarding Politics, Religion, Casualties, Commerce, and Industry.

Held for Ransom.

Bay City (Mich.) special: The report that A. A. Knopfel has been found in Portland, Ore., is denied by a brother of Mrs. Knopfel, and a merchant in that city. Cincinnati parties recently wrote here that if a glove or necktie belonging to Knopfel was sent to them they would discover his whereabouts, presumably through a clairvoyant. The friends of Knopfel took no stock in this, but the police did, and a necktie of his was forwarded to the parties. It is now believed that the parties who sent for the tie know about where he is, and have confederates in other parts of the country. It is believed that he is at present being held for ransom, and that this will be made known to friends later.

Nashville, Ind., in Ruins.

A disastrous fire occurred at Nashville, the county seat of Brown County, Ind. About a third of the town was destroyed, causing a total loss of over $25,000. The buildings were all frame structures, and there being no fire protection they were completely at the mercy of the flames. There was but little insurance. Eleven business blocks were burned, including the postoffice, from which but few of the effects were saved. The heaviest losers were Alonzo Allison, Postmaster and owner of the Weekly Democrat; Taggart & Coffin, implement store; W. F. Graton, grocery, and Joseph Coleson, grocery and restaurant, and W. H. Pittman.

Crazed by Work.

Miss Ruth Gordon, the clerk, who a few days ago caused a stampede in the store of L. S. Ayres & Co., at Indianapolis, by firing four shots at Harry Purviance, was declared insane by a lunacy commission, and will be sent to the insane hospital. The testimony of the physicians was to the effect that Miss Gordon was suffering from hysterical mania, superinduced by a general breaking down of the system. This had been coming on for several months, and was caused by hard work and the fact that the patient was compelled to be on her feet so much of her time.

The Lion's Head Swelled.

London special: The elation at Great Britain's apparently successful issue from a delicate situation combined with the confidence aroused by the promptness with which the naval preparations were carried on, has given a tone of cock-sureness to a portion of the press and a majority of the people.

The Standard is so elated that it talks about Great Britain holding her own against any five or six of the great Powers, and thinks it a matter of supreme indifference as to how the Powers may group themselves.

Banished From Cuba.

Vigorous steps will be taken for the protection of Sylvester Scovel, a staff correspondent of the Pittsburgh Dispatch in Cuba, who has been ordered banished from the island. Secretary Olney has been asked to prevent the edict from being carried out and to take steps to see that whatever rights he has in Cuba as an American citizen and correspondent are maintained. The Secretary replied promptly: "I have no official information yet. Spain's rights to exclude aliens is unrestricted."

Fell From a Scaffold.

Eugene Eckert, of Bethlehem, Pa., and Otto Horsier, of Youngstown, O., workmen on the waterworks stand-pipe at Lebanon, Ohio, were thrown to the ground, a distance of forty feet, by the breaking of a scaffold. The men are badly injured, one having his spine broken and the other his skull fractured. Both men will probably die.

A British Denial.

London special: The Admiralty Department says that the destination of the flying squadron of the British warships, now off Spithead, has not yet been determined upon, even by the Amiralty, and that certainly the warships are not going to Bermuda or anywhere in American waters at present.

Watterson's Choice.

Henry Watterson, in an interview, declared for Col. Wm. R. Morrison of Illinois, for President, and Gen. John B. Gordon of Georgia, for Vice President. It is apparent that Morrison will be the principal opponent of Governor Matthews. Morrison is a sound-money man.

The Populists.

The executive committee of the Populist national committee met at St. Louis, in closed session, and after deliberating an hour, announced the selection of St. Louis as their choice for the national convention which meets July 22.

Died After a Revival.

Mrs. Mary Heater, aged 46, and the mother of three children, residing at Larue, Ind., dropped dead on reaching her home, after participating in a Methodist religious revival meeting in progress at that place.

The New Bond Issue.

The administration is apparently making use of every legitimate means to make the forthcoming popular loan a conspicuous success. With a view of stimulating general interest in the issue, Mr. Eckels, comptroller of the currency, with approval of the President and Secretary Carlisle, will send copies of a circular letter to all the national banks in the United States.

Thousands Killed.

Constantinople special: According to information collected by the Embassies 3,000 Armenians were killed at Orfah on December 28 and December 29, and at Bredjik, Soumkale and Djibire 600 were killed.

GENERAL GOMEZ

Is Stationed Within Fifteen Miles of Havana.

A dispatch from Havana via Key West, says: Gomez is fifteen miles south of here. Campos' wall of troops has failed to keep him west. The situation is more grave than at any time since the beginning of the war. Thousands of troops have been thrown into Havana province, yet the destruction of towns, residences, and estates continues. Many towns offering resistance are burned; those surrening are spared.

Railroad traffic in the entire island is paralyzed. The engineers of Havana roads refuse to run trains and the companies uphold their action. I am informed by the authorities that the roads have stopped the trains until the safety of property is assured. The town of Bejucal, fifteen miles south, was captured. Thirty-five houses, twenty cars and the railroad station was burned. The volunteers surrendered, but the regulars in the blockhouse held out. Other important towns burned in the past week are: Gabriel, 2,500 inhabitants; Guiara, 4,500; Artemsi, Aguceate and Benavides.

The insurgents since the invasion of the western provinces have succeeded in avoiding a serious battle. There are skirmishes daily. The only important engagement was on the 10th near Quivican, when the Gomez party was attacked by Adecoa. Thirty-six wounded Spaniards were brought here. The insurgents' loss is unknown.

Car Cleaners Killed.

A party of car cleaners employed by the Wagner Palace Car Company were run down by a train on the Hudson River railroad at One Hundred and Forty-fourth avenue, New York. The car cleaners were walking north on the N. Y., N. H. & H. railroad track, when they stepped to the Hudson River railroad track to avoid a New Haven express. As they stepped on the Hudson River railroad track they were struck by engine No. 891 of the New York Central road, which was going at a good rate of speed. Lizzie Becker and Delia Mahon were killed outright. Maggie Tracey had her left leg cut off and is likely to die. Mario Crummer, another of the injured, was hurt internally. Her condition is critical. Louis Yender had his left leg broken and he also sustained a scalp wound.

Gen. Harrison Will Wed Mrs. Dimmick After Lent.

Ex-President Harrison has formally announced his engagement to Mrs. Dimmick. This was done at the Fifth Avenue hotel, New York. There was a crowd of newspaper men and others about the hotel, when Private Secretary Tibbetts appeared and handed them the following: "General Harrison authorizes the announcement that he and Mrs. Dimmick are engaged to be married and that the marriage will not take place until after lent."

Saloon Men Scared.

Saloon keepers in New York City to the number of 1,000 or more are in a state of consternation over a decision of the Court of Appeals, by which every saloon within 200 feet of a church or school house is to be wiped out. The law under which this decision was rendered is Section 43 of the laws of 1892, which provides that licenses shall not be issued to saloons within 200 feet of churches or schools.

Campos Recalled.

A dispatch from Madrid says that the cabinet has decided to recall from Cuba Captain General Campos and his brother-in-law, General Arderius, second in command. Generals Marin and Pando will be temporarily substituted in their places. The supreme command in the island will be conferred on General Weyler, who will sail for Cuba forthwith in company with General Polaveija.

Foraker Elected Senator.

The two houses of the Ohio Lesislature met in joint session at 12 o'clock Wednesday, and confirmed their respective acts in electing J. B. Foraker United States Senator for the term to begin March 4, 1897. The Senator-elect, being escorted to the house, was received with great applause and addressed the general assembly briefly.

Poverty the Cause.

William Oswell, of Magdeburg, N. Y., shot and killed his mother and then ended his own life in that city. He had been out of work for some time past and this is supposed to have prompted him to commit the double crime.

Drowned in a Tub.

The 2-year-old child of Herman Hocker of Evansville, Ind., was drowned by falling into a washtub containing less than three inches of water. The mother was in the yard talking to a neighbor at the time.

Dashed to Death.

A scaffold on which three painters were working, at No. 38 South Second street, Philadelphia, fell. William Anderson and Edward Petroski were instantly killed and Henry Peterson fatally injured.

Scalded to Death.

At Chagrin Falls, Ohio, while playing near the stove a 2-year-old son of Harvey Freman upset a kettle of boiling water, scalding it to death. The child was horribly burned and died instantly.

Short $54,000.

The shortage of Albert Wade, the absconding assistant cashier of the First National bank, of Mt. Vernon, Ind., is officially announced to be $54,000.

IT GOES TO CHICAGO.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION TO MEET JULY 7.

World's Fair City Wins on the Twenty-ninth Ballot—St. Louis Defeated by Two Votes—Gotham Gives the Lake City Her Strength.

Location Is Named.

The Democratic national convention will be held in Chicago July 7. This conclusion was reached by the committee in session at Washington after twenty-nine ballots had been taken and the struggle had gone on until well toward midnight. Starting in with but six votes, Chicago steadily gained in favor until she won the prize. At one time the number of votes cast for her was but four. Nevertheless her fitness in location won the fight for her. "It was a pure question of geography," said one of the most prominent Eastern Democrats and a member of the committee. There was no bluster, no buncombe speech-making, no noise of any sort in favor of Chicago, says a Washington correspondent. She won the fight purely upon her merits, and after the individual prejudices of the members in favor of other cities had given way.

The detailed vote on the final ballot by States was:

Chicago—Connecticut, Florida, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Tennessee, Vermont, West Virginia, Wisconsin, District of Columbia, Alaska.

THE CHICAGO COLISEUM.

WHERE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION WILL BE HELD JULY 7.

St. Louis—Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Delaware, Georgia, Kansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, New Jersey, North Dakota, South Carolina, Texas, Utah, Virginia, Washington, Wyoming, Arizona, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Indian territory.

Cincinnati—Ohio.

Chicago was voted for on the final round by all the distinguished Democrats upon the committee. Clark Howell, Senator Gorman, Josiah Quincy of Massachusetts, William F. Sheehan of New York, William F. Harrity of Pennsylvania, Bradley B. Smalley of Vermont, E. C. Wall of Wisconsin and others prominent in national or State affairs, all voted for Chicago.

The understanding is that the Chicago delegation will be expected to have a certified check for $40,000 ready for the executive committee when it arrives in Chicago three weeks hence. This will be turned over to the committee, with the keys to the convention hall, and then the Chicago delegation will step down and out and leave the entire management of the convention in the hands of the national committee.

There is to be no appointing of sergeant-at-arms or other officers by the Chicago people, and no claim for large numbers of tickets with which the convention hall can be packed. Everything is to be left absolutely to the national committee. It is expected that that committee will allot a certain number of tickets to the Chicago people, but how many or upon what terms has not been decided. The Chicago delegation was quite willing to leave that matter in the hands of the national committee, content with getting the national convention and preferring to place the responsibility for its management in the hands of that organization, and thus avoid any criticism as to mismanagement, such as has been made with reference to a former Democratic convention held in that city.

After the location had been decided upon the committee promptly took up the question of the date for holding the convention, and the issue was soon sharply defined by two motions, one to hold it June 2 and another that it be held July 7. The vote resulted 32 to 18 in favor of July 7.

Can Handle the Crowd.

Chicagoans claim that no other city in the country can furnish anything like the facilities for handling the crowds that acompany a national convention as well as can Chicago. To obtain hotel accommodations it will not be necessary for visitors to sleep on cots in hallways nor in chairs in reading and smoking rooms, and the transportation facilities from the center of the city to the likely convention hall are ample. According to the following table forty-three hotels are ready to accommodate over 15,000 guests, besides taking care of their regular patrons:

ENGLAND WILL YIELD.

Graceful Backdown Projected in the Venezuelan Matter.

Aside from the leisurely manner in which the Venezuelan commission is arranging to prosecute its work, there are other indications, says a Washington correspondent, that the administration has become convinced that this august body will not have the honor of settling the great boundary dispute. While it cannot be stated positively that this belief is based entirely upon any specific reports from Ambassador Bayard upon the subject, yet there is reason to believe some assurances of a satisfactory nature have come to the State Department that the matter will be terminated shortly, probably within two months or before a report can reasonably be expected from the Venezuelan commission, and upon lines that will be unobjectionable to our government.

While details of the arrangement are not obtainable, and perhaps have not yet been fixed, it is believed the basis of it will be arbitration as proposed originally by the United States, but with a limitation that will suffice at least to save British pride and appear to maintain British consistency. This is likely to be found in an agreement between Great Britain and Venezuela directly, brought about through the good offices of a third party, not necessarily or probably the United States, to submit to a joint commission the question of the title to all territory west of the Schomburgk line, with a proviso that if in the course of the inquiry of the commission evidence appears to touch the British title to the lands lying to the eastward of that line the body may extend its functions to adjudicate such title.

This arrangement will meet the British contention that the original arbitration shall be limited to lands to the westward of the line, while still conceding the justice of the contention of President Cleveland that the lands on the other side may properly be taken into consideration in fixing the boundary. Possibly a supplementary arbitration will be left to deal with the question as to the title of the eastward lands, if the original commission dealing with the matter shall find that the title to the lands is a fit subject for arbitration as shown by the evidence produced before it.

At the Budapest millennial exhibition next year there will be another steel tower like the Eiffel tower, but 1,625 feet high, instead of 975.

Foreigners who are not bachelors of arts or science are to be excluded from the Paris medical schools, as the laboratories are overcrowded, and even enough subjects for dissection cannot be obtained.

WHAT IT WOULD MEAN

WAR WOULD PRACTICALLY STOP FOREIGN TRADE.

The Closing of the Markets to Our Products Would Result—Gov. McKinley's View of the Dingley Tariff Bill—Want Cheaper Coal.

The McKinleyites' Ideal.

The suggestion that the United States may find it necessary to go to war over the Venezuelan boundary dispute, has brought forcibly before the people the condition of affairs which would follow a declaration of war with England. The certainty that this country would ultimately triumph has not prevented a consideration of the tremendous losses to all classes—farmers, workers, manufacturers and traders—resulting from the temporary stoppage of foreign commerce and the closing of the best markets for our surplus products. Of all our exports, valued last year at $793,392,599, Great Britain and her dependencies purchased $464,818,388 worth, or nearly 60 per cent. Of this large amount about 70 per cent. was the product of American farmers, who find in England and her colonies their principal market for cotton, wheat, pork, beef and sheep. Should our sales of these staples be cut off by war the result would be a great fall in prices, and total inability to dispose of hundreds of millions of farmers with useless crops on their hands. Without markets in which to sell they could not buy the products of our factories, and idle workmen would rapidly increase. With mills closing and consumption decreasing, our merchants, banks and transportation companies would all be involved in general ruin, panic and bankruptcy.

This is no fancy picture, but the most assured facts. Against the possibility of such conditions the business interests of the country are loudly protesting. And yet the objects of the Republican party, as expressed in its platform and in the tariff bill which has just been rushed through the House of Representatives, are practically to put this country into the same relations with the rest of the world, as would exist under a state of war. The declared policy of the high-protectionists is to shut out foreign goods with a prohibitory tariff, and they insist that a similar system would be best for all the countries of the earth. This would simply mean that international trade would cease, and each country depend on its own markets. Is not this equivalent to a cessation of commerce through war? And should not the business men who are trying to avoid war, by securing the settlement of foreign disputes by the peaceful methods of arbitration, protest just as strongly against the war tariff which the McKinleyites in Congress are trying to thrust on this country?

Peace with honor; prosperity; equality of rights before the law; no unjust taxation or class legislation, and the greatest possible freedom of trade are what the masses of the American people most desire. And the party which stands in their way will receive little favor as soon as the public sentiment finds an opportunity for expression at the polls.

Lower Duty: Cheaper Coal.

The Democratic contention that if the duty of 75 cents per ton on bituminous coal was reduced the price of coal would fall is now admitted by so eminent a protectionist as the Hon. William Lamb, Republican national committeeman from Virginia. In a letter written to Senator Daniel, Mr. Lamb refers to the increased importations of coal from Nova Scotia, under the Wilson tariff, and says: "After the reduction of the duty on coal from 75 cents to 40 cents the price of coal had to be correspondingly reduced in those markets where it was consumed." And as a remedy for the lower prices he urges Senator Daniel to insist that the duty be increased to 67½ cents per ton.

It will be remembered that when the Wilson tariff was before the House it put coal on the free list, in response to a general demand from the New England States for cheaper fuel for their iron works and factories. The abolition of the duty was opposed by the Republicans in Congress, who claimed that in the first place the Nova Scotia coal which was kept out by the tariff was no good, and would not be used if allowed to come in free, and in the second place that even if the foreign coal did come in it would be no cheaper than under the 75 cents per ton duty.

Both of these assertions have since been proved untrue. Although the Senate left a duty of 40 cents per ton on coal the importation of bituminous coal from Nova Scotia has been largely increased. It has been thoroughly tested by a number of large manufacturing concerns and gas companies, and has proved highly satisfactory. The Maine Central, Boston and Maine, and Fitchburg Railroads have been using large quantities of imported coal, and will this year increase their orders. That the lower duty has reduced prices is frankly admitted by the Republicans, by whom this fact is made the basis for a demand for higher duties.

This is a poor time of the year to talk of raising the price of coal. The Republicans would have some excuse if they tried to take ice off the free list in order to shut out the foreign pauper icebergs which are sending cold breezes down this way. But the sixty-five million Americans who want to keep warm during the winter months are not anxious to see coal dearer merely to benefit a few millionaire coal mine-owners in Pennsylvania and Virginia.

McKinley on the Dingley Tariff Bill.

Gov. McKinley, with his usual modesty, has consented to give his humble opinion on the tariff bill passed by the House of Representatives. In an interview in which he recognizes that a waiting world is listening for the great and only high-tariff oracle's views, he says: "The tariff bill passed by the House is a suitable answer to the President's appeal for relief for the treasury. It will be observed that the bill is only an emergency measure. Under the present circumstances it would be folly to enact a substantial protective tariff bill."

From this can easily be seen what the Republicans who follow McKinley really want. The Dingley bill, with its restoration of duties on lumber, wool and other materials now free, and its increase of duty 15 per cent. above the present rates, is only a temporary expedient, something which falls far short of the high tariff which would be enacted if the Republicans had full control of the Government. An advance of 15 per cent. in duties already too high is considered by the patron saint of the protectionists as merely a moderate measure, which a Democratic President should have no objection to signing.

Gov. McKinley doubtless represents the sentiment of the orthodox high-tariffites, in his statement that the Dingley bill does not go far enough in the direction of restricting trade. But he neglected to state how a higher tariff, by shutting out foreign goods, could possibly help the treasury by yielding more revenue. The Republicans in Congress pretend that their bill would greatly increase the customs revenues. But they forget to explain how a law which largely prohibits importations can possibly give more revenue from duties on imports. Gov. McKinley is also silent on this important point. Perhaps he remembered that under his famous high-taxation law the revenues fell off until in the last fiscal year in which it was in operation the customs receipts were only $131,818,530, and the total receipts left a deficit of $70,000,000.

Unwarned by his experience in 1890 and 1892, when on the sole issue of a high-tariff versus tariff reform the Republican majority in Congress was overthrown, and a Democratic President elected by an overwhelming majority, Gov. McKinley talks of still higher tariffs if he or some other protectionist shall be elected President this year. In thus plainly stating his position he gives every encouragement to the Democrats, who know that they beat the McKinley idea twice before, and they can do it again. A union of all the people who prefer low to high taxes will defeat all the powers of protected monopoly and tariff-created wealth.

A Temporary Tariff Job.

No one is likely to be deceived with the ruse of the tariff tinkers in framing a two-year limit to their horizontal bill as a temporary measure of "revenue only." The Republicans are confident, of course, of electing their candidate for the Presidency next year; they will have control of the Senate, and they have little fear that their overwhelming majority in the House will be succeeded by a Democratic majority in the Fifty-fifth Congress. In these conditions the temporary tariff bill "for revenue" would remain a permanent tariff for protection, unless in the triumph of victory the duties should be screwed up still higher for the sake of more "revenue." At any rate, the pleasing prospect is afforded the manufacturers, workingmen and merchants of the country of a renewal of tariff agitation in Congress at the end of two years, no matter what might be the result of the elections. The Republicans are pledged by the terms of their bill to go, at least, through the motions of revising the tariff when the limit fixed in this bill shall have expired. The Democrats, at the same time, will not cease to protest against a measure so crude and iniquitous in most of its features.

Should the Republicans elect two Houses of Representatives in succession it would be a rare phenomenon in the recent history of their party. Since 1872 they have secured a majority in only three Houses—namely, in 1880, in 1888 and in 1894. They were turned out in 1884 because of their tariff of 1883 in the Keifer Congress; they were turned out in 1892 on acount of their McKinley tariff; and who shall say that they are not preparing for a like fate in 1896, with this new tariff menace as a warning to the people of what may be expected from Republican success?

As if the authors of this new tariff job had themselves a misgiving in regard to its political effect, they seek to conciliate public opinion with the false pretense that it is a temporary measure, made necessary by the embarrassments of the treasury. But, no matter what may be the result of the elections for the next House and for President, they have in the secure possession of the Senate the assurance that their temporary job would be a permanent feature if it could be passed in the guise of a measure for revenue. The artifice is too shallow and transparent to deceive any but those who are willing to be duped. It is said that hypocrisy is the homage which vice pays to virtue. This high tariff bill, in the guise of a temporary measure for "revenue only," is the reluctant homage which the votaries of protective spoliation pay to the genius of free trade.—Philadelphia Record.

A Tariff on Wool Is a Great Fraud.

A Wisconsin wool-grower who has had thirty years of experience in the business has the common sense view of the wool situation in his statement that a tariff on wool is a fraud of the first magnitude, as "it burdens consumption, fetters manufacturers and hinders progress." Under every tariff act creating a tax on wools prices of wool have declined. To return to the McKinley schedule by a restoration of the McKinley duties on raw wool means an increase by one-quarter of the prices of woolen wear and of carpets and blankets. The woolen industry was never more prosperous than it is now, under free raw material, and manufacturers are filing no protests against the Wilson bill. The speculators are another matter.—Philadelphia Times.

Duties on Imported Luxuries.

It is almost an insult to tell a citizen you will tax his clothing further, that is already heavily taxed, and will not tax his beer, that is very lightly taxed; nor tax his tea, coffee and foreign confections, that are now free of tax. No plea of temporary levies; no dodge to the effect that "this is not a tariff bill, but an emergency revenue measure," will fool the masses into acquiescence with an effort to "inch in" McKinleyism; slip up, sneak round, under pretences that are as false as the reasons for such legislation are feeble. An additional beer tax could be levied "temporarily," so could "temporary duties be laid on imported luxuries, that now come in free or under light duties.—Chattanooga Times.

Not Flattering.

There is much in the manner in which an announcement is worded. Two menageries recently arrived at Bologna, one of which was under the management of Signor B——, and the other under his wife, traveling respectively on their own account. Here they decided to join their forces, and the fact was announced on the bills as follows: "Owing to the arrival of my wife my collection of ferocious animals is considerably augmented."

CHAPTER XXX.

Jane's resolution to avenge the murder of Jacob Lynn was by no means a fleeting impulse. The difficulties that seemed to present themselves even at first sight in no wise daunted her, nor was she afraid of the discovery that might be the outcome of her researches, for nothing could be more cruel than the suspense that was torturing her, no certainty more hateful than the suspicion which at present she was obliged to feel. By an instinct stronger than any evidence of actual fact she was persuaded that he had died because of her; and none other than Stephen Prinsep knowing the persecution she had endured at his hands, it seemed only too clear wherein lay the motive for the crime, and that he had been the murderer she could not doubt.

That he had sinned for her sake counted nothing in his favor; it seemed instead to add to the blackness of the crime by making her in a way a participator in it. Had it not been so she might have felt less bound to disinter the truth.

From first to last it had been her own fault—hers only; or so it seemed now. She had meant all for the best, but she thought with bitterness that had she been well-intentioned, things might have turned out better. Her father's words recurred to her that the consequence remained when the actual fault was dead or forgotten, and the aphorism seemed the wiser that she herself had proved it true.

Having decided that it was her duty to bring the murderer to justice, however it might pain herself—and she knew that it would be less painful to suffer in his stead than betray Stephen Prinsep—she lost no time in putting her resolve into execution.

Her first move was to visit the spot where Jacob Lynn had been found dead; and having managed to evade her mother's companionship, she set out alone. But on arrival she found a small group of people assembled there, curiously examining the ground; for the interest excited by the murder had been widespread.

She passed on quickly, and a few minutes' walk brought her on to the parade-ground. Hesitating for a moment whether to return later, or to relinquish her purpose for that day, her glance happened to fall upon the end house of the married men's barracks, and she remembered that the woman who lived there had been ill, and she had meant for some time to go and see her.

Crossing the parade ground, the thought struck her that if Jacob Lynn was accompanied on the afternoon he was murdered, the inmates of that end house would be the most likely to know of it. It was perhaps a fortunate coincidence that had brought her here.

The woman was at home, and well enough to be pleased to see a visitor. She was lying back in a straw easy-chair on the veranda, and, seeing Jane approaching, tried to move to meet her.

"Don't get up, Mrs. Phillips. You are not able to do so, I am sure. I did not expect you would be out of bed."

"I have been sitting out of doors for the last week. I was sitting here the very day Lynn went to his death. It gave me such a shock that I was thrown back more than a bit. If it hadn't been for him I should have been well by this time—not that it was his fault, poor fellow."

Jane had flushed at the unexpected mention of the very name she was anxious to introduce. But she was too confused to take advantage of it. However, Mrs. Phillips required no encouragement to continue a conversation, and went on briskly:

"They would have had me up at the inquest, no doubt, but I was that upset I couldn't have answered a question they asked me. And, besides, what I knew there were others knew as well as I."

"You mean," asked Jane, nervously, for her role of amateur detective was eminently distasteful to her, "you mean you only saw him pass alone?"

"That's all. I saw the khidmatgar pass—the man who found him, you know. I saw no one else go by that afternoon, except—I had forgotten that—somebody passed in gray clothes. I couldn't see who he was, but he must have struck across toward the hospital, for his name didn't come out at the inquest."

"Very likely. The two roads branch off at once. You did not happen to see who it was?"

"No; I never thought of it till now. I just saw that he was tall and wore a gray suit. And after all it didn't matter, as he had nothing to do with it?"

"No, of course not," agreed Jane, rising. "I am very glad you are better, Mrs. Phillips. My mother will be glad, too. She has been talking about coming to see you ever since she first heard you were ill."

Returning by the way she had come, this time there was no one passing along by the short cut, and she stood in the deserted compound, wondering what good she had done by coming there. If there had been anything to lead to a discovery, it would have been found before this. But evidence seemed to crop up without her volition. Moving her foot restlessly against the broken stump of a tree an outstanding twig broke, and, as it fell away, she saw something wedged in between the roots. She stooped and loosened it. It was a mother-of pearl button attached to a piece of smooth gray cloth, such as might have been torn from a gentleman's short gaiter.

Colonel Prinsep wore such short gaiters she knew; but then so many others in the regiment wore them, too, that unless she could actually fit the piece she held in her hand into the part from which it had been torn, nothing could be proved.

That, of course, was impossible, and being so, all her discoveries were useless. She had distressed herself to no purpose, and the end was as far away as ever.

With the button tightly clasped in her hand, she walked slowly home, thinking over what she already guessed, and what still remained to be conjectured. She remembered stories she had read of fathers who had sacrificed their own sons to a sense of justice, and wives who had given up their husbands, forgetting their love for the sinner in their loathing for the sins that had been committed; but she was no heroine, and she felt relieved that nothing more could be required of her, having done her utmost and failed. The mystery of Jacob Lynn's death might remain a mystery to all time.

For several days after this she remained inactive. Too troubled to dare to give herself leisure to think, she spent most of her time in reading; and by a curious coincidence, in one of the books with which she had chosen to distract her thoughts was an account of a woman tracing out the details of a crime and eventually discovering the murderer. By means of a disguise she had entered a house that was otherwise effectually closed against her, and so possessed herself of the necessary proofs. Armed with these, the rest had been easy; no further obstacles prevented her from gratifying the revenge which had urged her on.

Jane let the book fall into her lap. It floated vaguely across her mind that, if so much had been already done by a woman, surely she might have done more. It was from no ignoble motive she wished to bring the murderer to justice, but from a feeling of duty stronger than her inclination. It was while undecided, still doubtful of her own powers, and whether it would be right to use them so, that Major Larron called.

He came ostensibly to bring her a number of the regimental paper. The —th Hussars had always formerly had a publication of the sort, but latterly from various causes it had fallen into disuse, and its revival was only resolved upon a month before. This was the first number.

"A boy was just coming out of the printing-room with a bundle of them as I passed; I thought you would like to see one," he explained, in excuse for his somewhat early visit.

"You are always very kind in thinking of me," she answered, soberly.

"More because I cannot help myself than from any encouragement I receive."

Jane's short upper lip, usually so mobile and tremulously sweet, settled itself into an expression of obstinate determination. His friendship, always patent, yet never demonstratively so, she valued highly; but she had no intention of drifting into any closer relations. To avoid meeting his gaze she began cutting the leaves of the paper he had given into her hands.

"Don't misunderstand me," he went on, with a grave impressiveness in harmony with his dark, earnest eyes. "I don't require encouragement or thanks. I only want you to trust in me, and believe that in no other position could I be happier or prouder than I am now—as your slave."

"I thought the days of slavery were over"—trying to smile.

"Compulsory slavery, no doubt; but it is of my own free will I would render the labor of my hands and brain; and I would not be emancipated if I could."

She did not reply. Looking up cautiously to see the effect of his words, he saw that she was frowning, more as though vexed than confused by what he had said. He had spoken deliberately, and not from impulse as it had appeared, thinking that it was time to press his suit upon her attention.

Everything comes to him who waits; but it was possible to wait too long, too patiently. Patience might be mistaken for weakness of purpose or want of spirit, faults not easily forgiven by a woman. So he had thought; but discovering his mistake, he hastened to rectify it. No woman wooed in such a humor as that Jane's restless frown portended was ever won, even though so skilled a diplomatist as himself should be the wooer.

"I am boring you; I can see it," he said, laughing pleasantly. "Men in love are always prone to discuss their own feelings to the exclusion of other subjects of livelier interest; but I won't transgress again, I promise. Have you heard that Miss Knollys has again refused to be Mrs. Grey?"

"Is that the last piece of station gossip?"—laughing, too.

"The very last. He is his own betrayer this time. I fancy even his persistence is becoming exhausted; he was almost rude in his abruptness to the Colonel at mess last night."

"Why?"

"He has taken it into his head that it is his rivalry he has to fear; and"—slowly—"I am not sure but that he is right. No woman, unless she had some more favored lover, could be indifferent to such untiring devotion. What do you think, Miss Knox?"

"I have not sufficiently considered the subject for my opinion to be of any value, I am afraid," she answered, coldly.

A minute later the indifference she had assumed vanished from her face, and an expression of horror and contempt took its place as her eyes fell upon something on the paper in her lap.

"Oh, how could he—how could he!" she cried, vehemently, and rising hastily, as though to put away a frightful thought, she went over to the window at the further end of the room.

The paper had fluttered to the ground, and Barry Larron, picking it up immediately, let his glance travel swiftly over the exposed page. Only one item of any possible interest was among the mass of regimental matter; and even that at first sight seemed incapable of having caused such evident agitation.

"Colonel Prinsep, with his usual generosity and thoughtful perception of a feeling now general that some monument should be erected to the memory of Trooper Lynn, has expressed his intention of providing a cross bearing the date and circumstance of his death, and testifying to the universal regret felt by the regiment at his mysterious and untimely end."

Turning sharply, Jane saw that Major Larron held the paper in his hand, and perceived that he had already read the paragraph which had excited her indignation."

"Is it true?" she asked, clasping her hands impressively, forgetting that she was making clear her suspicions, in the uncontrollable repulsion she felt at the thought that the murderer should be the one to raise a memorial over his own victim.

Like a lightning flash, as she spoke, the case revealed itself to Major Larron, and for an instant he was horrified, having no room in his mind for anything save the one thought that Stephen Prinsep, his Colonel, was considered capable of the dastardly crime of having intentionally or otherwise killed a trooper in the regiment. He was about to hotly refute the imputation when a second thought struck him, that perhaps this might be turned to his advantage, and he restrained himself.

"Why should it not be true? What could be more natural than that the Colonel should present a monument as there was no regimental subscription?" he added, guardedly.

He folded up the paper and laid it quietly on one side. In his own mind he decided that he had behaved generously in the matter in not having by word or glance done anything to strengthen her belief in the Colonel's guilt. That he should put himself out of the way to defend him was not to be expected. Yet he hoped that she would not introduce the subject again, for he felt himself unable even to simulate credulity. Indeed, a feeling of camaraderie which he himself would have stigmatized as a weakness, and on this account hesitated to acknowledge, made him absolutely angry with her for supposing such a thing. Not until he had left the house did the thought strike him that there might have been some method in the madness.

OAK FORESTS OF AMERICA.

Rapid Disappearance of Woods that Were Once the Nation's Pride.

The magnificent oak forests north of the Ohio river, in the central part of the Northern States, have largely disappeared. Within the last five years there has been an increasing demand for oak in spite of business depression, more especially for such timber as goes into house finishing, including plain and quarter-sawed oak and white oak. The duration of the Wisconsin red oak supply is now pretty plainly indicated, and in the meantime remnants of Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and southern Illinois oak will have disappeared, except in small farm holdings, and the great bulk of the supply will thereafter come from south of the Ohio. Of course, there is oak in all the Southern States, but the alluvial bottom lands must furnish the great bulk of the timber, and as Kentucky and Tennessee and West Virginia are partly denuded, the main supply will soon be derived from the lower Mississippi and its tributaries. If the finest area of oak timber in the world, namely, that north of the Ohio river, has been stripped while the country's population and industries were comparatively small, how long will the remaining supply last when the needs are measured by our future population and industrial development? Walnut is gone; cherry, birch and maple will not last many years, and therefore the demand for oak will be much greater and will rapidly increase. It must be remembered, too, that oak lands are good for agriculture after the timber is cut, and for this reason the denudation will go on with greater rapidity than on the lands less valuable for tillage. When the tide of emigration sets strongly toward the alluvial areas of the lower Mississippi and its tributaries the hardwood forests will melt rapidly away before the attacks of the farmer. It is for this reason that large holdings of southern oak and other hardwoods are now being secured in the South. After a few years opportunities for such investments on a large scale will be gone forever.

Death of a Vagabond.

Together they limped into the little shelter for animals in East One Hundred and Second street. It was a question which was the more ragged and disreputable, the dog or the tramp. In one respect the tramp had the best of it. He limped with only two legs, and his companion was lame in three.

They stood there in the little office side by side, both looking at the man who sat behind the desk, making entries in a book.

"Say, mister," said the tramp, "what can you do for me frien' here?"

"What is the matter with him?"

"If you can discover anything that ain't the trouble with 'im, you're an artist. Me frien's suffering with premature baldness, one eye's gone, and he got locomotor atacks. He ain't no Beau Brummel, mister, but he's the squarest pard I ever traveled with, and if you can fix him up we'll pay ye some day.

"If yer can't," and almost unconsciously the tramp lowered his voice, "I want yer to send 'im over the bay by the smoothest road yer got."

The superintendent examined the dog gently, and then told the wanderer that there was no hope. The weary little waif had outlived his usefulness and was better dead.

Without a word the tramp handed the frayed rope to the superintendent, and when the official led the poor dog into the room from which no canine traveler ever returns, he followed.

"Good-by, pard," he said, reaching out his hand. His friend solemnly raised his one sound paw, and they shook hands silently and reverently, as old friends do who are about to part for a long time.

Then the tramp walked alone out into the street.—New York Press.

The Deadly Railroad Mortgage.

It is said that the late Samuel J. Tilden was the inventor of the modern railway mortgage, with all its deadly possibilities of foreclosure, receivership, lawyers' quarrels and general wreck and disaster. It was a diabolical invention. It has made the fortunes of thousands of lawyers and has proved the undoing of many thousands of stockholders and bondholders. The lawyers have a pudding when the railroad gets into the hands of receivers. The comptroller of one of the great transcontinental lines, now run by a United States District Court, told me lately in New York that it had cost the past year $600,000 more to operate the line under the receivership than it would have cost had it been run in the regular way by a board of directors. The lawyers got most of this big lot of money. A lawyer told me in Milwaukee the other day that there is no law whatever authorizing a court to operate a railroad and that the practice has grown up during recent years without any sort of statutory provisions regulating it. A judge now takes a railroad, appoints receivers, requires them to account to him, issues orders to buy rails and locomotives, to construct new roadbeds and bridges, to make or abandon leases, to pay interest or not to pay interest on bonds, and practically absorbs in his own person all the functions of president, directors, auditor, treasurer and general manager. He is only a lawyer raised to the bench and he knows nothing about railroading, but he runs the road year after year with the absolute authority of a czar.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Coal Mining by Electricity.

Coal will soon be hauled out of mines altogether by electricity. An English mine has tried electric hauling for eighteen months. Here is the result: It cost $20,000 a year to haul 600 tons of coal in ten hours with horses; with electricity, $10,000. American miners are watching and waiting. Electrical people are hard at work urging the adoption of their power. The objection is the large initial outlay.

The first mention of ostrich feathers on hats is in 1324, when one of the nobles of the French court appeared with an aigrette of ostrich plumes on his chapeau.

CHILDREN IN A CITY.

THE LIGHT AND SHADOW IN THEIR LIVES.

As Much Room for Class Distinctions as Among Their Elders—Democracy and Childhood—Their Serious Pursuits and Amusements.

Child Life in the Metropolis.

The points of superiority of the moderns over the ancients are so numerous and obvious that the old controversy as to the respective merits of the two no longer has any point and is not seriously discussed. But among the items that enter into the immense advances we have made over the people of a couple of thousand years ago is the fact that the condition, the wishes and wants of children now receive more attention; more is done for their comfort and happiness than was dreamed of as possible in any previous age of the world. It is a singular and significant fact that no author of ancient times alludes to his childhood in words indicating that he had the slightest pleasure in the recollection. The ancients really had no childhood, for at an age when our boys are entering the grammar schools the boys of Greece, the lads of Rome, were assuming the manly gown and undertaking the responsibilities of manhood; at an age when our girls are barely leaving off their short dresses, the girls who grew up with Demosthenes and Cicero, with Pericles and Julius Caesar, were married and had assumed the duties of housekeeping. Childhood is thus a thing of modern times. The boys and girls of Attica and Italy were really little old men and women, just as the boys and girls of China are today; only in our own age has the importance of childhood's happiness been fully realized. Child life has, therefore, become a factor, and a very important factor at that, in modern life, and to such an extent is this understood and appreciated that he who denominates this the "children's age" is not so far wrong as might be supposed.

But there are children and children, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, and in the innumerable grades of life found in a modern city there is just as much room for classes among children as among their elders, and, perhaps even more, for while, in one sense, children are model democrats and acknowledge no class distinction but that of age, in another they arrange themselves into sets with the utmost rigidity, and their social rules are almost as unalterable as the laws of the Medes and Persians.

ON THE WHARF.

The study of child life in a great city, therefore, assumes an interest which, at first glance, does not seem to belong to it, for to the thoughtless observer who sees the children pour out of our great public schools by thousands at the closing hour, the only question that presents itself is how in the world the parents are able to feed and clothe so many. As this, however, is a question that the parents themselves are sometimes hardly able to answer, it may be dismissed as irrelevant, for, somehow or other, no matter what the number of children that come into a family, they all seem to get enough to live on, and something to wear, and they all have homes, and beyond this is nobody's business to inquire.

IN THE TENEMENT DISTRICT.

In many respects child life in a city is of infinitely greater variety and superior picturesqueness to the life of children in the country. In the rural districts, children, whether of rich or poor parentage, are practically on a level so far as social life and amusements are concerned, while in the city there are as many phases to the life of childhood as there are residence districts.

The children of the slums have been frequently the subject of literary and artistic treatment and their importance in this regard has probably been exaggerated by a class of writers and artists who delight in the abnormal phases of human nature. A style of illustration has recently sprung up as a fad, and is now running its course in the illustrated papers, a style that represents the slum children as speaking and acting in a mock-heroic, dime novel style, quite foreign to their real character and nature. It is difficult to see the humor supposed to exist in such pictures, for although there may occasionally appear the one touch of nature that, on poetic authority, we are assured makes the whole world kin, most of these pictures are only stupid.

The children of the slums do not always work for a living, but there is a large class of children, generally of the very poor, who from the necessities of the case, are put to work at an early age, and, save in exceptional cases, never know any lot in life but that of the severest drudgery. The division of labor rendered necessary by the complicated processes of our manufactures has afforded employment in abundance, even for children of tender years, as there are many things which they can do as well as their elders, and at a much less expense. Their lot is not enviable. They may be seen in dozens, coming out of the large factories where many different operations necessitated the employment of labor of every grade, and the appearance of these youthful laborers is far from prepossessing. Nor are their words or actions a material improvement on their appearance, for the former are often coarse and the latter rude. They know nothing of the elegancies of polite society; it is impossible that they should, and it is quite probable that if they had the opportunity they would not care to learn. The district school which they attended for two or three years before they were old enough to work gave them all the book education they are likely ever to gain. It is enough for their purpose, and most of them do not care for more. There may be among them those "mute inglorious Miltons" of whom Gray writes, but, if so, the chill penury in which they are doomed to live will crush out every noble ambition and concentrate all their energies in a struggle for bread. When they rise from the situation in which they find themselves as boys, it is usually through efficience in their occupations or especial skill or dexterity in the line of their employment, but it is gratifying to know that among the superintendents and managers of departments in the factories a very large proportion have risen from the ranks, for in industry as in war every private carries a marshal's baton in his knapsack.

IN THE PARKS.

In comparison with these youthful laborers the children of the middle and upper classes, who can share the benefits afforded by higher education, are singularly favored. Yet there is reason to believe that these benefits are not appreciated as they should be, especially by the boys. So eager are these to engage in some occupation that very few, as compared with the number of girls, even go through the entire high school course, and the young women of the country are rapidly monopolizing the education that the schools have to confer.

But the cares of the future, the necessities of the present, rarely disturb the happy equanimity of childhood. Yet children of every grade in life have their troubles and sorrows, and these are just as serious for them as graver matters are for their elders. It is easy for older people to preach to children and tell them that the days of youth are the pleasantest, the happiest they will ever see, but the children themselves do not believe the statement, for every day they have practical and positive evidence of its untruthfulness. A man regards the troubles of a boy as of small consequence, and to him they are; but to the boy his cares are just as hard to bear, perhaps harder, than the business difficulties and reverses he will encounter twenty or thirty years later. A woman lightly treats the sorrow of her little girl over a broken doll, but the grief is none the less sincere, for all these things are merely comparative; one man, who is weak, will find ten pounds as much of a burden as 100 will be to another who is gifted in the matter of bone and muscle, and so the trouble of a boy who has lost his knife may be as hard to bear, for him, as the trouble of a man who has lost $1,000; the mortification of the boy who has been "turned down" in his spelling class is as keen as that he will experience later in life when, in another sense of the word, he is "turned down" in pursuit of an office.

The child life of a great city is seen in its perfection in three places—the kindergarten, the park and the street. The kindergarten is really the children's paradise, and in its limits may be witnessed every day as much happiness as can be crowded into a youthful life. Under no restraint but that of kindness, the children are practically as free as in their own homes, while at the same time they are receiving a most valuable training. The eye, the hand, the attention, the memory, the judgment, all move forward together in the course of the education that is given there, and all educational effort comes so easily, so naturally, with so little apparent effort, that the child is not aware how much he is really learning.

The parks are not monopolized by the children of the wealthy, though often these are in the majority; but even the poorest occasionally make their appearance in the most fashionable resorts, and not infrequently there make boon companions of the sons of the millionaire. For, as already remarked, in some respects boys are thorough democrats, and any boy who proves companionable will soon find himself at home in any company. A goat that needs instruction or restraint, another boy to fill up a baseball nine, any small excuse will answer as an introduction, and a friendship once contracted will be permanent, as among older people, so long as both are profited by it. The parks and the streets are the common property of all, and the child of the tramp is as much at home in them as the child of the Mayor. During the summer season, and in the crowded districts of the city, the streets are the common resort of the children, particularly about dusk and after nightfall; all their games and plays are carried on in the public highways, nor does any one molest them in the little recreation they are able to secure on the property of the general public. So the games go on without interruption; the boys play hide and seek, the girls play "King William," and as the plaintive little melody rises on the evening air, it recalls to the mind of many a passer-by the scenes and companions of other years. It is a mistake to suppose that money or station, or any other like distinction, gives pleasure to children, for to them money represents nothing; rank and social position are only names. When they are old enough to appreciate the fact that money means candy and popcorn and a seat in the gallery, then the scuffle for money begins, to end no more; when they are old enough to understand that social position means the deference of others, then the struggle for place commences, but from the little toddlers who fill the kindergartens to the boys who train goats and associate freely on terms of perfect equality, these things are not even names. It is well that this is so. The struggle of life is so fierce, so relentless after it has once begun that a breathing spell before its commencement is a happy provision of nature, and so it comes in childhood. The child life of a city may not have the pleasant features of child life in the country, but the children never know the difference, and we never lose what we never enjoyed. Wherever they are, children are generally happy, and that is enough.

Fire At Ashley

The Times Office Burns At Midday, Making A Total Loss.

Yesterday about noon, the gasolene engine used in the Times office at Ashley exploded, setting fire to the building which in spite of all efforts to save it, was burned to the ground, proving a total loss. No cause is known for the explosion and therefore probably never will be. The building next to it, Frank Clark's grocery was saved, although there was only room enough between the two buildings for an ordinary stairway leading to the second floors. The Times building had a barber shop in the front on the first floor and the printing office was back of this, occupying the rest of the first floor. The story above was not occupied at the time. The property was fully insured. It was the first building erected in the new town of Ashley, having been put up in a cornfield when the town started, and at once occupied by the printing office. Charley Spake, now with the Dispatch of this place, set type in the building before the siding was completed. We presume Bro. Strayer will get on new material and start up again in a week or so.

LATER:—In conversation with Frank Joliff of Ashley we learn that the building was insured for about $4,500 and the loss will reach about $6,000. Work has already commenced on a building in which the Times will be issued and in the spring a new brick will be erected where the burned ruins now lay. Two men were at work when the gasolene exploded. The room was saturated with gasolene and was all in a blaze at once. The men had hard work to get out themselves.

Primaries Or Not?

That is the question that is agitating political circles at Fort Wayne. Part of the voters believe their primary elections have been rotten and that the only honest way to conduct their nominations is to have a delagate convention. On the other hand, there are many who claim there is as much unfairness and dishonesty in a delegate convention as in the other plan. People in this county are also divided on this subject. There is no disguising the fact that cheating, and unfairness may be done in either way. In case of a delegate convention the delegates themselves are chosen at a primary meeting by the voters and a well prepared "slate" may succeed in electing all its delegates, when a real majority of the voters would prefer some one else. And it is for this season that some object to primaries. Our own opinion has always been, that the fairest method to nominate even county candidates, is the primary system. But it should be conducted as carefully, and under as strict safeguards as the real election is. There should be a law for conducting primaries, the officers should be sworn, and the ballot a secret one, conducted under the Australian system. There should be the same penalties for fraud at the primary polls. And then a little more honesty injected into politics would not hurt anything.

THE GREAT TOBACCO WAR.

Many of our readers know of the war existing between the manufacturers of plug chewing tobacco, but few, perhaps, are familiar with the cause.

For years some manufactures have been making some enormous profits by giving consumers a small piece of plug for ten cents. Recently a very large manufacturer, seeing that the time had come for better things, has placed a new brand called Battle Ax on the market, which gives the consumer a very large piece of excellent quality for the same price. This has raised a great storm among those who are hurt by it, but it gives joy to those who use the goods. In Battee Ax they get a greater quality for their money, while the quality is equal to the finest of other brands, This has naturally curtailed their enormous profits. On the other hand Battle Ax now taxes the resources of these large factories which, by running night day, are still unable to make the goods fast enough to satisfy the enthusiastic demand.

The people want a good thing and the most of it that they can get for the price. The manufacturers who do the best by them will get their trade. Their rivals naturally do not like it. They raise a mighty howl, but the AX will cut them down.

The U. S. Gov't Reports show Royal Baking Powder superior to all others.

Old State Banks

Just now when banks and banking operations, both private and governmental, are under discussion, it will be of interest to read a recent article by W. F. Harding, a graduate of the Indiana University, on the old Indiana State Bank law, that has been going the rounds of the papers and caused much comment. Many people have had their minds confused on this banking law, and got them mixed up with the old "wild cat" banks. But the state banks of Indiana were on a good basis, and little trouble or loss was ever caused by them. The people lost no money by them. It is true that many of them went out of business during the war, as legislation was set on foot to discourage and kill them, yet a number went on doing business even under these disadvantages, and by their survival and success have proved that they were on a safe basis as any paper money ever put out in any state—better than nine-tenths of such institutions in other parts of the country.

THE ROCKING CHAIR.

As we were leasurely sitting at home Sunday enjoying the comfort of an easy rocking chair, the thought came to us, "who first invented the rocking chair." In a moment more the thought had left us and we picked up the Ladies' Home Ideal, a monthly publication, and began carelessly looking over its pages when we saw an article headed the "The Rocking Chair." We read it over and to our surprise it contained just what we wanted to know. It read as follows: "When you are taking your comfort in a rocking chair, just think for a moment that you are indebted to an unknown Yankee genius for the pleasure you are deriving, and that the simple invention is still preserved, and is now being shown by a local dealer in Boston. The story this original and unique relic is as follows: The chair was made on the Brewster farm, Kingston, Mass, by a farm hand in 1780. The inventor, taking pity upon the invalid lady of the house, conceived the idea of attaching, curved pieces of wood to the legs of a common high back chair. The invalid was a descendant of Ray Thomas, who owned the farm, afterward purchased by Daniel Webster, and the mother of Ray Thomas was the first American lady presented to the court of King James. The invalid was the wife of Deacon Wrestling Brewster and the chair comes from the Woodside museum, Kingston, where it has always been and where the seventh generation of Brewsters still live, and those before them for 180 years. The chair is owned by Miss Emma E Brewster, the seventh, in direct line, of the Mayflower Brewster.

A Battle Scarred Veteran.

Nearly everyone in Medina Co. Ohio knows Stephen Rolph, of River Styx, the one legged veteran, who lost his leg at Winchester, Va., March 23, '62. In all probability the exposure and privations of army service, the effects of which are felt as they grow older by nearly all old soldiers, were the cause of the serious nervous prostration and sleeplessness of which Comrade Rolph complained. He says.

"People hereabout know me pretty well, but you can tell others that I was down for about six months with nervous prostration and sleeplessness for which I tried various doctors and medicines, but Dr. Wheeler's Nerve vitalizer has done me more good than all the doctoring I had done. The first bottle gave me such great relief that I have used several and I feel almost restored to my former good health."

Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer can be relied upon by any who are suffering from nervous troubles, sleeplessness, etc. If all tired out and run down, you need a reliable nerve and system tonic and health restorer as this remedy is. BUTLER.

Eliza Blaker died at her residence in Butler, Jan. 14, 1896. She was seventy eight years of age. Eliza Day, was born in Gloucestershire, England, March, 19, 1817, where she received her early education. She removed with her parents to the United States in 1832, settling in the state of New York. The family lived there but a short time when they moved to Lucas Co., Ohio, settling in what was then known as the "Six Miles Woods." In 1836, she became the wife of John Scattow, much against the wishes of her parents, who were church of England people, and her husband a Methodist. Mr. Scattow died in 1843. In 1845 she became the third wife of Achilles Blaker a prosperous blacksmith, they residing in Maumee City, a fast rising town of Northwestern Ohio, and county seat of Lucas county, now a dilapidated village. She moved with her husband to Butler in 1855, buying what is now known as the McNabb Hotel, then the most pretentious hostelry in Norristown, as it was then called and used as a Hotel, and dancing hall, and when pressed for room, was used for church purposes. No children blessed either of her unions and when her last husband died in 1868, she settled down to lonely isolation and waited patiently, Oh! how long for her release from a life that had become desolate by the hand of death. Her life was not without its joys. Her ministry to the needy, her care of the sick and her devotion to her lonely widowed companion, Mrs. Graves who has lived with her many years. Her funeral took place from her residence on last Thursday, Rev. Disbro of the M. E church officiating. Her remains were laid to rest beside those of her husband in Big Run cemetery. Mrs. Blaker was raised in the faith of the estabished church but after her marriage became member of the Methodist church. Hers was a cheerful quiet, uneventful life, beloved by all who knew her, patient in sorrow and affliction. She has passed to her reward leaving no near relatives, save a sister-in-law, a Mrs. Day who became her principal heir and who has not yet returned to her western home.

Strange Cures.

The LaPort Argus says a miraculous cure of consumption is reported near that city, It was accomplish by anointing with oil and the work was done by a preacher.

The Editor of this paper knew of a similar case many years ago. A man who was quite low with consumption and spitting blood freely, had some active members of his church come to his home and then they all knelt about him, and poured oil on his head, laid their hands on his head and offered up prayers for his recovery. The man recovered, at least he was strong enough to go into the service during the rebellion, served out his term and came home all right. We are told that a few years ago he committed suicide. This is no patent medicine advertisement. We knew the man well being a pupil in his school when he was forced to stop and take to his bed on account of his weakened condition. We are no believer in miracles at this day and age, but we would like to have some one explain such occurrences.

Late Literary News.

No one ever thought of introducing so expensive a feature as lithographic color work in the days when the leading magazines sold for $4 00 a year and 35 cents a copy. But times change, and the magazines change with them. It has remained for The Cosmopolitan, sold at one dollar a year, to put in an extensive lithographic plant capable of printing 320,000 pages per day (one color.) The January issue presents as a frontispiece a water-color drawing by Eric Pape, illustrating the last story by Robert Louis Stevenson, which has probably never been excelled even in the pages of the finest dollar French periodicals. The cover of The Cosmopolitan is also changed, a drawing of page length by the famous Paris artist Rossi, in lithographic colors on white paper takes the place of the manilla back with its red stripe. Hereafter the cover is to be a fresh surprise each month.

Relieved at Once.

Not a few who read what Mr. Robert Rowls, of Hollands, Va., has to say below, will remember their own experience under like circumstances: "Last winter I had la grippe which left me in a low state of health. I tried numerous remedies, none of which did me any good, until I was induced to try a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The first bottle of it so far relieved me that I was enabled to attend to my work, and the second bottle effected a cure." For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle by F. E. Davenport the druggist.

TABLE TALK.

Kate Douglas Wiggin has written an excellent article for the January issue of Table Talk, on "Shall our daughters' Study Kindergarten," and it is followed by the usual departments so helpful to housekeepers and home-makers alike. Besides the many good recipes to be found in its pages, an article on "Market News" will be most useful to all who are not sure of the best piece of meat to buy for certain dishes, and menus are also given for every day in the month. "Twelfth Day" and its entertainments; "Nursery Hygiene," "Wedding Fads and Fancies," "Lace and Its history," "Father Time's Reception,"—one suitable to New Year's Day, the latest fashions of the day, etc., are dealt with. If you don't know this little magazine, avail yourselves of the liberal offer made to our readers, which is that a sample copy will be sent free to anyone addressing Table Talk Publishing Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

Naughty Printing Press.

An Exceange says: "The printing press has made presidents, killed poets, furnished bustles for beauties, and punished genius with criticism. It has curtailed the power of kings, converted bankers into paupers, and graced pantry shelves. It has made paupers out of college presidents; it has educated the homeless, and robbed the philosopher of his reason; it smiles and cries and dies, but it can't be run to suit everybody, and the man will go crazy who tries."

Harper's Weekly

IN 1896

HARPER'S Weekly is a Journal for the whole country. It deals with the events of the world that are important to Americans.

In carrying out this policy, in 1895, Julian Ralph visited China and Japan, and journeyed through the West; Richard Harding Davis took a trip through the Caribbean Sea; the evolutions of the new navy were described and illustrated by Rufus F. Zogbaum; Frederic Remington presented studies of Army and Frontier life; Poultney Biglow attended the opening of the Kiel Canal.

In 1896 like attention will be given to every notable happening. The chief events in art, literature, and music and the drama will be artistically presented. W. D. Howells, in the new department, Life and Letters, will discuss in his interesting way books and the social questions of the time. E. S. Martin's sprightly gossip of the Busy World will be continued. The progress of the Transportation Commission around the World will be followed, and Caspar W. Whitney will conduct the department of Amateur Sport.

In 1896 will occur a Presidential election. In its editorials and through its political cartoons the WEEKLY will continue to be an independent advocate of good government and sound money.

In fiction the WEEKLY will be especially strong. It will publish the only novel of the year by W. D. Howells, and a stirring serial of a Scotch feud, by S. R. Crockett. The short stories selected are of unusual excellence and interest. In every respect HARPER'S WEEKLY will maintain its leading place in the illustrated journalism of the world.

The Volumes of the WEEKLY begin with the first Number for January of each year. When no time is mentioned, subscriptions will begin with the Number current at the time of receipt of Order.

Remittances should be made by Post-office Money Order or Draft, to avoid chance of loss.

Newspapers are not to copy this advertisement without the express order of Harper & Brothers.

JAMES A. BARNES, - - PUBLISHER.

The war flurry has settled down to the conviction that the Monroe doctrine is a sure thing.

If Utah's claim that it is the most delightful State to live in is well founded it should change its name to Matrimony.

The best evidence that New York realizes it is no longer a rival of Chicago is that its newspapers are scolding St. Louis for wanting the Democratic convention.

Greater Boston will have about 1,000,000 inhabitants, it is estimated. But the town will not contain any more wisdom than it does now. That surely would be impossible.

It will pay every American citizen to reflect carefully upon how much more securely the United States could "bluff" England if the Nicaragua Canal were open for business and we were in control of it.

Cripple Creek should be exceeding careful in advertising its gold mines. If England finds out there is gold there it will be almost certain to send Larry Godkin with a regiment or two out there to take possession.

Great Britain concluded that it would be no fun to run up against Germany in South Africa. After thinking over the matter a while Great Britain may determine not to run up against the United States in South America.

Kaiser Wilhelm is bound to get worsted in his battle with the German press. He has already had several warnings that the people of his empire are angry at his vigorous attempts to suppress the free expression of opinion. The sentence of imprisonment imposed upon Herr Hofrichter, an editor who exposed the barbarous punishments used in the House of Correction at Brauweiler, has stirred Germany to the depths, and Wilhelm may soon feel his crown shaky about his ears unless he speedily learns prudence.

Another of the old war correspondents, Col. Thomas W. Knox, died at his rooms in the Lotus Club, New York, where for many years he has lived a pleasant bachelor's life. Col. Knox was one of the best and most accurate of the war corps of correspondents of the rebel war, and did admirable work for the New York press. After the war he turned his attention to literature, and became a great traveler. Scarcely a part of the world was left unvisited by him, and the result was a series of most charming books of travel and adventure for boys, the income from which enabled him to live in ease and without the necessity of doing continuous work. Personally he was a genial, refined, courteous gentleman with a heart as big as his massive body. He will be sadly missed, especially by the thousands of young readers to whom his books have been a delight.

Cecil Rhodes, the Premier and biggest man of Cape Colony, has resigned, and his resignation has been accepted by Sir Hercules Robinson, the Governor appointed by the Queen. The Hon. Sir J. Gordon Sprigg, the Colonial Treasurer, succeeds him by the Queen's appointment. Cecil Rhodes, the deposed Premier, was a man of great executive ability and towering ambition. It is as yet uncertain whether he was cognizant of the purpose of Jameson when he made his foolhardy invasion of the Transvaal with only 700 poorly armed followers, without rations or sufficient ammunition, to meet 2,000 or 3,000 well-equipped and well-fed Boers, every one of whom is an accomplished marksman. It has been stated that Jameson was only his tool and again that he knew nothing about the raid. However that may be the English Colonial Government seems to have made a scapegoat of him so that it may climb down and get out of a bad scrape all the easier.

The Governor of Virginia makes a sensible suggestion for the prevention of lynching. After advising laws for fining counties in which lynchings occur, he suggests that the penalty for outrage on women be death in every case, and that an indictment for the offense have precedence in court of all other cases. The usual justification for the lynching that has been going on in the South, with such barbarities as burning and flaying, is that it is necessary to awe the negroes into leaving the white women alone. This may or may not be true, but it is easy to accomplish the same result by legal means. If the people are united in approving such summary punishments there could be no difficulty in passing laws to secure a short, sure and speedy punishment for the criminals. If the ordinary courts are insufficient it would be easy to set up a special tribunal whose decision should be beyond appeal and whose verdict should be carried out at once—in effect a court-martial as a part of the peace establishment. However objectionable such a tribunal may appear to the lawyers, it is much to be preferred to the lynching party that is usurping the functions of courts, and would avoid most of the dangers of getting the wrong man.

Americans have good reason to rejoice with the sturdy followers of "Oom Paul" in the neatness and dispatch with which they flayed the Jameson freebooters. They are, unless we are much mistaken, the first colonial people to wrest independence by arms from Great Britain since our own Revolutionary war. The similarity between them and the heroes of our struggle for independence is strong. They are a tough, deeply religious, pastoral people. They can fight and pray and keep their powder dry. They live simply, read their Bible piously and shoot accurately. They know how to mind their own business and how to teach their neighbors to remain at home. They love God, but they are not afraid of the devil. They go into battle crying "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon," and the hosts of the Midianites run like water before these leathery, soldier men. One result of their terrific defense of the republic has been the overthrow of Cecil John Rhodes. The rocket-like career of this man stunned the common sense and the conscience of the British people. Flown with riches and arrogance, there was nothing short of the conquest of Africa to the source of the Congo that seemed to satisfy his ambition. He was worshiped in London last week; this week he is a fallen star, with the murder of thousands of defenseless natives to answer for. Last week there were two great men in South Africa—Cecil John Rhodes and S. J. Paul Kruger. To-day there is but one.

GREAT LAWYER'S INFIRMITY.

He Generally Lost His Temper and Also His Case.

The late Chief Justice E. G. Ryan, of Wisconsin, was, in many respects, the most notably able man the State ever reckoned among its citizens. He had great learning, particularly in law. Among veteran lawyers who knew Judge Ryan there are few, if any, who do not concede that he was better versed in law than any other man in his profession in the State but he was less fortunate in his practice than many of the first-class lawyers.

The late Matt H. Carpenter used to win most of his cases when Judge Ryan was the opposing attorney, but often lamented that he was not as good a lawyer as his unsuccessful opponent. Once Mr. Carpenter said: "Why, if I possessed E. G. Ryan's legal ability to go with my good nature and skill in controlling my temper, I would not be averse to meeting any lawyer in the world, no matter how important the case." Yet Carpenter seldom lost a case when the opposing attorney was Ryan.

"How is it, Matt, that you nearly always defeat Ryan, even when it is plain that you have a poor case and he a good one?" asked one of the great Senator's friends.

"By keeping my temper and helping Mr. Ryan to lose his," was Carpenter's prompt reply.

That was so. Carpenter knew that his brother attorney was always well prepared when he went into court—well loaded, cocked and primed—and he also knew that if Mr. Ryan did not lose his temper he would win his case, so he was careful to see that Mr. Ryan lost his temper, and fired off his perfect load so that it scattered and its effect was wasted.

Age took the rough edges from Judge Ryan's temper, so that when he became chief justice he filled the high station in as able and dignified a manner as it ever had been filled.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Matter-of-Fact.

A Philadelphia business man tells a story to one of the papers of his own city, which, he thinks, indicates a want of humor on the part of the people of Chicago. The Philadelphia man was in Chicago. He expected a money-order letter in a day or two and to avoid trouble about identification, he went to the postoffice clerk, and said to him:

"I am expecting a money-order to the amount of —— dollars, and my name is ——. Here are a lot of letters addressed to me from a good many places, with all the postmarks on them; so that you see if I am not the man I claim to be, I must have murdered that man and possessed myself of his letters, and am now personating him. As that is not likely, you must admit that I am the man."

He went away. In a few days the money-order came, and the Philadelphian came around to get it cashed. He expected to find the clerk all ready for him, but at first the clerk did not recollect him. Presently the Philadelphia man succeeded in recalling himself to the clerk's memory.

"Oh, yes," he said, quite seriously; "you're the man that murdered the other one."

As he paid over the money, however, the Philadelphia man had no cause to complain.

Slight Mistake.

While there is undoubtedly great beauty to be found in the wonderful old tapestries to be seen in some of the European castles, their designs are not always clear to the uninitiated admirer. A party of young women going through an English castle, were shown a celebrated piece of tapestry for which the castle is famed.

Their guide was an elderly spinster of grim aspect, who conducted them about the great house with much solemnity, making appropriate remarks on each of the treasures she exhibited. At last, pointing to several groups of figures on the tapestry, she said, addressing the eldest of the group of visitors, whom she had treated with somewhat more of graciousness than the others:

"These, miss, represent scenes in the life of Jacob."

"Oh, yes, how interesting!" said the young woman, looking doubtfully at one group where two figures in dingy raiment were represented in close proximity to each other. "Now, I suppose," she said, after some moments of careful inspection, smiling confinedly at the stern show-woman, "I suppose that is Jacob kissing Rachael."

"No, miss," said the elderly female, with an air of mingled pity and contempt, "them be Jacob and the angel wrestling."

Sure Proof.

It is said that the Hon. Samuel Galloway, of Columbus, Ohio, was one of the plainest men ever known in the State. He told many stories relative to his own personal ugliness of face with great good-humor.

One which he often related with much relish was that of the remark made by the little daughter of a friend in another city with whom he was dining.

"Mamma," he heard the child say, in an awe-struck whisper, after a prolonged survey of the peculiar features of the guest, "that gentleman's mamma must have loved children mighty well."

"Why, so, dear?" inquired the unsuspecting parent.

"Oh," returned the child in the same audible whisper, "'cause she raised him!"

Getting Even with Worcester.

The story is told of Oliver Wendell Holmes that when one of his friends announced his intention of delivering a lecture in Worcester Holmes cheerfully responded: "I'm awfully glad to hear it. I always did hate those Worcester people."

A man has a right to think lots of things which he has no right to say.

ALL DIE TOGETHER.

PETER HOUGAARD KILLS HIS FAMILY AND HIMSELF.

A Chicago Dane, Goaded by Reverses in Fortune, Turns on the Gas While His Wife and Children Sleep—Suicide Is Added.

Puts Seven to Death.

Peter Hougaard killed himself, wife and five children in Chicago Sunday night. The discovery was made by the police Monday. Upon forcing open the door of Hougaard's residence they found the whole family asphyxiated. Hougaard had evidently waited till all were asphyxiated, and then, turning on the remaining gas jets, calmly laid down and waited his own death.

Hougaard was a Dane living at 731 Sixty-first street. He wrote a letter to a friend telling him what he was going to do, saying he was despondent and he spoke of some diamonds which the police would find by his side when they entered the house. The letter, which was written in Danish, was received by Hougaard's friend Monday and he immediately informed the police of its contents. When the police broke open the doors of the modest home the chill of death pervaded every room. A house dog, half dead with the fumes of escaping gas, dashed past the officers and up the stairs to the bed chamber of Hans, the eldest child. And there he remained until beaten away by the officers of the coroner.

Seven persons lay dead in the three rooms. From every jet the gas was yet flooding the rooms, but its deadly work had long since been completed. In the front room were found the bodies of Peter Hougaard, his wife and their 2-year-old infant, the little form of which was nestled closely against that of its dead mother. Hougaard's arms were crossed upon his breast and his face was peaceful in its last sleep. In an adjoining room was the body of Hans, the 14-year-old son. He had died without a struggle. Locked in each other's arms in the rear room were Jennie, Olga and Maud, the beautiful

THE HOUGAARD FAMILY.

Hougaard girls, beloved of all the neighborhood. Death had come in the night—silent, painless and pitiless.

Peter Hougaard came to Chicago from Denmark two years ago. A man of education, culture and ambition, he was attracted to Chicago. He was trained in the business methods of his native country and did not hesitate to throw his small fortune into the balance. He engaged in business, at first with success. Emboldened by his first victory, he plunged into speculation—and lost. How much he lost and how he lost it no one knows. It makes no difference. It is said he lost $40,000 and that the remainder of his little fortune was stolen by a swindler.

Hougaard was penniless. His dream of riches was rudely swept away. But he did not burden his wife with his troubles, and he always seemed happy and cheerful. There was yet food and warmth in the little cottage. He went bravely ahead in an attempt to secure work, but it was denied him. His business reverses and the fact that he was practically penniless and unable to find employment, so preyed on Hougaard's mind that finally, seeing no other way of escape, he resolved on death. The police found little food in the house and not a cent of money, with the exception of some small Danish coins.

KAISER DID NOT MEAN WAR.

Great Britain Rapidly Coming to Such a Conclusion.

London advices say that it seems pretty well established in the public mind that Emperor William did not mean to threaten war upon England by his message of sympathy to Presidena Krueger of Transvaal, and the reports which were circulated a few days ago of a European alliance back of Germany and against England find little further credence. It seems to be accepted that the German emperor simply intended to express his own opinion of the Jameson raid in that message and the temporary sentiment of irritation which it caused him.

This is the general feeling, apparently, of the public mind, and those organs of public opinion which are in touch with the Government have undoubtedly sought to deepen this impression. But this still leaves unexplained the uncontradicted assertion that the German Government did apply to Portugal for permission to pass marines through Portuguese territory at Delagoa Bay to the Transvaal, nor does it explain the unflagging preparation of war material and equipment of war forces in England. Of more force seems the argument of some newspapers that the wavering support of Russia and France has admonished the German war lord that the interpretation put upon his message by England was putting him into a hazardous position.

That England has had a vision of the destruction of the "balance of power" in Europe, with herself in the descending scale, is certain. Whether she has made other strokes in the hidden field of diplomacy besides her formidable show of naval force is not yet known.

FORAKER ELECTED.

Chosen to Represent Ohio in the United States Senate.

J. B. Foraker has been elected by the Ohio Legislature to succeed Calvin S. Brice in the Senate of the United States. The Senate has thirty Republicans, one of whom, Senator Porter, was absent on account of sickness in his family. The six Democrats voted for Mr. Brice. The Populist, William F. Conley, of Mercer, voted for Mr. Groot. Gov. Bushnell and ex-Gov. McKinley were present. Foraker's name was presented by Senator John J. Sullivan, of Trumbull, and seconded by Senator Adolph Ruemer, of Cincinnati. Senator Hysell presented Mr. Brice's name. In the house Foraker received the full Republican vote.

AN INTERNATIONAL BANK.

Comptroller Eckels Speaks in Favor of a Great Project.

The House Committee on Banking and Currency Monday considered the project for an international American bank, which was one of the recommendations of the pan-American congress and was largely the idea of the late James G. Blaine. Among the would-be incorporators are Cornelius Bliss and Charles R. Flint, of New York; T. Jefferson Coolidge, Andrew Carnegie, J. S. Clarkson, P. D. Armour and M. M. Estes, of California.

The bill puts the capital stock at $5,000,000 and authorizes the bank to act as the financial agent of any government, State or municipality or corporation, to handle bonds, etc., but bars it from issuing notes to circulate as money in the United States.

Comptroller Eckels addressed the committee, stating that he favored the establishment of such a bank under proper restrictions. It would give to the United States, he said, cheaper exchange with South American republics and enable them to compete successfully with European merchants and manufacturers. All South American exchange is now handled through London and other European centers, and a small saving in exchange often determined who should do the business of the country. The International Bank, he thought, should not be permitted to issue circulation in the United States, and it should not be given an advantage over other banks under government control in case it should decide to do all its business in the United States.

WOODMAN'S DEFENSE PLAN.

Chicago Congressman Would Quickly Dispose of $100,000,000.

Congressman Woodman has introduced a bill appropriating $100,000,000 to establish fortifications and other coast defenses at the sea and lake ports of the United States. His bill provides for the creation of a board of fortifications, consisting of six members besides the Secretary of War. Two of the members shall be officers of the army and the remaining four civilians, one being an engineer and one an attorney. The members shall receive $7,500 each per year. The bill provides that the board shall cause plans to be prepared for fortifications at each of thirty-four ports requiring protection and enumerated in the bill. It is provided that the work of fortifying shall begin immediately and that $5,000,000 of the sum shall be available for use during the fiscal year beginning June 30 next. Ten million dollars shall be used during the year beginning June 30, 1897, and a like sum during the following year, while in each succeeding year thereafter there shall be spent $25,000,000. By this provision the entire sum would be expended before June 30, 1901.

ASKS FOR $1,000,000 A YEAR.

Sum Desired for the Improvement of the Missouri River.

An effort will be made in the present Congress to secure an appropriation of $4,000,000 for the improvement of the Missouri river from its mouth to Sioux City, Iowa. Congressman Hubbard, of Missouri, has introduced a bill making this appropriation and providing that $1,000,000 shall be used in the year beginning July 1 next, and a like amount each succeeding year until the appropriation is exhausted. The bill provides that each year the sum spent for salaries and traveling expenses of the Missouri river commission shall not exceed $25,000; for surveys, gauges, data and publication, $35,000; for operating snag boat, $40,000, and for systematic improvements, $500,000. The amount asked by the chief engineer of the army for Missouri river improvement in the coming fiscal year was but $750,000, but Gen. Craighill says the sum requested was reduced from $1,000,000 because for three years Congress has refused to appropriate more than $750,000.

Brothers, of Clay City, Ill.

GENERAL MILES.

His Encounter with a Picket in Which He Was Worsted.

An amusing incident of the civil war was recently told at a veteran's reunion. During the siege of Petersburg a section of the Weldon Railway was a picket line for the Union forces.

One day General Miles, who had received not long before his commission as brigadier general of volunteers, visited on exposed quarter of the line near Greensville and noticed a grim sentinel on duty. Riding up to the picket General Miles pointed toward Greenville and said:

"I wish to see General Kautz. Go down to his headquarters and tell him to come up here."

The errand was not a pleasant one. The enemy were behind the exposed railway and the messenger would be a conspicuous target for bullets.

"I am on duty here," said the picket, quietly.

"That is all right," said General Miles, with a smile. "I know that you are on duty here, but I want you to go to General Kautz and tell him that I want to see him at once."

"I have been ordered on picket duty," said the soldier, with dogged persistence, "and I must remain here until I am relieved."

"Very good," said the General; "I understand the matter, but I want to see General Kautz at once."

"All right," answered the picket. "If you want to see Kautz more than I do, why don't you go down and look him up?"

General Miles rode away in great anger, and sent word to General Kautz that the picket had been very insolent, and ought to be severely disciplined. The next day at guardmounting General Kautz sent for the picket, and asked him to repeat what he had said to General Miles.

"I told him that I was on duty, and must remain until somebody in authority relieved me."

"Did General Miles relieve you?"

"No; he told me to go down the railway towards Greensville, but he didn't relieve me."

"Well, did you defy him?"

"No, indeed," said the picket. "I merely told him that if he wanted to see Kautz more than I did he would better go down himself and look you up."

"That's all right," said Gen. Kautz, apparently well pleased that the picket had saved him an uncomfortable ride. "If I had been there, I would have told him to go to Halifax. It's all right, anyway."

The sentry, instead of being sent to the guardhouse for insubordination in having impudently refused to obey an order from his superior, was complimented upon his discretion in waiting to be relieved from his first detail.

The veterans who heard this story were disposed to think that the sentry was technically correct. If General Miles had formally relieved him from picket duty, there would have been no pretext for disobedience of a direct order.

RAIDED THE POSTOFFICE.

Wolseley Teaches a Postmaster to Do His Work.

To illustrate some of the disagreeable things which the soldiers suffered in the Soudan, Mr. Nourse tells the following anecdote of the postal service, which also well shows how democratic was Lord Wolseley, the commandant. Nourse went to the postoffice at Korti to look for some letters. The postmaster was a native and not very much at handwriting, and said that there was nothing for him after a superficial glance at a big pile of papers and letters.

Nourse asked to see the pile of letters, and while he was looking them over a man with nothing to designate his rank came into the office in company with another. He took in the situation at a glance an said: "Let's clean this thing out." Whereupon they jumped over the counter and bundled the postmaster out, neck and heels. Then they began the examination of the office and found it congested with mail for the army.

They searched every nook and cranny and threw the letters for one regiment into one corner, those for another into another, with all the newspapers in the center of the floor. Then they went through each pile and separated it into companies, and before night every letter was in camp and distributed, and the next day the papers were out. Nourse at the time did not know who his companion in the good deed was. He asked him his name and his answer was: "They call me Charley." Some time afterwad Nourse was going to see the commandant and, sitting near his tent, saw his companion at the postoffice.

"Hello, Charley," he said, "I'm looking for the commandant; where'll I find him?"

"Well," said "Charley," "you won't have to look very far. I'm the commandant. Come inside and have a bit to eat and drink."

It was Lord Wolseley, and a man worthy of the title.—Springfield Republican.

The Lioness Killed Him.

An English major has just been killed in a desperate fight with a lioness in Somaliland. The animal was driven out of a thicket by beaters, and the major wounded her severely; the attendant who carried the second rifle fired both barrels into her, but she killed him with one blow of her paw on the head. The major then fired another shot at her, and she turned upon him. Not having another cartridge he rammed the barrel of the rifle down her throat, her jaws closed on one arm, and in trying to force them open his other hand and arm were bitten. The lioness was finally speared to death by the native servants. It took ten days to take the wounded major to Aden, but gangrene set in, and he died in two days after arriving there.—London Globe.

Within 100 Years.

The total Indian population at this time, according to estimates made by the officials of the Indian Bureau, is 248,253, exclusive of the Indians of Alaska. In 1829, before the annexation of Texas and Mexico, the estimated Indian population of the country was 400,000. In 1855 the number was said to be 350,000 and the same estimate is made for 1871. The most rapid decline in numbers has been in the last quarter of a century. The fact that the Cherokees and Chippewas, both comparatively powerful tribes, have actually increased in numbers makes the decrease in the other tribes all the more remarkable.

It is believed that the principal loss has been among the Sioux and other tribes of the Northwest. More than two-thirds of the total number, or 237,478, in 1871 were on the reservations. At the beginning of 1895 the number on the reservations had been decreased to 133,417, or about one-third of the total number. Less than 30,000 of these are self-supporting, the Federal Government issuing supplies to most of them. If the rate of decrease which has been maintained for the last quarter of a century or so be continued there will not be a single full-blooded Indian in the country, except possibly in dime museums, by the end of the twentieth century.

NOVELTY IN SKATES.

The Pneumatic Road Skate Is the Latest Invention.

The pneumatic road skate is the latest invention in England. The new appliance, which is really an adaptation of the principle of the bicycle to the old-fashioned roller-skate, can be used on practically any ordinary road or foot-path. It is furnished with ball bearings and pneumatic tires, and it will probably not be long before the ingenious inventor will contrive to introduce the principle of geared action, and thus still further increase its resemblance to the bicycle. The new skate will indeed prove a very formidable competitor to all other forms of wheeling, since by its use one can combine all the pleasure of rapid traveling by means of one's own exertions, with a very small amount of preliminary trouble and a merely nominal expense. It is claimed that the skate may be safely used on both up and down grades as well as on the level roads, and that with very little practice a speed of ten or twelve miles an hour can be attained. It is highly probable that the new form of skating will become as fashionable as cycling itself, and it seems clear that a prosperous future awaits the conductor of an enterprise possessing such obvious advantages from a commercial point of view. The skates can be folded for traveling and can be easily carried under the arm or like a small grip.

A TERRIBLE WEAPON.

How Taylor Carroll's Turret Might Boomerang.

Taylor Carroll is engaged in devising a formidable system for the defense of lone pedestrians from thieves and footpads. His plan is to convert the erect human body into a miniature revolving turret, armed at four points, and capable of dealing death in front, rear, or flank simultaneously, or of sending four successive discharges in the same direction.

"I would have a small storage battery worn in a belt," he said yesterday, "with small copper wires running from it up through the sleeves, and connected with each hand on the great or middle finger with a copper ring the thumb can reach in the palm of the hand. When the thumb touched the ring an electrical current would discharge four batteries, loaded with ball, behind and in front. This discharge could take place when the hands were being held up under the threat of an armed robber."

Mr. Carroll is an actor by profession. He has not figured up the weight of the storage battery, nor is he adverse to considering the advisability of substituting a dry primary cell. In his zeal for the application of scientific methods the inventor has, however, apparently left out of sight every thing but the tactical advantage of the lonely pedestrian attacked in front by the bold marauder or clasped from behind by the lurking garroter. Thus, he had not yet figured out how a slim young man is to avoid assuming unwieldy Falstaffian dimensions when he braces storage batteries and arsenals around his waist. Nor does he forecast the possibly tragical consequences that might some day result from the clasp of a loving hand upon the thumb and palm that carried the potential copper appurtenances he describes, making inadvertent electrical contact and producing a catastrophe when only endearment was intended.—Chicago Tribune.

Found Beer in the Sink.

A peculiar incident occurred in New York on a recent Sunday. While a policeman of that city was trying to see what was going on in a "suspected" saloon he soiled his hands; he noticed a sink in the ante-room of the saloon, and when he turned on the faucet he was surprised to find that he was washing his hands in beer. The keeper of the saloon was, of course, arrested.

A Word with a Pedigree.

So dreadful a word is "booze" in the sense of "drink" that one is disposed to take for granted that it came from some extremely modern slum and has not yet even earned a place in the slang dictionaries. Such is by no means the case. Spelled "bouse," but pronounced exactly after to-day's fashion, it occurs in Massinger's famous play, "A New Way to Pay Old Debts." The middle English form was "bowse."

Compel a man to loaf who has always been busy, and he is as uncomfortable as a loafer compelled to work.

NAPOLEON,

ONCE ASKED FOR AN OPINION,

Gives a Graphic Description of His Ideal Woman. Mothers Please Note.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

In response to a question asked by a lady, the great Napoleon replied,—

"My ideal woman is not the beautiful-featured society belle, whose physician tries in vain to keep her in repair, nor the fragile butterfly of fashion, who gilds the tortures of disease with a forced smile.

"No! my ideal is a woman who has accepted her being as a sacred trust, and who obeys the laws of nature for the preservation of her body and soul.

"Do you know, my knee involuntarily bends in homage when I meet the matron who reaches middle age in complete preservation.

"That woman is rendered beautiful by perfect health, and the stalwart children by her side are her reward. That's my ideal woman."

To grow to ideal womanhood the girlhood should be carefully guarded.

Mothers owe a duty to their daughters that in too many cases is neglected.

Nature has provided a time for purification; and if the channels are obstructed the entire syste. is poisoned, and misery comes.

At a mothers' meeting the wife of a noted New York divine said to her listeners: "Watch carefully your daughters' physical development.

"Mothers should see that Nature is assisted, if necessary, to perform its office, and keep their daughters well informed as to matters concerning themselves."

Irregularities, from whatever cause, are sure indications of organic trouble. With irregularities come disturbance of the stomach and kidneys.

Violent headaches often attack the victim; pains shoot everywhere. Extreme irritability follows quickly, and then utter despondency overwhelms the already over-burdened life. Unless the obstruction is removed at once, your daughter's whole future will be darkened.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will accomplish the work speedily. It is the most effective remedy for irregular or suspended action known.

Eggs.

The Persians and Romans exchanged eggs at New Year. The Egyptians made the egg a symbol of human renovation after the Deluge. The Elists still believe that "luck eggs" have little birds in them. The Franks under the Capet dynasty exchanged eggs at the vernal equinox. In Suffolk, eggs laid on Good Friday never became bad, and are a sure preventive of colic. In Germany, eggs laid on Good Friday can extinguish fire, especially if thrown in backward. The Romans made it a means of divination for ascertaining the sex of creatures still unborn. All Roman repasts were begun with eggs. Hence the expression of "ab 000," now signifying the beginning. The Jews made an egg the type of their new life and departure from slavery in Egypt to the better Land of Promise. In Westphalia, eggs laid on Maundy Thursday produce birds that change color every year.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

NOTES ABOUT SCHOOLS AND THEIR MANAGEMENT.

Comparisons Between Schools in the Country Districts and Those in Towns and Cities—Lines on Which Young Men Should Pursue Knowledge.

Ungraded vs. Graded Schools.

Every now and then some one, somewhere makes a comparison between the schools in the country district, where terms are short, salaries low and the teachers' tenure often brief, and the schools of towns and cities, where terms are long, salaries fair, and where teachers are practically permanent. These comparisons generally result adversely to the long-term schools. Here is what a school director said several years ago: "Our children learn as much in six months as yours in ten. Their whole time is given to school work while the schools are in session, while your children in town are absorbed in all kinds of amusements."

The second port of his statement I think is true. I am sorry that I must acknowledge this concerning the town schools. What about the first statement? Let us see. At the time this assertion was made there were two or three girls from our schools teaching in this director's district. Those girls—they were not women—were not much older than their pupils, in some cases not so old. Why were these outsiders employed? Were they employed from philanthropic motives? I think not. Were they employed because the young ladies of the rural district found an easier way to earn their pin money? I think not. They employed teachers from towns because there were none of their school girls qualified to do the work.

The people who make these comparisons leave out of the problem one very important factor, viz.: that during the long vacation a vast amount of what was gained during the brief school term, has been forgotten when the next term begins. These comparisons are often made to shield districts with short terms. If a few influential people, a director or two, can impress upon the people of the district that their children learn as much in six months as the children of the neighboring town learn in ten months, the taxes can be kept down by keeping up the old salary and the short term. Sometimes, however, another element comes in that may not be so easily met. The idea that the instruction in the ungraded sechools is better suited to prepare pupils for the duties of life. This is the view that a Michigan school director takes of the case. He says: "It is a strange commentary that in our ungraded schools throughout the country children attending school from four to six months per year for a period of from six to eight years are better educated and prepared to enter upon the ordinary duties of life than the majority of children after the full course of eight or ten months per year."

If this statement is true, if it is true to any degree whatsoever, long term schools should set about to find out the reason. Is it because the ungraded schools take a narrow course and thus study some things so that they know them while towns have such broad courses that pupils leave schools without knowing any one subject? "Ordinary duties of life" may have many meanings. If it means to do work that requires no thinking I believe that a short term pupil or possibly a person who can scarcely read, or write his name, is the best living machine to do it.

Are the town schools as practical as they should be? Do they educate pupils away from manual labor? Do they educate girls to despise housework? Persons who advertise for clerks or copyists at starvation wages and those who are looking for "help" for the house at fair wages, could answer this question far better than the United States Commissioner of Education.

I believe that we lose 50 per cent. of the educational energy that we put into the schools, but this cannot be remedied by invidious comparisons. Much of it can be remedied by a thorough reexamination of the underlying principles of education, and an earnest inquiry as to what kind of training we need for the active duties of life. Not what was needed years ago, but what is needed now.—Educational News.

OLD PUPILS IN A CHICAGO NIGHT SCHOOL.

Cause and Effect in Geography.

It is a growing belief that knowledge to be of any worth must be related to other knowledge. Many teachers of geography may seem to grasp the conviction just stated in an impersonal way and not come to a full realization of the fact that they are still going on in the same old fashion in teaching that branch. When pupils understand that the lesson on Wind and the lesson on Rain-fall, given in the first part of the large geography, have vital connection with the study of every State and country on the globe, then they may picture largely in advance what will be said concerning the productions and occupations of any locality by noting the elevation, latitude, proximity of mountains, and the seas and oceans.

To make this matter understood, a few questions applied by the teacher may show her whether or not the matter of cause and effect does not play an important part in her work. Our lesson to-day, let us say, is Texas. Very much of the State, the book tells us, is dry. Comparatively little rain falls in Western Texas. The rain-fall about the Gulf of Mexico is greater. Why is this? Has the lesson on the prevailing winds of the temperate zones anything to do with it? Has rain-fall anything to do with the occupation and productions of Texas? If so, what? Contrast Texas with Florida and, applying the same questions, what would be the answer?

Suppose the class is studying Russia. Is it of any value for pupils to know the effect of a large body of very cold water touching the land on the north? If so, what is the effect? How long are the summers of Northern Russia? Why are they so short? What of the surface of Northern Russia? Can corn be raised to any advantage there? If so, why? If not, why? Can evergreen trees grow there? If so why? If not, why? Can trees like the birch and maple thrive in Northern Russia? If so, why? If not, why? Why do not the Russians cut down the forests of Northern Russia so that the land may be cultivated? Where are the fur-bearing animals of Russia found? Do animals that produce fine fur naturally live in cold climates or in warm climates? Have you ever seen a Mexican dog? Compare its coat of hair with the coat of hair of an Esquimaux dog that many may have seen. What makes this difference? The interior of Russia, like the interior of the United States, is subject to extreme heat and extreme cold. Why is this? What lesson in the forepart of the geography has anything to do with giving the learner some enlightment on this subject? In what part of Russia do we find the best crops of grain? In what part of Russia would fruit, like apples, grow and thrive? Why? Why do not apples grow and thrive in Minnesota? Why do not oranges grow and thrive in Missouri? Why do not apples grow and thrive in Florida? What effect has climate on the productions of the soil?

There are many questions in geography that cannot be worked out by the laws of cause and effect; but there are many that can be. Knowledge that is properly related and that comes not altogether from remembering what is on the printed page has more of vital interest in it. It comes to stay and gives power to the learner. Lessons learned "out of the book," appealing only to the memory, are usually dull and stupid.

It is not the intention of the writer to tell how to teach geography. The design of this article is simply to cause the individual who reads it to ask himself or herself this question: "Are my methods based on intelligence that will cause the pupils to see something in the relation of past lessons or past experiences to the present lesson?—Missouri School Journal.

Some Things to Remember.

Remember whatever your occupation may be you have to work. Whether you handle a pick or a pen, a wheelbarrow or a set of books, digging ditches or editing a paper, ringing an auction-bell or writing funny things, you must work. If you look around in the world you will see the men who are the best able to live the rest of their days without work are the men who work the hardest. Don't be afraid of killing yourself with overwork. It is beyond your power to do that on the sunny side of 30. They die sometimes, but it is because they quit work at 6 p. m. and don't get home until 2 a. m. It is the interval that kills them. The work gives you an appetite for your meals, it lends solidity to your slumbers, it gives you a perfect and grateful appreciation of a holiday. There are young men who do not work, but the world is not proud of them. It does not knew their names, even; it simply speaks of them as old So-and-So's boys. Nobody likes them; the great busy world doesn't know that they are there. So find out what you want to be and do, and take off your coat and make a dust in the world. The busier you are, the less deviltry you will be apt to get into, the sweeter will be your sleep, and brighter and happier your holidays, and the better satisfied will the world be with you. How all important it is that we teachers enter upon this grand and ennobling work with a determination to do good to all around us. Work to promote the happiness and prosperity in the future of our nation.—Normal Instructor.

Paper Horseshoes.

A practical invention by a verterinary surgeon is now successfully applied at Berlin. He manufactures horseshoes of paper impregnated with oil or turpentine to make it waterproof. After being saturated, it is glued together in thin layers with a cement which does not become brittle when drying and consists of a mixture of Venetian turpentine, powdered chalk, linseed oil and lacquer. These horseshoes are made in various thicknesses. The holes, admitting the nails by which the shoe is fastened to the hoof, are stamped through the paper when moist; it is then subjected to a very strong pressure, under a hydraulic press, and, when dry, can be filed and planed to fit the hoof snugly.

The inventor has already attemped to make these horseshoes of paper pulp, adding chalk, sand, turpentine and linseed oil in such quantities that the materal is impermeable to moisture. This composition possesses the necessary elasticity and toughness for the purpose; it can be pressed in molds and dried afterwards, or cut out of blocks of the mass and placed under strong pressure. The shoes made by pasting together paper sheets are preferable, as they are stronger then those made of the compressed material. These shoes can be fastened to the horse's hoof either by nails, as usural, or be cemented with glue, consisting of gum of ammonia one part and guttapercha two parts.—Paper World.

Wanted to Be a Detective.

"Detective wanted; no experience required," was the advertisement that caught the eye of a gullible Phœnix man a couple of days ago. A Bisbee youth was also caught by the same ad. He was ambitious and wrote to the concern for information. They sent back word to the writer to inclose $5 for his commission, which would be sent. He did so, and a couple of days ago received the terse reply: "Thanks for the money, you are too much of a sucker to make a good detective. Turn your talents in another direction."—Bisbee correspondence Tombstone Epitaph.

High, Low, Jack.

Fine ice means very cold weather, then comes a high old time in skating rinks, and skating ponds, on slides and rides, and we go home tired and overheated. It's the same old story of cooling off; off with wraps and on with all sorts of aches and pains, rheumatic, neuralgic, sciatic, lumbagic including frost-bites, backache, even toothache. They who dance must pay the piper. We cut up Jack and are brought low by our own folly. What of it, the dance will go on, all the same. It is generally known that St. Jacobs Oil will cure all such aches and pains separately or collectively, and the cry is on with the dance.

Cuban Recognition

There is no doubt of the friendly feeling that exists in the United States for the cause of the Cuban patriots who are now fighting against the tyrannical and brutal rule of the Spanish government. But is well fo the friends of the Cuban cause to act wisely and in such a way that the cause will not be injured. Just now there is a serious doubt, as to whether a recognition of "belligerent rights" for them, by this government, would not harm them more than it would help them. As matters now stand they seem to be getting along all right and if they act with reasonable energy and prudence they are pretty sure to win. For now, the war is confined entirely to the land And the insurgents have no warships at all, but the Spaniards have quite a number. In case the United States declares for "recognition," at once, we will find the Spaniards will have the right to keep every American vessel out of Cuban ports and away from Cuban coasts, and carrying and landing men and material to the Cubans would be many times more difficult than now. At present, we can trade at Havana, and be protected. After recognition we might still trade there but our vessels could be kept out of all other ports and the Cubans would at once be shut in from further supplies from the out side world. Spain could at once declare every port of Cuba under blockade which now she cannot do, because no nation has recognized the belligerents as being an actual war power Such a blockade would be declared against only such powers as "recognized" the Cubans. That would mean a blockade against the United States, the only nation that is helping them. They could search every vessel of ours that was going to Cuban ports. There is no doubt as to the friendliness of Congress or President Cleveland, but it will pay the Cubans to look this matter up and see where the benefit will come in, We believe personally in the justness of the Cuban cause and we have faith that it will succeed, but their friends may not always be wise friends, and it will pay to study these things before acting.

$100 REWARD

Will be paid for a case of Dry Murrain or a case of Black Leg among cattle; $25.00 for a case of Abortion among mares or cows, unless caused by injury; $25.00 for a case of Colic with horses or sheep, provided the stock have daily FREE access to RETSOF ROCK LUMP SALT, and common barrel salt is kept from them; $50 00 for a case of Sore Tongue or Sore Mouth caused by Retsof.

Retsof salt does not contain Slate or Gypsum (gypsum is cement), and in this respect is unlike other rock lump salt on the market Do you want prevent stock from scouring, worms in sheep, horses from becoming cribbers or getting hide-bound, tags on sheep, sickness and cholera in hogs, and have cows keep up flow of milk, have milk stay sweet longer and butter churn quicker, then use RETSOF ROCK LUMP SALT and quit the use of common barrel salt, which contains so much filth, is swallowed in grains, and is generally the cause of all this trouble and loss Practical tests prove this salt to be cheaper in the end than barrel salt. Don't use rock lump salt that contains Slate or Gypsum, and crumbles. The Retsof is the only rock lump salt that is fit to use, the only Pure and Solid rock salt on the market.

FARMERS, STOCK RAISERS AND OTHERS.

Are you still ignorant of the benefit derived from the use of NEW YORK RETSOF ROCK LUMP SALT for your stock? Anyone who will give Retsof Lump Salt to one half their stock and common salt to the other half, for one year, will find that the stock using the Retsof Lump Salt will gain at least 15 per cent over the others

Who Is Now At Alhambra, Cal., Writes An Interesting Letter.

ALHAMBRA, CAL., Jan. 10, '96.

EDITOR COURIER:

The Eastern tourist is here, large parties daily pass through from Los Angeles to the San Gabriel Mission. San Gabriel is a typical Mexican town, but one can find every race well represented. The sleepy greaser and quaint adobe dwellings have not given way to progression of civilization. There are the tumble down Mission school houses (adobe) built somewhat like a coke oven, one room in each house, and the Mission church built 135 years ago proclaim the teachings of Pope Leo XIII.

Our stay at the beach was most pleasant. gathering queer shells, fishing, and better still, bathing, and we were loth to part from the Ocean "that rolls on."

Some eastern people labor under the mistaken impression that the rainy season here is a continuation of rains. Not so, there has been no rain since about the 21st day of December but the natives say that this season is unusually dry. The rainfall is generally from 12 to 14 inches during the season

We are very much surprised to learn from eastern papers that the entire Cal, orange crop is frozen. True, Riverside has sustained small losses, but no fruit is injured in this, Los Angeles county or entire San Gabriel Valleys and oranges are in prime condition. The mercury during the day is between 80 to 90 deg. and we have doors and windows wide open.

Replying to several inquiries as to securing work here, wages paid, price of land, etc., will say that Cal., offers no better advantages than do the Middle States to the wage earner and a level headed wage worker is not apt to abandon a good place for something beyond his ken. Competition in labor is far greater here than east, many coming from the east daily, besides Chinese and Mexicans can be had cheaply, so that white labor does not get above $1 00 to $1 25 per day, that is such as farm hands and for work on fruit ranches. There are many not able to secure work at all.

Good farming land can be bought at from $75 to $200 per acre, it pays however to buy the latter, this is choice alfalfa land and crops on it can be cut at least seven times during the season yielding on an average of two tons to each cutting, per acre, and sells from $8 to $12 a ton. The present price is $10. Lands rent at $2 50 to $5.00 per acre. Anyone buying ten acres of good alfalfa land near market is sure to succeed.

I noticed in the last COURIER an item that John Reincehl of Fairfield was going to Cal. I think this a possible error and no doubt has reference to Job A. Reincehl who came here on the 6th to accept an offer made by E. Messinger of this place to clerk in his general store. Job is well pleased with the change and can scarcely realize that it is summer here in winter.

Yours Very Truly,
O. F. RUDOLPH.

Horse Killed

Henry Shellhouse from near Sedan came to town yesterday with a load of wheat which he sold to Mr. Miller at the Lake Shore freight house. In driving up the incline where the grain is unloaded, one of the horses slipped on the ice plank and fell in such a way as to break one of his legs. It was broken square off, and the poor horse had to be killed. It is quite a loss to Mr. Shellhouse of course and it always seems hard that a horse that meets with such an accident must lose its life. But we suppose it is the only thing that can be done.

Mail 15 Years Old.

The little town of Georgetown, down in Floyd county, Indiana, has been for a week or two a subject of intense interest among the officials of the postoffice department, and the facts have got into the papers. It appears that the postmistress, who is an old maid, and what is worse, an opium eater, is of the opinion that the postoffice and all matter that comes to it, is her private property. An inspector was sent there and he found her standing on a pile of old papers some of which were fifteen years old and many had not been opened. Several cart loads of these, were dug out and hauled away. Numerous mail sacks were found and in all, over 5,000 letters. Some of them had money or checks. She had not sold a stamp for six months and had only about $1 worth on hand, but had saved up about twenty-seven pounds of pennies. She had succeeded her father in the office about fifteen years ago. And now she is to be turned out by a cruel department that won't let her do as she pleases.

ELECTRIC BITTERS.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the Spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alternative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation. Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only fifty cents per bottle at Robbins & McCord's Drug Store. 1

Deserves A Pension.

Bill Scott, the deputy U. S. marshal who assisted to break up, kill and capture the Dalton gang of desperadoes in the west, is said now to be working as a common laborer in the Kenneth stone quarries near Logansport. His body is scarred from bullet and knife wounds. One arm is almost useless from the effects of a rifle ball; the bone of his right leg was shattered by a bullet; two marks are visible on his face, and the tip of one ear is missing, having been clipped off by a bullet. He was also shot in the breast and has experienced dangers and had enough hairbreadth escapes to fill a dozen dime novels. He was with the posse which finally shot down three members of the Dalton gang in a Kansas town. He has met with financial reverses and is obliged to do ordinary labor. He is 53 years old, but still thirsts for adventure, is a remarkably vigorous man considering the hardships of his past life.

Equal to Beecher.

An exchange has the following which reminds us of the "holy day" they say that Beecher mentioned in one of his sermons:

An Ohio minister preached a sermon on "Profanity." During the discourse he took the ground that "damn" was not swearing, but simply used by many to emphasize what the said. The minister, while calling on the members of his congregation a few days afterwards, met a young lady, who said: "Elder, that was a damned good sermon you preached last Sabbath." The minister, it is said, fainted away.

Papers Do It.

I struck an inland Indiana town recently said a traveling man, and about the first thing I noticed was flaring posters announcing the appearance of a second-rate "star" at the local opera house that evening. In the course of my business I found myself in a drug store, where the advance sale of seats was held, and after selling a bill of goods asked for a ticket to the evening's performance.

"Oh," said the young man behind the counter, "those people ain't coming. They busted last week.

"Why don't you take down or cover up the posters then?" I asked.

"Oh, everybody knows they ain't coming. It was in the papers."

Sure enough. The management trusted half a dozen lines in the local papers to counteract the influence of several stands of red, black and yellow posters.

And the papers did it.

Can you think of any better illustration of the relative value of newspaper advertising and the other kind?—Exchange.

Armor Plate.

Carnegie's Poor Plates Rejected by Government.

A test of fifteen tons of naval armor plate, representing the barbette armor of the battleship Iowa and turrets of the cruiser Brooklyn, was made at Indian Head proving ground Jan. 7. An eighteen-inch plate was used as a representative of the entire group. A shot was fired from a six-inch gun, the projectile being a six inch Wheeler steelpointed shell, exploded with a velocity of 1,700 feet. The condition of the test was that the plate should withstand all the effects of the shot, but it failed to meet requirements. The plate was not only cracked, but broken into three large pieces, rendering it entirely worthless. The naval officers present considered the plate the worst ever offered for test. The result necessitates the temporary rejection of the entire group of armor, of which this plate was representative, but a further test will be made on another plate, as the Carnegie company has the right, under the contract to a second.

FRISCO LETTER

R. W. Cobb Informs the Courier readers of the beauties of San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan., 9th, '96

EDITOR COURIER:

Perhaps not all of your readers are aware that Astoria, is situated near the mouth of the Columbia, has a population of about 12,000 and reached by boat only, the greatest part of the city, especially the business portion, is built over the water, while the residences are on the hillsides, whose tops are clad in fir and cedar. At this point the Steam Ship "Columbia," upon which the writer had passage for San Francisco, had to wait some four hours for high tide before we could cross the bar into the ocean. The tide rises and falls from 6 to 8 feet, once in 24 hours. It was pouring hard at this point what might be styled a damp, drizzly, wet rain, a continuation of three weeks with little sign of dry weather.

At this position the river is from two to four miles in width and about ten miles inland. About six miles down stream the river and ocean currents meet, causing a high splashing white spray of briny water across the entire river. As soon as we strike the bar the ship begins to toss and roll about, and soon we are out on the big pond for a three days voyage. The boat has on board a very good ballast, viz 1200 tons of freight, 500 tons of coal and 360 passengers, about 75 of whom are steerage, yet not considered heavily loaded.

The state rooms, cabins and parlors are handsomely equipped and furnished which usually contribute largely to the pleasure and comfort of ocean travel, but there were only abou forty or fifty out of the 360 who truly enjoyed these luxuries, as this trip was much in lacking of certain conditions that combine to delight one from head to foot. Did the boat roll while at sea? Did it? It didn't do a thing but turn over, first on one side then the other for 48 hours, then deep plunges, twisting things generally, was simply sufficient to wreck a cast iron stomach. Many coughed up their livers, or tried to, saying nothing of all the gall they have ever accumulated.

Those immense "swell" waves almost perpendicular, confronting us, often higher than the ship and sometimes breaking over it, causing our craft to squeak and crackle from bow to stern, and people to cough and groan, as she battled with the elements.

Very sudden notions are taken on ship board under these conditions, especially at meal time One will commence with soup and before getting ready for a second course will quickly disappear, while another will follow suit very quietly. Still others fill up on all the luxuries of the season, until their gills lose their natural tint and the cold perspiration and too heavy a load is discovered „on board" to be relieved of which furnishes food of all the luxuries of the season, for the greedy sea gulls who follow the ship, ever with a watchful eye to flying fragments.

The last one hundred miles proved the only redeeming feature of the whole trip the sea becoming less violent, insuring a good night's rest, and as early as 6 a m on Jan. 6, passengers were out on deck promenading, and as jubilant as if nothing but smooth sailing had been encountered. and to catch the first glimmer of light off Golden Gate Harbor. At seven o'clock we crossed the bar and were followed and preceded by steam ships from Australia, Japan and China as we passed the Battery and Fort Presidio.

As we neared the landing about eight miles within the Bay ran into one of San Francisco's characteristic morning fogs which delayed us about an hour in landing. These clouds of vapor are so dense that every object within thirty or forty feet, is absolutely invisible.

These mists, however, clear away by 9 a. m. and the atmosphere is delightfully clear. Not regretting the 700 miles at sea (more than such as it proved to be) and while others may prefer "sea voyages," traveling by land will, hereafter be good enough for

Yours with all due respect,
R. W. COBB.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev J Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding lagrippe Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interuption and it seemed as if she could not survive them A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in its work and highly satisfactory in results." The Farmer's Handy Gate

Five Reasons why it is the Best Gate for Farmers:

FIRST. It is a good durable gate, made of good material and well painted.
SECOND. It has the horizontal retractile movement on rollers, and the swinging movement on hinges.
THIRD. It can be raised so as to allow hogs or sheep to pass under, or to swing over deep snow. It can be changed in a minute without tools, and with mittens on if desired.
FOURTH. It requires but two ordinary posts to hang the gate to, and requires no more room than a common side gate.
FIFTH. Any child can operate the gate, can open and shut it, as it requires but the lightest strength.

Sample gate can be examined on the northeast corner of the court yard in Auburn. County, Township and Farm Rights for sale very reasonable.

Chas. Fox.

Further Account of His Murder At Kansas City.

From the Kansas City Daily Journal on Monday, January 20, we get the particulars of the murder of Chas. Fox, as far as they are known there. It appears that at first, his name was not known, though supposed to be Lorene, as that name was found in his hat. On Saturday evening about seven o'clock he was walking up town and had almost reached Liberty street when he saw three men stop a man named Frank Richardson. Fox ran forward to help Richardson, when the highwaymen shot him. His identity was established by Charles M Parent, who worked in a restaurant, Beck's, where Fox had also been employed as a cook. Parent read an account of the murder in the morning paper Sunday, and noticed that in trying to identify the dead man, a memorandum book had been found in one of his pockets, having the name "Fox" in it. Parent went at once to the morgue where the body was and recognized him at once. In this way a knowledge of the tragedy was brought to the family in Auburn also. The police are now trying to get a full knowledge of the affair Three men have been arrested, John Alexander, Gentry Johnson and Lincoln Johnson. The two Johnsons claim that Alexander fired the fatal shot, but Alexander insists that Lincoln Johnson did the shooting. But when the Johnsons were arrested they claimed they had not been at the scene of the murder at all. Now they admit they were there, and so it is plain they are lying. On the other hand, Alexaneder at once, when arrested, told everything and sticks to his story. The police believe him, though some of it is rather thin. He says that he met the two Johnsons in a saloon, and all drank a good deal. Lincoln Johnson, he says was pretty full, and gave him, Alexander, his revolver to carry for him, and wanted him to help him home. The three men, he says, left the saloon together and walked to where the holdup was attempted. He says Lincoln Johnson grabbed Richardson and then Gentry Johnson grabbed Lincoln. Alexander says he did not hear what was said Finally Liucoln was pulled off of Richardson and the two Johnsons started west. Alexander says he told Richardson to pay no attention to Johnson, as he was drunk. Alexander says that Richardson replied, "I will put a .44 in everyone of you." Then Alexander claims he begged Richardson not to shoot him. Then, he says a man came running across the street and asked what was the matter. Richardson told him, "These niggers are trying to do me up." I told him I was not trying to rob him Richardson told Alexander he would shoot him, and he says that the man who had come up, (Fox,) struck him and knocked him down. Alexander says, "I drew a revolver and began to shoot. Fox ran to the middle of the street. I ran to where the two Johnsons were standing, Lincoln Johnson grabbed the revolver and shot Fox. Then we all ran away and separated." The two Johnsons told a greatly different story. The paper says a dispatch had been received from the relatives in Auburn, Ind., directing that Charles be given a decent burial and that all expenses would be paid.

Ohio Boodlers

Again the state legislature of Ohio has managed to get itself into disrepute This time it is claimed several members have sold positions to friends who wanted them, or have taken money from parties who wanted a certain law enacted, or a law killed. For example, it is said that one member charged $300 for getting a man a man appointed to be a guard at the state prison. Among the names of members now under a cloud, we see Guyer of Paulding county, who is in their state senate now. Gear of Wyandotte and Ohl of Mahoning are also on the rack.

Spitting Blood.

S. F. Fritz, of 677 Sedgwick street, Chicago, says: "I had a severe cough which settled on my lungs I tried a number of advertised remedies and also placed myself under treatment of several physicians, with no benefit. I was recommended to try Foley's Honey and Tar. While little expectation of getting relief, I purchased a bottle. I had taken but few doses when I felt greatly improved; I was enabled to sleep, spitting of blood ceased, and by the time I had taken the second bottle I was entirely well. It saved my life." Robbins & McCord.

A Problem.

The Kendallville Sun puts this out for a feeler:

Here is another problem for readers who are fond of mathematics. A street eighty feet wide and one sixty feet wide cross each other at right angles. A pole 100 feet high stands in one of the angles. What is the distance from the top of the pole to the diagonal corner of the street.

Spencerville Lecture Course

Special to the DAILY COURIER.

Spencerville is putting on city airs this winter in supporting a first class lecture course. Dr. Bishop, H. J. Becker, Chaplain John Hogarth Lozier, and the O'Banyoun's Original Jubilee Singers of Canada have already appeared on the program, while Bishop Becker will again lecture on the 1st of Feb. and the renowned Col L. F. Copeland will give one of his great lectures on the evening of Feb. 15. The good work of the County Teachers' Institute is spreading its influence even into the rural districts and is cultivating among all our people a taste for a higher and a more elevating class of entertainment. Let the good work go on.

Legal Holidays.

One would think that the utmost limit of the "legal holiday" matter had been reached in the northern states, but now comes up word from the south that several of the states there have made Jan. 18 a legal holiday because on that date Gen. Robert E. Lee died. Now came up several northern patriots who would like a holiday made for Lincoln, Sherman, Grant Blaine, and other very worthy men, who in their lifetime were too busy, to observe even the few holidays we then had, We think, that in an hour or so we could pick out enough men as worthy as Gen, Lee, to make "every day a Sunday, by and by." The holiday seem to have been made in the interest of the unemployed or the lazy. Industrious men find the working days few enough to get their work accomplished

COURT.

In addition to the ordinary court news and the special item we published yesterday, there is a case or two more, one from the court here, and and from the appellate court.

In the court here a few days ago occurred a case, the nature of which we did not understand at the time we reported the court doings, A Garrett merchant had sold an account he had against a railway employed to a Chicago party, and the Chicago man garnisheed the account and collected it. The state brought a criminal action against the party, for "oppressive garnishment." The result of the trial was that the state lost the case and the merchant could not be punished, as the state had not established the fact of oppression. So Judge Adair, before whom the case was tried, instructed the jury to bring in a verdict for defendent. But it seems that if a party selling such an account to a third party, knows it will be sued, then it becomes "oppressive" and a criminal action may succeed The attorneys for the state were Davis, Emanuel, McKinnon and Welsheimer, and for defendant were Baxter & Brown and Myers & Mounts.

A noteworthy case has been up before the appellate court: Carey vs John Humbarger. John Humbarger had sold 300 acres of land and the original case had been brought to show that he was of unsound mind, and the court so decided The case was appealed, but now comes back with the decision of the circuit court affirmed. Now there will likely be a case soon to have the guardian who was originally appointed, Evans Dermott to have the sale of the land which Humbarger had made, set aside, and the guardian will hereafter manage Humbarger's affairs. In the original case, as we understand it, Humbarger was represented by Judge McClellan while Carey was represented by Penfield, Brown & Baxter. The amount of property involved makes the case a very important one.

The Discovery Saved His Life.

Mr. G. Caillouette, Druggist Beaverville, Ill., says: "To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with Lagrippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it." Get a free trial bottle at Robbins & McCord drug store. 2

Democratic Caucuses

Saturday's Daily.

The democrats of Union-township met in the Surveyor's office at 1:30 this afternoon to select committeemen for the four precincts. As usual two members were chosen for each; one for the town and one for the country, thus giving to each only half a vote in choosing a county chairman and for similar purposes. Frank Dills was made chairman and Daniel Link secretary. Committeemen were chosen as follows:

For the southwest precinct, Frank Dills for town and John Harris for country; for N. W. Sam Campbell and H. H. Cupp; N. E. Ira Brandon and Arnold Blodgett; S E., John Picker and Alvin Baker.

The matter of a county chairman was then brought up. L. J. Miller was spoken of, but it was the opinion of many that he would not accept. W. J. Frederick of Garrett was spoken of, and very favorably commented on. Those who spoke favorably, were Judge McClellan, C. E. VanAuken, J. A. Barns, H. E. Little and others, but of course no definite action was taken, as this would not be a proper course for a mere caucus. Judge McClellan, Mr. Barns, Mr. VanAuken and Mr. Sawvel all made brief speeches to the meeting. The attendance was good.

KEYSER TOWNSHIP.

The meeting selected W. J. Frederick for chairman and A. J. Little for secretary. The committeemen chosen, were; First precinct, Chas Rugman; 2nd. Henry Houser; 3d. James Kelham; 4th. L. J. Gengler; 5th. Wm. Behler; 6th. Alva Widner. The committeemen selected chose L. J. Gengler for their chairman. The sentiment of the meeting seemed to favor W. J. Frederick for county chairman.

CONCORD TOWNSHIP.

The democrats of Concord east and north met at the office of G. W. Woodcox and chose Wm. Curie for committeeman for the east precinct and Fred Jenkins for the north, to serve for two years.

GRANT TOWNSHIP.

Grant township democrats met at Waterloo Saturday, and elected Jerry Plum chairman of the meeting, and W. H. Leas secretary: The following committeemen were elected: In the West Precinct Harry Reed and A. C. Gruhlke; North Precinct; Solomon Lower and Ab Kelley; Southeast Precinct, Phil Plum and John Jackman. W. S. Getts had been elected in the north, but being postmaster he could not serve and Mr. Kelley was afterwards selected in his place. A resolution was adopted, asking that the meeting for electing a county chairman be held in Waterloo, and tendering the free use of a hall. There was a fair sized attendance, and good feeling prevailed.

Mr. Shuman, chairman of the county committee, earnestly desires the name of every one of the new committeemen. Be sure and send them to him.

Spring Factory

Since we announced about two weeks ago that the Carriage Spring factory would locate here, it has been denied from several different quarters. But it appears we were right in the first place Mr Schaab, secretary of the Auburn improvement Association informs us it is a sure thing, and the delay, if there is any, is caused by Mr. Umsted having to make a trip to California. On his return, he will come here, and then the preliminary steps will be taken to locate the factory and to put up the assistance we have promised. Other factories are in view, and no doubt before the summer closes, we shall see several additions of this sort made to our already valuable industries. These may include another carriage factory, making our fourth one, not counting the old Shaffer wagon works, now owned and operated successfully by H. C. Shull.

What is

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

THE NEWS RECORD.

SUMMARY OF A WEEK'S HAPPENINGS.

The Latest News as Flashed Over the Wires from All Parts of the World—Regarding Politics, Religion, Casualties, Commerce, and Industry.

TERRELL ANSWERED.

Red Cross as a Society Will Not Be Admitted to Turkey.

Secretary Olney has received from Mr. Terrell, the United States Minister at Constantinople, a cablegram saying that while the porte refuses permission to the Red Cross, or to members of the Red Cross, as such, to distribute relief in Armenia, and thereby declines to officially recognize that society, it will permit any persons whom Mr. Terrell names and approves, to distribute relief in the interior of Turkey, provided the Turkish authorities are kept informed of what they are doing.

This concession of the Turkish government materially simplifies the Armenian situation with regard to the efforts of Miss Clara Barton and her assistants to furnish food and clothing to the suffering people in the perturbed districts. In the discretionary power given Minister Terrell to name persons to make the distribution, the minister will undoubtedly designate Miss Barton and the members of her party now on their way to Southampton, but under the stipulation of the porte they must perform their mission as private individuals and not in any sense representing the humane society to which they belong. No insignia of the Red Cross can be carried into Turkey. The Turkish branch of the society has the crescent as its emblem.

The Business World.

R. G. Dun & Co's Review of Trade says: The week has been marked by improvement apparent rather than real. Prices for home products have risen only because the supplies are believed smaller than expected. The Senate still injures all business by doing nothing. The treasury cannot expect a gain in gold as yet but the losses are less than expected. It is generally assumed the new loan will be placed without difficulty though successive payments may cause continued disturbances. A deluge of foreign reports favorable to wheat speculation found ready answer in an advance of over 5 cents in New York despite western receipts were 50 per cent larger than last year.

Gen. Gomez Hard Pushed.

Havana special: Besides Gomez's sickness, he is sharply pushed by the Spanish troops, getting no rest day or night. His movements now are marked by a trail of tired-out or lame horses which the insurgents leave behind them. The opinion is expressed here that the insurgents are in desperate straits, and that for Gomez everything depends upon the safe arrival in the province of Havana of the eastern or second army of the insurgents under Gens. Jose Maceo and Rabi.

Ghouls' Work.

There is much excitement at Allisonville, Ind., ten miles north of Indianapolis, over the desecration of the grave of Mrs. Ann Cory. It appears that within six hours after burial the body was stolen. The grave was open, the casket taken out and broken open and the body removed, and the casket not even replaced in the grave. The relatives of the dead woman and the citizens of Allisonville will spare no pains or expense to run the offenders to ground.

Shot the Scorekeeper.

Near Duvall's Station, Ohio, at a shooting match, Martin Dolby accidentally shot and instantly killed Ira Reed, 21 years old, who was keeping the score. Mr. Dolby had just loaded his shotgun and laid it over his left arm, the muzzle being near Reed's head when it was discharged, blowing off the entire top of Mr. Reed's head.

Saved From a Mob.

Albert Tollis was lodged in jail at Fowler, Ind., by Sheriff Morgan, of Newton County, and a posse of deputies. Tollis is charged with having choked his own child to death, and was taken to Fowler to escape the vengeance of a mob, which threatened to storm the Newton County Jail at Kentland and lynch him.

Scanlan Dying.

William J. Scanlan, who was probably the most popular romantic Irish comedian and vocalist the American stage has ever known, is lying in the Bloomingdale Insane Asylum, in White Plains, New York, at the point of death. He has reached a state of total paretic collapse, and his death cannot be far off.

Revenue Cutters for the Lakes.

In the senate Mr. McMillan made a favorable report on the bill provding for additional revenue cutters. There are to be two for the great lakes, two for the Pacific coast and one each for the gulf and New York.

Masonic Temple Theater, Ft. Wayne, Indiana.

Feb. 11.—Modjeska.
Feb. 14 and 15.—"Span of Life."

Painful Mistake.

Not feeling well Henry Vogel, of the clothing firm of F. Vogel's Sons, Upper Sandusky, Ohio, by mistake took two swallows of concentrated lye instead of wine, and burned his mouth, throat, and stomach fearfully. His sufferings are intense and his life is despaired of.

Fell Dead While Testifying.

Fred Pickup, a glass blower of Peru, Ind., dropped dead at the Methodist Episcopal church. He was giving testimony when he fell over the pew in front of him and died of heart failure.

Fatally Burned.

Cincinnati special: Jacob Bruehl, a barber, his wife and 7-year-old boy were fatally burned at their residence, on Knowlton street, Cummingsville, from the effects of an explosion of a gasoline stove. The father received his injuries trying to save his sick child, after the bed had caught fire.

Crushed By an Elevator.

Gabriel Antoine, an Italian employed in the Caseyville Coal Mine, near Rockville, Ind., was crushed to death in an effort to board a moving elevator. Antoine had recently forwarded funds to his wife and children to come to this country from Italy, and their arrival is daily expected.

CABLE BROKE.

A Fatal Accident in the Smelting Works at Youngstown, Ohio.

By the breaking of the cable used in hoisting the cargo by which stock is carried to the cupalo of the smelter, at the plant of the Ohio Steel company, at Youngstown, Ohio, Charles Hadmarsh, a Hungarian, was killed and three other men were seriously injured, one of whom, Andy Plasko, will die. The four men who were employed in stocking the smelter got onto the cage to decend to the ground from the top of the cupalo where they were working when the cargo was about thirty feet above the ground the cable snapped and the cage with the men went crashing down. Hadmarsh was almost instantly killed, and Andy Plasko was so seriously injured that his life is despaired of, and of the other two men, Steve Frido was hurt internally, but is not throught fatally and Pat Nagle, who jumped from the cage when it first started to fall, escaped with a sprained ankle. This is the third accident, and the second one attended by fatality caused by the breaking of the same cable.

Sisters of Mercy Injured.

An electric car on the Jefferson avenue line at St. Louis, collided with a barouche conveying five Sisters of Mercy, on the Jefferson avenue bridge, and four of the nuns and the driver of the carriage were seriously injured. The sisters who were injured are: Sisters Barbara, Germania, Evaline Alphonsne and Falgenta. Their injuries are not regarded as fatal. The driver of the barouche, James Fagan, is not seriously injured. The motor man of the electric car is held responsible for the accident.

Crooked Transactions.

Guthrie (Oklahoma) special: The latest developments in the United States Marshal's office investigation, shows that thousands of dollars were secured on false vouchers and forged fee bills by the deputies, and other sensational features. It is now certain that several of the judges and district clerks and half a dozen United States Commissioners will be involved and the inspector's report will create a sensation. The frauds may create a National scandal.

Roasted Alive.

A dispatch from Ekoetrineslav, capital of the government of that name in South Russia, gives the details of a fire that occurred in a theater there causing large loss of life. The fire was discovered while a performance was going on. The spectators became panic stricken and made a wild rush for the exits. Forty-nine bodies have already been taken out. A number of persons who are known to have been in the theater are still missing.

Express Train Wrecked.

The engine of the New York and St. Louis express, on the Little Miami railroad, exploded one and a half miles west of South Charleston, Ohio, killing Clark A. Trimble, engineer, and George Waters, fireman, bothof Columbus. The track is all torn up, requiring transfer of passengers temporarily at that point. All of the cars were wrecked except the sleepers, and any of the passengers were injured.

Union Men Discharged.

Columbus (Ohio) special: The president of the local Federation of Labor says Samuel Gompers, president of the National Federation, is coming here to act on the discharge of seventeen men who formed a labor union. The Ohio laws fixes a penalty for this. The firm admit the cause of discharge to be as stated. This will be the first important test of the law. The discharge occurred January 20.

Five Children Drowned.

Almost the entire population of Cuba, a village in the western part of Putnam County, Ohio, are engaged in dragging the Blanchard River for the bodies of five children, a girl and four boys, who were drowned the other day. Three children of George Foremas of Cuba, were playing on the ice, when four of them disappeared. The oldest, a boy of 16, attempted to rescue the girl and was drowned also.

Women Help the Fireman.

At Lynn, Ind., the large storage sheds of lumber and some hoop sheds were found to be on fire, and the citizens turned out en masse to fight the flames. The wind changed and burned the Big Four car house and fired the coal bins. During the fire Marshal White was injured. The women worked in helping to form the bucket brigade.

Utah United States Senators.

In accordance with the provision of the constitution and the resolution previously adopted by the State legislature, a viva voice vote was taken in both houses of the legislature for United States senators, the result of which was that the Republican caucus nominees, Frank J. Cannon and Arthur Brown, were elected on the first ballot.

Spain Takes Courage.

Madrid special: There is a reaction here on account of more favorable news from Havana. A dispatch to the Imparcial says Maceo's bands are retreating from the provinces of Pinar Del Rio and Havana as a result of having suffered frequent reverses.

Still Hesitates.

In spite of the urgent representations of the United States Minister, Alexander W. Terrell, the Turkish government still hesitates to accord permission to the American Red Cross Society to distribute relief to the sufferers in Anatolia.

DAY WITH A SENATOR

SOMETHING ELSE TO DO THAN TO LOOK DIGNIFIED.

Senatorial Life Is a Laborious and Exacting Round—Duties to Constituents and to the General Public—Private Secretary and His Work.

Washington Gossip.

Washington correspondence:

THE United States Senate is now entering upon its busy season. All the committees having been reorganized the work to come before them is being referred to special committees, and shortly there will be a deluge of reports for the full committees to consider and pass upon.

Up to the present time the committees, with the exception of two or three of the more important ones, have done little or nothing. The Democrats realizing that their lease of power was drawing to a close did not care to start the wheels of legislation which would shortly be under the control of the Republicans. It has often and truly been asserted that the

AT WORK.

United States is governed by committees, and with the great mass of legislation to be enacted by the national legislature, it must always be so, but the only important act passed by the Senate during the present Congress, the resolution providing for the appointment of the Venezuelan commission, was distinctly legislation by Congress, understood and approved by every member of the Senate and House, rather than by a mere committee.

While the importance of a Senator's work is popularly gauged by the part he takes in debates on the floor of the Senate, his real duties are chiefly performed in connection with committees. The daily routine of a Senator involves attendance on committee meetings, usually called to meet at 10 o'clock in the morning, and lasting until nearly noon, when they are adjourned, and the members take their seats in the Senate. Each committee divides its work among sub-committees, consisting of one or more Senators, and reports of facts bearing on the particular bill under consideration, together with recommendations for its disposition, are made at meetings of the full committee. In nearly all minor matters these recommendations are approved by the committee, and in turn by the Senate. It is only in the consideration of important political measures that a general discussion is carried on, and even in such cases the sub-committee, being in accord with the dominant party, usually has its work approved with little or no amendment. A to be within the call of the electric bells announcing that a vote is to be taken in the Senate, unless paired with some one of opposite political faith. For the Senators whose committee rooms open on the corridors encircling the Senate chamber this requirement is not attended by any great Republican sub-committee is given a bill to consider, its report is approved by a Republican committee and a solid Republican vote in the Senate is apt to pass the measure, though just at present, as the balance of power rests with the Populists, it's pretty difficult to pass any bill on a strict party vote.

Besides the work in committee that is looked for from a Senator, he is expected inconvenience, but only a small contingency are so favored. Senators who happen to be engaged in committee rooms in the Maltby building and in the terrace don't enjoy the tramp to the Senate in order to answer to their names when called. But even in the case of a Senator who attends closely on the business of the Senate it is seldom necessary for him to spend more than two hours at his desk.

AN AFFLICTION.

From 12 to 2 o'clock is what is known as the "morning hour," and within that time committee reports are received and often acted on, and Senators frequently ask to have their pet measures considered. At 2 o'clock "the regular order" is demanded, and, as a rule, that means that speeches are continued on the measure before the Senate, and unless the afternoon promises something of interest Senators retire to their committee rooms or go home.

Much of a Senator's time is taken up in attendance on callers. Nearly every one who comes to Washington on a sight-seeing journey wants to meet the Senators from his State, especially if the visitor is of the same political party as the member of the upper house. There is a standing rule that Senators do not receive cards between 12 and 2 o'clock, and visitors wait until the latter hour before announcing their presence, and then are invited into the marble room. Some of the popular Senators find that the reception of visitors who merely call to pay their respects is an important part of their daily labor. Usually it doesn't take much time to dispose of visitors, who are generally dismissed after a brief interview, delighted with the attention shown in their receiving a card admitting them to the private gallery of the Senate.

Frequently the greatest part of a Senator's work is done in the evening, when the Senator and his private secretary get together, and either dispose of the accumulated mail or prepare a speech. It is a fortunate Senator who knows the value of an efficient secretary, and is able to find one, for they are not abundant, and is wise enough to intrust such a one with responsibilities. It is the Senator who thinks he must dictate his letters and must open and read them all who is weighted down with routine and non-productive work. Those who have capable secretaries rely on them, and it is only in the case of special communications that the employer is called on to suggest a reply. Many clerks do not even trouble their Senators to sign letters, but are given carte blanche to affix the name of the principal.

The reading of newspapers is an important part of the daily labor of all the up-to-date Senators, who endeavor not only to glance over their local publications, but to read the leading periodicals, without regard to place of publication.

AN ERA OF PROMISE.

MANUFACTURING INDUSTRIES HAVE ENTERED UPON SUCH.

Returns of the National Bureau of Statistics Show a Large Increase in Exports of American Manufactures—The Wool Trade Is Reviving.

Exports Increasing.

All who scan the returns of the national Bureau of Statistics cannot fail to make the exceedingly pleasing discovery that beyond all doubt the manufacturing industries of the United States generally entered in 1895 upon an era of unprecedented promise.

These official returns, giving the exports of our manufactured products, are brought down to October 31 last. They show conclusively that for the ten months ending with that date American manufactured exports exceeded in value by $15,000,000 the exports of any like period in our entire history.

It is true that a large factor of the ten months' increase of 1895 over 1894 is the increased export of refined mineral oils, which reached $40,608,048 in 1895, against $29,643,424 in 1894. But even if mineral oils were thrown out of the count altogether (for which there is but little reason) the sum of other manufactured exports in the first ten months of 1895 still overleaps all previous bounds by $4,000,000.

The table furnished by the chief of the Bureau of Statistics is as follows:

Exports of manufactures for 10 months, ending October:

1891	$141,076,982
1892	125,144,368
1893	146,556,413
1894	148,739,702
1895	164,572,481

The unparalleled increase this year in the exports of the products of American mills and factories will be something of a revelation to people who have credulously listened to the calamity-howling press and politicians. The new fiscal law of 1894, which partisan prophets with untiring tongue declared would ruin our manufactures, now bids fair to be an epoch-making event in their history. Who can read the above figures without seeing that at the close of 1894 our mills and workshops took a new and larger lease of prosperity than they ever before enjoyed? Never before has so cheering a day dawned upon American labor and capital. For any industry must prosper when it is able to sell a considerable amount of its products abroad.

All our records of advance are broken by the aggregate export of American home-made fabrics in 1895.

The principal increases in exports of American manufactured goods during the ten months ending with October last were in silk fabrics, machinery, glass and glassware, leather and manufactures of leather, agricultural implements, chemicals and drugs and iron and steel manufactures. The comparative figures for the last named—the basic and most important—are as follows:

Exports of iron and steel for 10 months, ending with October:

1891	$25,202,435
1892	22,541,759
1893	25,084,638
1894	24,496,683
1895	28,149,031

These official data prove that in the year 1895, despite the accumulated demand at home for the products of our iron and steel furnaces, their output has sufficed to supply an export amounting to nearly $3,000,000 in excess of any previous export.

The increase in the exports of machinery last year is also noticeable, as will appear from the following table:

Exports of machinery for 10 months, ending October:

1891	$8,273,697
1892	8,334,347
1893	8,800,950
1894	8,571,301
1895	9,671,945

The statistics of our glass and glassware shipped to foreign countries are also gratifying.

Exports of glass and glassware for 10 months, ending October:

1891	$764,039
1892	757,481
1893	824,988
1894	736,992
1895	829,655

The exports of American chinaware also increased last year, and reached the highest figures recorded in the statistical tables. The following figures explain themselves:

Exports of leather and manufactures for 10 months, ending October:

1891	$11,308,932
1892	9,450,942
1893	11,129,250
1894	12,423,216
1895	15,613,403

Noteworthy also is the improvement which has been recorded since 1894 in the export of American chemicals, drugs and dyes, as shows by the following returns:

Exports of chemicals, drugs, dyes, etc., for 10 months, ending October:

1891	$5,164,906
1892	5,296,761
1893	5,732,920
1894	6,309,012
1895	7,012,761

During 1895 the exports of flax, hemp and jute manufactures increased over those of 1894, from $1,451,653 to $1,541,962. The export record of '94 also was broken in 1895 by our manufactures of wood and india rubber, by clocks and watches, manufactures of tobacco, carriages and cars and agricultural implements.

If the rate of export prevailing last October continued to the end of 1895 the total is $200,000,000. This will be several millions of dollars in excess of the largest total of such exports ever recorded in any year of our commercial history—a result which may be regarded as one of the first fruits of tariff-reform.

The mass of facts and figures now in evidence overwhelmingly confute and disprove the contention of Republican presses and politicians that the Wilson tariff has injured our manufacturing industries and that Congress ought now to begin the work of tariff-ripping and tariff-tinkering.

There never was less occasion than now to start a tariff war, which would at once injure the business and trade of the country and lead to endless debate. The Wilson law, defective as it is, has already demonstrated its superiority to any tariff we ever had, and the people will soon find this out. The country needs a rest from tariff wars, and if the Republican leaders are wise they will not touch the existing tariff rates.—New York Herald.

Low Tariff Brought Bigger Profits.

The New York Tribune recently published the annual statement of dividends paid in 1895 by the cotton mills of Fall River, Mass., the center of the cotton industry in the Eastern States. The report shows that the average dividend paid by the various mills was 8.09 per cent., a larger amount than was paid for many years past. In 1892, the year of which the McKinleyites always boast as the most prosperous period under a high tariff, the average was 7.36 per cent., but this has been considerably exceeded in 1895. In addition to the unusually high dividends paid large sums have been put by as reserves or surplus capital, so that in reality the record for last year's business is even greater than the above figures would show. The Bourne mills, for instance, paid a profit-sharing dividend to its employes of 7 per cent. in addition to a stockholder's dividend of 13 per cent., a total profit for the year of 20 per cent. Other mills were only a degree less prosperous, a number of them making extensive additions and repairs out of last year's earnings, after paying above the average dividend on their stock. It is further reported that four new mills will be erected this year, which will give employment to several thousand operatives.

The Republican readers of the Tribune, who have been accepting as gospel that paper's statements that under the Wilson tariff the country was being ruined, industry going to the dogs, and business standing still, must have rubbed their eyes on reading this official record of the most successful year in the history of the American cotton industry. Had they not seen daily in editorials, and cooked news articles, that the country was still in the slough of despondency into which it had been plunged by four years of McKinleyism? Was not the Tribune insisting that Congress should promptly restore the high tariff law repealed in 1894 by the Democrats, as the only means of starting up our closed mills and factories? Did not that paper solemnly assert that "free trade" had brought low prices, idleness and stagnation? How, then, could it be possible that one of our great industries should have been so prosperous, its dividends so large, its output so great, its employes' wages so high?

The answer is simple. "The little boy lied." The organ of protected trusts had deliberately suppressed the news of busy mills, wage advances, new factories started, and general prosperity, which had been recorded by the Democratic and Independent papers during 1895. Not only that, but it had asserted the reverse of the truth, and by false representations had led its readers to believe that the condition of the country was worse than when the McKinley law was in force. Each business failure, no matter what the cause, was ascribed to the Wilson tariff, and magnified far beyond its importance. The smallest sign of calamity or depression was eagerly welcomed, and commented on in partisan editorials.

But when authoritative statements are issued from the center of a great industry, showing an unexampled condition of prosperity, the Tribune merely records the facts. But that is enough. With better business than ever before no argument is needed to convince the Fall River manufacturers and workers that they have been helped, not ruined, by the Wilson tariff. The mere statement of these facts condemns the calamity wailers, and proves their bluster about the injury of lower taxes to be mere buncombe and falsehoods.

The Reviving Wool Trade.

The year which five days hence will have rounded out its course has been, on the whole, a signally eventful one. In the volume of sales it has broken all previous records. The amount of foreign and domestic wool disposed of in the three principal markets up to December 12, 1895, amounted to 347,060,105 pounds, as compared with 261,667,229 pounds December 15, 1892. It will be also memorable for an unprecedented development of the worsted industry and for the lead which combed yarn fabrics have held in the woolen dry goods trade, notably in cloths for men's wear. And, finally, it has seen some tardy recovery in values of the staple from the depression of two years ago.

Some idea of the recovery in values of domestic wool during the year may be obtained by a comparison of prices December 21, 1895, with rates January 1. At the earlier date, Ohio XX and above was quoted at 17 cents to 18 cents; at the latter, 19 cents to 20 cents., and XXX selling at 21 cents; Ohio and Michigan X, in January, 15 to 17 cents., in December, 16 to 18 cents; No. 1 wools, at the commencement of the year, 18 to 20 cents; at the close, 20 to 22 cents; ½ and ⅜ unwashed combing, 15 to 16 cents in January; 16 to 18 cents in December; ⅜ and ¼ blood combing, 16 to 17 cents early in the year; 17 to 19 cents at the close. Fine medium Wyoming and Utah, in January, 10 to 12 cents; in December, 12 to 13 cents; Eastern Oregon, in January, 11½ to 12 cents; in December, 12 to 13½ cents. Stocks of domestic wool December 21, 1895, in the three principal markets amount in toto to 53,726,588.

Stocks of foreign wool at the same points aggregate 27,241,200 pounds.

The total supply of domestic wool in all the markets of the country, together with unreported lots, will amount to 101,726,238 pounds, which, combined with the quantity of foreign wool in the three great seaboard markets, will make the grand total (about) 128,967,438 pounds.—American Wool and Cotton Reporter.

In his speech on the new Republican tariff bill, Mr. Dolliver, of Iowa, is reported as saying: "There is one thing that we ought all to be agreed upon, and that is that the treasury of the United States should no longer be at the mercy of the organized avarice of the world." The Republican protection idea appears to be that it ought to be reserved for the "organized avarice" of a few well-to-do but always dependent people at home.

Highway robberies and burglaries have been so frequent in Warren and adjoining counties this winter that enterprising citizens of Williamsport have purchased two bloodhounds and are ready to pursue any further criminals. Last week a store in Ambia, Benton County, was burglarized, and the next day the bloodhounds were set on the trail and located the burglar at a house eight miles north of Ambia. Later the house was searched and the stolen property found.

CHAPTER XXXI.

"What a shame!" cried Diana Knollys, indignantly.

She was standing in the station library, idly turning over the leaves of the Indian daily paper, while her father stood chatting with Colonel Prinsep in the doorway.

"What is it?" asked the commissioner, with an indulgent smile.

For reply, the paper was thrust into his hand, and a daintily gloved finger pointed to the column which had roused her anger.

The article was headed "Another Helen," and dealt in a half-jesting, wholly disparaging vein with the quartermaster's "pretty daughter," who had made such havoc in the regiment; turning her attention first to a sergeant, then as her position altered, to the Colonel himself, and in both cases with the deadliest effect. The writer went on to observe that it was surprising such a probable source of information should have been overlooked at the inquest. Who so likely to be able to throw a light upon the darkness which enshrouded the fate of her lover? From the days of the heroine of Troy until now a woman had been at the bottom of every mystery, the motive for every crime; and this Helen was, he had heard, as fair as she who had been the cause of that memorable ten years' war—and perhaps no less to blame.

Much more there was in the same strain; but Colonel Prinsep, who was reading over Mr. Knollys' shoulder, muttered such a wrathful ejaculation that the commissioner was startled.

"Eh?" he queried, testily, looking over his gold-rimmed glasses.

"I beg your pardon," said the Colonel, "but I must agree with Miss Knollys that such libels—or rather innuendoes, which are worse, for libel can be contradicted—ought not to be allowed to be inserted in any paper."

"I never did like the Indian Argus, nor approve its views; but I must say I think— What do you say, Di?"

"I am going to see Jane and take her for a drive if she will come."

"But, my dear, I am not sure that I care about your being with a young lady who has made herself so notorious."

"Or rather has been made so by circumstances. No, papa, I won't listen to a word. You have always let me have my own way, and you are not going to thwart me now."

"And I don't think any one could do anything but admire so kind an act," put in the Colonel, more moved than he cared to show. "How good you are! I should like to thank you as Miss Knox's friend, only I have not the words—nor the right to do so," he said, in a low, shamed voice, as he led her to the carriage.

"Then don't bother about thanking me at all," she answered, brightly. "I assure you it is not goodness at all, only viciousness disguised."

"How so?" he questioned, smiling.

"I know who wrote that letter to the Argus, and with what motive it was penned. The writer hoped by that means to make people look shyly upon Jane, as they would do, of course, if all that he said was true. But I mean to circumvent him by showing that I for one disbelieve every word, and I fancy"—with a proud toss of her head, which Colonel Prinsep, being in utter unison with the sentiments it expressed, thought infinitely becoming—"I fancy some good will follow."

"I wish you would tell me who you think it was who wrote it!" said the Colonel, fiercely.

"Think! There is not a doubt about it. I am certain. Don't you remember what I told you one night, at your own dance, that if Jane Knox refused Mr. Blount he would be avenged?"

"Is it he?"

"Of course it is;" and Miss Knollys whipped her ponies into a sharp trot.

Poor little Jane! Surely no one had ever paid so dearly for the royal gift of beauty—no one had suffered so keenly on account of her lovers!

When he went back into the reading-room, he found Mr. Knollys seated by the table with the paper spread in front of him, perusing it intently.

"The whole thing is in execrable taste," he said, as the Colonel entered; "but I should have given my opinion at the time had I been here—I cannot help thinking that the inquiry was hurried over, and that a little more trouble might have elicited more information."

Stephen Prinsep was ill-pleased at the turn the conversation had taken. He thought it had been settled once for all, and well-nigh forgotten; but that letter in the Argus, and Mr. Knollys' evident determination to follow up the clew it appeared to give, would endue the matter with a new interest and give it a fresh lease on life.

Leaving the library, he walked back toward the mess, pondering what could be done to avert such an annoyance from Jane. He guessed what a blow it had already been to her, and how she probably reproached herself—though unnecessarily—for having spoken, as she would consider, harshly of him so shortly before his death. What other reason could there have been for her avoidance of himself on the day of the funeral, and the look almost of repugnance which she had cast upon him, except that she associated him with what, in her gentleness of disposition, she regretted?

On his way he met Diana Knollys driving back alone.

"Jane would not come," she informed him in a mock-offended voice, then added seriously—"Do you know, I believe she is fretting about something, about this very letter, no doubt, for she looked so white and worn I was quite shocked."

"I dare say"—gravely; "it is enough to trouble any one, and she is so sensitive. But I am sure she felt your kindness, Miss Knollys, and I hope"—with one of his winning smiles—"that you won't be discouraged by a first failure, and that you will go and see her again."

"Oh, yes, I will do that certainly! She can't always be so impracticable, always refuse," answered Miss Knollys, hastily.

Well, she had pledged herself to stand by Jane at this juncture, and would not go from her word. Besides, she did not believe that, even if Jane proved obdurate, Colonel Prinsep would ever turn to her. And she liked the girl for her own sake and wished her well.

"Some women have such luck!" muttered Diana, ruefully, thinking of how Jane had once been a sergeant-major's daughter, and now might be a peeress if she chose; or, which might be an even brighter fate—for Miss Knollys did not like Major Larron now—the wife of Stephen Prinsep.

Meanwhile Colonel Prinsep walked away slowly, his gaze bent downward; therefore it might have been unconsciously he passed the mess-gates, and went on toward the quartermaster's house.

Diana's last words were ringing in his ears, and had driven every other thought away. "She can't always be impracticable; she can't always refuse!"

There seemed something of prophecy in the unconsidered remark, which he was fain to apply to his own use. She had been so long deaf to his spoken entreaties and even more persuasive unuttered prayers that at any moment she might have discerned his love in his eyes; surely she would listen now, the cause of her forced coldness being removed. Just at first she might have felt vexed with him as with herself, for the fear and resentment she had expressed about Jacob Lynn; but her natural good sense must show her that neither had been to blame, and she would, if she loved him—as she had loved him without doubt during that short, bright period of their engagement—turn gladly to the protection of his love. His name could shield her from so much that was disagreeable, the attendant gossip and rumors that would follow upon the trooper's death, more especially since that article had appeared in the Argus. And for his part, if every one turned against and reviled her, he would none the less joyfully take to his arms the one love of his life.

As he turned into the compound, he met Mrs. Knox.

"I was just going out," she told him when the usual greetings had been exchanged. "But I will turn back with you. It was nothing of importance, and I am sure it was very kind of you to call; we have been dreary enough lately."

"It was your daughter I came especially to see. Will you let me go and speak to her alone?"

She looked up inquiringly into his face, and he smiled somewhat sadly in reply.

"Yes, I have come to ask her again to be my wife, but whether I have a chance or not I cannot say."

"She loves you, I am sure," asserted Mrs. Knox; but she did not speak so hopefully as she might have done on such an occasion six months ago.

Excited at the prospects which reopened out before her daughter, though at the same time sorrowfully convinced that their brilliancy would be displayed in vain, Mrs. Knox hurried on, and the Colonel was free to pursue his course unhindered.

The front windows of the bungalow were open, and at one of them Jane stood looking out; but directly she saw him she shrunk back, and when he entered the room he found her at the furtherest end of it with the handle of the door in her hand, as though about to flee.

"Jenny, Jenny, what is it that has come between us that you would avoid me so?" he cried, staying some distance off lest she should escape him altogether.

She leaned against the door, and her face was hidden from his gaze. Only a convulsive movement of her shoulders showed him she had heard what he had said.

"Are you afraid of me?" he asked, gently. "Surely not. You know that my feelings have never altered—that I love you now even more dearly than the first day I asked you to be my wife. You are bound by no promise now; you are free at last!"

"Oh, hush, hush!" she moaned.

"What is there to prevent me pleading my cause again?"

She turned to him so white and horror-struck an expression that involuntarily he quailed before her glance.

"You can ask that?"

"Why not? You loved me once," he began.

"Do you think I do not remember that if you and I never met, Jacob Lynn would be still alive?"

"I think you exaggerate," he remonstrated in his quiet voice, which insensibly soothed her excitement; "his death was an accident, and though we may both regret it, I for one cannot be so unselfish as to ignore the fact that it makes possible what you declared impossible before—our marriage, Jenny."

"Over his grave?"

"I do not understand," he said, hopelessly. "You must——"

"I know all!" she interrupted him, meaningly.

For a moment or two neither of them spoke. Jane, frightened at her own boldness, stood before him with downcast eyes and trembling lips, and Colonel Prinsep, more than ever bewildered, grew angry as well. Nothing, he thought, could justify her conduct. She had always been inclined to trifle with his love, bringing forward first one, and then another excuse to prevent their marriage. Now, when at last he might reasonably suppose his probation to be at an end, a fresh obstacle intervened, mysterious, shadowy, and apparently not to be explained. His first impulse was to leave and never seek her again; but, as what was meant for a farewell glance fell upon her lovely, troubled face and swaying, willowly form, he relented, and was once more under the potent spell of her beauty, ready to serve twice seven years if only he might win her so.

"Listen to me, Jenny!" he pleaded, earnestly, "I have loved you so well, and with so little thought of self, that surely I deserve a hearing; and if there is any act of mine you have misinterpreted, it is only fair you should let me justify myself if I can."

She looked into his face with such evident dread of what it was that he would say that for an instant he was discomposed.

Then, as she averted her gaze, he went on gravely:

"At the same moment I first realized my love for you I almost simultaneously discovered that you were already engaged, and I accepted my fate—sorrowfully, it is true, but with no hope of altering it. If I implored you to think seriously before definitely fulfilling the promise you had made, it was, heaven knows, with no ulterior motive, but from a wish to secure your happiness, which I valued more than my own. Afterward, because I heard so much against Sergeant Lynn, and I myself proved some at least of the reports were true, I went to you once more, because I loved you so dearly, and dared to think that you loved me. Believe me, it was not because of the man's position, nor with the idea of tempting you from him with the advantages I could offer; if he had been worthy of you I would have been content to see you his wife, if he had been even lower in the social scale. It was the knowledge of our mutual love, and the wretched existence you would lead if you married him, that made me seek you then. You wrote to Sergeant Lynn at my instigation, throwing yourself upon his generosity."

"Do not let us speak of that," interpolated Jane, coldly; and it chilled him even more to discover that she still wore the big silver ring upon her finger, though the presumable giver of it was dead.

Dispassionately as he had spoken, she had not been able to hear unmoved the story of that time—told, too, by him; but as his words recalled the deceit which had been practiced on her, all the scorn she had felt before revived; and more than ever it appeared possible he might be guilty, too, of the death of Jacob Lynn.

Her coldness communicated itself to him.

"I have no wish to say anything that will pain you. I will not deny that I was to blame then, though perhaps not so deeply as you think. Should you ever feel curious to know how it happened, your mother will tell you the true story."

"I am not curious," sighed Jane.

She would have given much to have known nothing that could make Stephen Prinsep the less a hero in her eyes than he was at first. Some sins might have been condoned, but these of his were so despicable and mean that she hated herself because in spite of them she loved him still. It was that which made her fear him so, lest her infatuation—so she termed it—should prove stronger than her sense of what was right.

"And I will not speak of the day," he continued, "which should have been the brightest in my life, and was the dreariest. I went away shortly afterward, and tried my hardest to forget what was at once a pain and shame; yet the first sight of your sweet face, the sound of your dear voice dissipated all my resolutions. I knew you were as dear to me as ever. Then gradually the impression grew upon me that you were no longer bound by the old promise, and that evening we acted together—with me it was no acting, Jenny—I resolved to woo you again; and again, just as I began to dream of a success, the more to be prized because so hardly won, you met me with the unexpected blow that you had pledged yourself anew, almost as fatally as before!"

"When I did so," said Jane—and the words seemed wrenched from her by some inner force she could not combat—"I believed that I should never marry!"

"Was it so?" he asked, gently. At times he could have sworn she loved him still, then again that look of dislike to his presence, tinged, too, with fear, swept over her face, and he was fain to doubt. "Tell me, Jenny, when you gave that promise."

"The day you called for the first time after your return from England," she answered, in a low voice.

"Because you thought that I no longer loved you. Oh, Jenny, it was you who remained so cold and unconcerned, and by your indifference drove me to the belief that you had forgotten all that passed between us so short a time before! I had not forgotten—I shall never forget—that I have held you in my arms, and kissed you as a man only kisses the woman he loves, and hopes to make his wife. The aching sense of loss which was in my heart the day on which our marriage should have been is there now, and will be till I die, or until, Jenny, you relent! Do you owe me nothing for the suffering you have caused? I respected the feeling of honor which made you refuse to listen to me while you were engaged, and even the generous kindness of your second promise; but now, surely there is nothing now to part us!"

"Stephen, Stephen!" she murmured, wistfully, momentarily led away by the fervor in his tones; but as, in answer to her pleading cry, he stepped eagerly toward her, she shrunk back, remembering what was between them. Yet his words had not been without effect. Believing him guilty still, she could make some allowance for the crime now, gauging the greatness of the temptation by the greatness of his love. And it had been an accident—he had not meant to slay him, she was sure, or he could not have appeared so unconscious of wrong-doing! She, too, had been so much to blame, first in making such a promise, and afterward in sending the one lover to meet the other with anger in his heart. She had taken no thought of the jealous passion each would feel against the other.

"Jenny, what am I to think?" cried the Colonel, as she moved away.

"Think," she answered, hysterically, "that I would give all I have to bring Jacob Lynn to life. How can I ever be happy again, knowing what I do?"

The door opened, and as her mother entered Jane slipped away, only too thankful to escape.

(To be concluded.)

THE CHIPMUNK.

Interesting Habits and Traits of the Squirrel's Sprightly Cousin.

Like their squirrel cousins, the chipmunks are very inquisitive, but have a great fear of man. They have now gone into winter quarters and will remain in seclusion until late in April or early in May. Owing to the number of enemies that constantly hunt and destroy them the chipmunks have to build a rather elaborate burrow. At least two, and sometimes three or four, entrances lead to the nest proper. These openings are usually made under a surface rock or a tuft of ferns or the roots of a tree, where they attract very little attention. By a devious course of sometimes twelve or fifteen feet the underground path leads to the den. The other path will lead in from an entirely opposite direction. The hole always plunges steeply down at first, far below the level of the den. This permits a gradual "up grade" to be preserved as the path, thus draining the burrow and preventing washouts after heavy rains.

After the young are reared and the August harvest days come on, the chipmunks enlarge their home by excavating pantries or storerooms all along the paths. These are to hold the winter's provisions. Under the nest itself, which is about a foot high by two feet in length and warmly lined with fine, soft grasses, these little caves are roughly scooped out and left unlined.

Among the most provident of creatures, these midgets relax their merry play about the time the grain fields grow yellow and begin to soberly work. With ridiculously swollen out cheeks, young and old begin to carry home grain and early nuts. Chincapins, hazel nuts, acorns and "pig nuts" they lug in in vast numbers. One chipmunk has been known to hold seven good-sized acorns in his capacious little cheek pouches, so when one realizes that each one makes 100 or more trips a day to the burrow he will soon see what a store is being laid away.

Unlike the squirrel, these little fellows seem to dread the cold days. In late September, when the frosts have come, they spend only a short time each day outdoors. They rush out under a nut tree, grab the first prize in sight and scurry home as though pursued by fiends. Sometimes they hasten with reason, too, for some late foraging hawk will have spied the striped jacket among the yellow leaves, and the race is for life. Weasels, too, are greatly dreaded. These slim marauders prowl right up into the very burrows and slaughter entire families in cold blood.

THE CABINET HOMES.

CENTERS OF MUCH SOCIAL OFFICIAL LITE.

Something About the Houses of Mr. Cleveland's Staff and the Genial Hostesses Who Preside Over Them—Places of Graceful Hospitality.

Resplendent with Receptions.

Washington correspondence:

Social centers of great importance during the season are the homes of the Cabinet officers. The ladies of the Cabinet have regular reception days, and on these occasions the houses are thronged with visitors. The home of the premier of the administration is the big, white house at the southeast corner of Rhode Island avenue and 17th street. This is the first winter Secretary and Mrs. Olney have spent there, as they only moved in last spring. The house, then a very simple one, was bought some years ago by Mr. and Mrs. Bellamy Storer and was by them so greatly enlarged and beautified that its original appearance was completely lost. The entrance is in the English basement, and the staircase, comfortably wide, leads to the parlor floor. The parlors are among the most artistic, and the bay window in the front room is a most inviting retreat. It has a window seat, which is piled up with dainty pink cushions against the simple muslin draperies at the window. The picture gallery is at the end of the house and adjoining it is the dining room. These are beautiful rooms, and have every elegant and fanciful touch to complete their adornment. The parlor suite, therefore, provides the necessary room for entertaining which is so desirable in the home of the Secretary of State.

SECRETARY HERBERT'S HOME.

ATTY. GENERAL HARMON'S RESIDENCE.

The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Carlisle reside at 1426 K street. No house in the West End is better known. Mrs. Carlisle has not had any larger receptions since she became a Cabinet lady than when she was a hostess of the Senatorial circle. Her house could not hold any more. The house is as well arranged as any single house could be. The rooms open up well and are bright and cheerful in their appointments. Mrs. Carlisle frequently adds something new in the gifts from her friends. Just at present two enormous polar bear rugs on the parlor floor and in the bay window of the dining-room invite admiration.

SECRETARY OLNEY'S RESIDENCE.

SECRETARY SMITH'S HOUSE.

Secretary and Mrs. Lamont's house, 1607 H street, is one of the few remaining landmarks of fifty or sixty years ago, when most of the fashionable houses were clustered in that neighborhood. It is the big yellow house adjoining the Corcoran house, and with the dainty taste and skillful arrangement exercised by Mrs. Lamont, the interior carries out the fascinating glimpses one gets through the big, square windows. The parlors, dining-room and reception-room give what might be considered ample entertaining space, but every inch is needed when the host and hostess entertain. On these occasions the balconies are inclosed and furnished, and make a pretty addition to the parlors.

SECRETARY LAMONT'S HOME.

POSTMASTER GENERAL WILSON'S HOME.

Attorney General Harmon has a delightful residence in the house 1329 K street. It was a few years ago entirely transformed by its owner, Mrs. Fred De C. May, and has all the modern touches. The drawing-room is in white and gold, and Louis XIV. styles predominate in its luxurious appointments. The library and dining-room are equally artistic in treatment. Mrs. Harmon is an ideal hostess, and will have this winter her married daughter, Mrs. Wright, of Philadelphia, and Miss Harmon to assist her.

Postmaster General Wilson purchased the house No. 1741 Q street last spring after his appointment, and has since made it his home. It is in the handsome block between 17th and 18th streets. The base of the house and the square bay window are of bright green stone. The house within is as attractive as without. The rooms are tastily furnished and ornamented, a work in which Mrs. Wilson has taken great pleasure since returning to town last fall. Mrs. Wilson intends to receive on Wednesdays throughout the season, and the house will be a popular one in the social world.

Secretary Herbert has the big old-fashioned mansion, 1925 F street, at the northeast corner of 20th and F streets. It is sunny and bright, and in the heart of the district which years ago was frequently heard of in social matters, and is again a center of the homes of well-known people. Miss Herbert is its presiding genius, and its arrangement is entirely her care and taste. She has but lately returned from a long stay in Europe, and has brought back many pretty souvenirs of her travels. Mrs. Micou, her married sister, also makes her home with her father. The house has an old-time conservatory at the rear of the parlor, which on festive occasions accommodates the band.

Secretary and Mrs. Hoke Smith have one of the daintiest homes in the Cabinet round in the house 1623 K street. It is vine-clad and has graceful architectural lines, and the interior is most inviting. The staircase and square hall, with a big fireplace, are as much a feature as the cozy library on the front and blue drawing-room on the same floor. The dining-room has rich dark woods in its construction. The Smith household has several merry youngsters, and the nursery upstairs is bright and sunny.

SECRETARY CARLISLE'S RESIDENCE.

Secretary Morton keeps house in a handsome suite of apartments at the Portland. Miss Morton presides for her brother, and no hostess is more agreeable and no receptions more pleasant than hers. The apartment has its own dining-room and kitchen, and the establishment, while in a contracted space, is nevertheless amply sufficient in its arrangements.

Maggie Was Only Half Hanged.

A curious instance of the hangman's rope failing to perform its fatal work gave to Margaret Dickson, an English woman of a century and a half ago, the nickname of "Half-Hanged Maggie"—a name by which she was known throughout the British Isles. Maggie had been convicted of some capital offense (there were several such offenses catalogued in the English statutes at that time), and was finally taken to the gallows on the hill at Edinburgh. After the drop fell she was allowed to hang several hours before friends claimed the remains and started with them in a cart for Musselburg, six miles away. On the way some drunken apprentices rudely halted the cart and opened the coffin in order to see the woman who had been hanged. This let in fresh air, and the air and jolting of the cart combined to revive the supposed dead woman long before the home of the relatives was reached. Arriving there, she was carried into the house, alive but very faint and barely conscious. A minister was called to pray for her, but she soon recovered sufficiently to demand that the minister be dispatched for a doctor, who could administer relief that would be of far greater value to her at that moment than any minister's spiritual importunings. The physician soon arrived and Maggie quickly recovered, but was never again tried or even arrested for her crime. Later on she married and became the mother of several children. She lived to be quite old, but the nickname of "Half-Hanged Maggie" stayed even after death, being engraved on the sandstone slab that marked her grave —St. Louis Republic.

Gigantic Feathered Creature.

Elias Midkoff of Hamilton, Lincoln county, was in Charleston the other day and proposed to the State Historical and Antiquarian Society that if it would send him a taxidermist to Hamlin the society could secure a monster bird, of a kind never seen before by any one in West Virginia. The feathered monster is described by Mr. Midkoff, from measurements taken by himself and W. W. Adkins, of Hamlin, who killed the bird at the mouth of Vannatters creek, with five bullets from his rifle, while hunting deer on Monday. The bird is 7 feet 4 inches from tip to tip, 4 feet from tip of bill to tip of tail, flat bill 4 inches long and 3 inches wide, somewhat similar to that of a duck; web feet, neck 19 inches long, and about 1½ inches through below the feathers; plumage dark brown, relieved on the wings and breast by light blue shading. The bird when first seen was circling high in the air, but came down very quickly and alighted in the water, where Adkins got a good shot at it, crippling its wing. Adkins attempted to capture the strange fowl alive, but it was so vicious that he could not get near it without killing it, which required five bullets.—Baltimore American.

War Trains in Canada.

The Canadian Pacific Railway, after many months of labor, has constructed at an enormous cost two special military or war trains, comprising fourteen cars for men, two cars for cooking, two Pullman cars for officers, two cars for arms and stores, and two dining cars. The officers' cars are luxuriously fitted out and contain state-rooms, lavatory, smoking-room, etc. Each train is composed of eleven cars and engine, and gives ample sleeping accommodations for 306 men and fifteen officers, although over 100 more men could find room. The men's cars are well finished and furnished with modern improvements. The kitchen car has all the utensils of a large-sized hotel, and requires six cooks and two helpers. This one car can turn out over 1,500 meals a day. During a trip from Halifax to Vancouver on the war train 5,500 meals for officers and men were prepared. The Canadian Pacific Railway expects to cover the distance from the Atlantic to the Pacific in five and a half days.

Rattle-Snake Den

A Horrible Discovery near Hastings, Indiana.

The Hastings correspondent to the Milford Mail, gives the following account of a rattle snakes den, which was discovered near that place:

"Last Monday a tramp, who gave his name as James Morgan, was crossing the west marsh when the ground on which he was standing suddenly caved in for a space of about five feet around and to his horror he found himself in the midst of a large den of rattle snakes. The reptiles fiercely attacked him, and it was only by an almost superhuman effort that he freed himself, but not till he had been bitten numerous times. He was brought to Mr. Kline's at this place and medical aid was summoned from Nappanee. The doctors worked with him all night and hopes are entertained of his recovery."

HARPER'S BAZAR.

The twenty-ninth year of HARPER'S BAZAR, beginning in January, 1896, finds it maintaining its position as the leading high-class illustrated journal and a weekly periodical for home reading.

Every week the BAZAR presents beautiful toilettes for various occasions. Sandoz, Baude and Chapuis illustrate and engrave the newest designs from the finest models in Paris and Berlin. New York Fashions epitomizes current styles in New York. A fortnightly pattern-sheet supplement with diagrams and directions enables women to cut and make their own gowns, and is of great value to the professional modiste as well as to the amateur dressmaker. Children's clothing receives constant attention. Fashions for Men are described in full detail by a man-about-town. Our Paris Letter, by Katharine DeForest, is sprightly weekly recital of of fashion, gossip, and social doings in Paris, given by a clever, woman in an entertaining way.

Both the serials for 1896 are the work of America women, Mrs. Gerald, by Maria Louise Poot, is a striking story of England life, Mary E. Wilkins, in Jerome, a poor man, discusses the always interesting problems of the relations between labor and capital. Short stories will be written by the best authors.

Social departments. Music, The Outdoor Woman, Personals, What We Are Doing, Women and Men, report and discuss themes of immediate interest.

Answers to Correspondents. Questions receive the personal attention of the editor, and are answered at the earliest practicable date after their receipt.

The Volumes of the BAZAR begin with the first Number for January of each year. When no time is mentioned, subscriptions will begin with the Number current at the time of receipt of Order.

Some new ideas on this question are given by W. E. Curtis, the able correspondent of the Chicago Record. After speaking of the 33,000 square miles of gold—bearing territory the British are now claiming, and which they did not formerly claim, he adds:

"The colonial authorities of British Guiana have calmly occupied this territory, organizing police, appointing local magistrates and assuming legislative as well as executive jurisdiction; providing laws and regulations for the government of the mining camps, requiring projectors to obtain licenses from the colonial officials at Georgetown before commencing work, and forcing them to advertise their claims and locations in the Official Gazette of the colony. Sanitary regulations have been imposed, together with rules to govern the erection of buildings and the sinking of shafts. No miner can cease work upon his claim without a formal notification to the British colonial authorities; otherwise he forfeits his title. He must keep a daily record of his progress and output, which is regularly reported to the proper inspectors, and he may sell his product to a licensed dealer only. A duty of 90 cents an ounce is imposed on all gold exported from the colony, and none can be shipped without an invoice showing from what mine it comes.

These and many similar restrictions have been imposed by the British colonial authorities within a territory to which they did not claim ownership until the discoveries of gold, and over which they did not attempt to exercise jurisdiction until 1883. And as a new mines have been discovered the British have gradually pushed their frontier line westward. Now it includes nearly twice as much territory as they claimed for it twenty years ago, and several times as much as was ceded to Great Britain by Holland in 1814. It is true that the Venezuelans have shown no enterprise or activity in developing their own resources. They have permitted foreign prospectors to enter and occupy the mining districts at their will, and have never attempted to exercise police or even administrative control in the mining camps. The original prospectors having been Englishmen, naturally looked to the colonial government at Georgetown for protection, and the other foreigners fell in without a question, acknowledged British sovereignty and obeyed British law.

True-Sure.

"I wandered to the circus, Tom, I sat beneath the tent, and saw the man from Borneo, likewise the tattooed gent; I heard the toothless lion growl while men in spangled clothes stepped fearlessly into their dens and whacked 'em on the nose; I saw the sacred elephant squirt water through his trunk, the salamander eating lead and other melted junk; I heard the merry clown get off the jokes we used to know, when we were boys together, Tom, some twenty years ago. The same old horse waddled round the same kind of a ring the same old comic vocalist proved they couldn't sing; the same old hippopotamus was grunting in disgust; the same old humped back Persian ox was kicking up the dust; the same rheumatic acrobats crawled painfully around, and petrified contortionists were rolling on the ground, and ladies rode on barebacked steeds to music sad and slow—the same old girls we used to see some twenty years ago."

CONGRESSIONAL convention is at Kendallville. April 7.

W. J. FREDERICK, of Garrett, is being urged to be county central committeeman, and would be a good one.

It's about as hard to break some people of bad habits as it is to break Malarial Fever when it once gets a firm hold upon one. Mr. C. Himrod, of Lancaster, Ohio., says, "Simmons Liver Regulator broke a case of Malarial Fever of three years, standing for me, and less than one bottle did the business. I shall use it when in need of any medicine, and I recommend it."

Our Banks.

We call attention to the comparative statement of the business of the First National Bank of Auburn as the best index to the growth of Auburn. There is nothing that so surely indicates the amount of business done in a town as the statements of the Banks. The statement referred to shows that the First National has $48,578 63 more on deposit than it had at the same date in 1894 and has $39,115 51 more loaned out and yet has $10,403.07 more cash on hand than it had at that date.

We have not the data with which to make the same comparison as to the Farmers Bank but we have no doubt that it could make as good a showing. We have a statement made by said bank on July 12, 1893, showing their deposits to be $83,496 81, and their statement made this week showing that they now have $125,637.18 or $42,130.37 more than they had in 1893.

They have loaned out in 1893, $82,374 and their loans as shown by their statement this week amounts to $129,813.46, or $47,439 40 more than they had in 1893.

The two banks show an increase in loans during the last three years of $86,554.91 and an increase of deposits of $90,709.00. We have not the information to make a comparison with other towns in the county. The city of Garrett is the only other town that publishes Bank Statements. Garrett has but one bank, the Garrett Banking Co.

We are proud of our banks and of the men who control them as they are all highminded gentlemen whose ability and integrity has never been questioned and we are glad to know that they have the confidence of the people. Money deposits in either bank is absolutely safe.

SNAP.

The democratic congressional convention has been called to meet April 7, and the place decided on is Kendallville. We have no objection to the place, but it seems to us that the date is too early. It is a fault into which the democratic party has fallen, of getting in too big a hurry. Some men who want to be candidates get excited and want the matter over, forgetting that he is really not the entire party. There is also a chance that if the convention is put at a later date, he may not get it at all, as when people are given a chance to study the matter over, they may find a man that suits them better. In this particular case, no one was thinking about it. No one, unless it was the committeemen of the different counties knew of it. The party leaders would be wise, if they were to concede something to the party, and work for the good of the party rather than for three or four men who desire to be candidates. A good deal of care should be exercised, as we cannot afford to make any mistakes as a very slight error might cause the loss of a congressman.

CORRESPONDENCE

CORUNNA.

Last Thursday was examination day in the Corunna schools.

Ernest Hoffman is braking on the Lake Shore again.

Mrs. John Bates is very low with typhoid fever. Dr. Phillips is attending her.

We earnestly hope that the United States Government will soon recognize the belligerancy of Cuba. We verily believe that every liberty loving American desires to see poor suffering Cuba free.

Ira Gushwa, telegraph operator at Tocsin, Ind., over on the Chicago and Erie R. R., visited his mother, Jane Gushwa, last week.

Maud Denman, who has been visiting with the family of James Finch, returned last Friday to her home in Albion.

Milo Thomas must be anticipating an immense trade this summer in lumber and other building material, judging by the large purchases that he is making in that line.

Mrs. Jane DeLong living near Sedan, slipped and fell last Tuesday breaking two of her ribs. Although seriously injured, she is getting along nicely under the care of Dr. Phillips. Also the same day, George Casselman cut an ugly gash in his foot with an ax, and came to Dr. Phillips for "repairs."

There was a swell wedding in Corunna last Wednesday noon at John W. Helmer's. The contracting parties being Dr. F. Snyder, one of our leading physicians, and Mrs. Hattie Lipsett, the accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Helmer. Rev. Minnick pronounced the magic words that made them one. After a sumptuous dinner, the bride and groom, accompanied to the depot by a number of their friends, boarded the train for Chicago. They returned on Saturday and quietly settled down to housekeeping in the Doctor's fine residence on Michigan Ave.

BUTLER.

Sherman Kenestrick, has purchased M. E. Ellsworth stock of groceries and is now proprietor instead of first clerk.

Miss Lizzie Champion, of Angola is is visiting with her sister, Mrs J. A. Campbell.

A couple cases of severe sore throat, bordering diphthera is reported in the north part of town.

The M. E. friends continue the revival effort but almost without results. The other churches are still keeping their efforts with varied success. Rev. J. B. Hawkins is filling in the vacancies in the north churches and doing quite a work in these out lying districts.

James Ingrim, of Artic, came very near losing his dwelling by fire last Friday. Plenty of help happened to be near at hand and an abundance of water vigorously applied saved it in a badly demoralized condition. The loss will reach nearly $200, covered by insurance in J. A. Campbell's agency.

Mrs. Walter Goodwin is report ill.

James Grindle sustained serious injury in the neck and mouth by falling on a cows horn.

Sneaking Business

It is sneaking business to write a letter full of personalities and send it to any one without signing the writer's name. No one but a sneak and coward will do this. Among those who have been annoyed in this way, indirectly is Commissioner Hague. Two or three times he has received letters about this thing or that, but pays no attention to them if not signed. Some of them are from republicans, giving him advice, and some more than hint that his duty to party would be to do this or that. As to these, last, he would tell them if he knew their names, that his first duty is to the county, and that his sole care should not be for his party or any other party. The Poor Farm seem to be a matter of great solicitude to one or two of these patriots. Lately he received one from Garrett which we think ought to be published, though we do it without Mr Hague's knowledge. We give it just as it was written:

Jan 20 1896
Gartt Ind

Frend Hage Ser your Man on the County Farm i Herd him Say in Gart Some time ago to a frend of His that He was a going to Get the Best of the Commishners this year He was in a Salune at the time you had better Spot Him in time ore He will Beat you a voter that Stood By you in the Lection and a frend Push Him.

We wish to say right here, that the above screed, as far as it relates to Mr. Bartels, our efficient superintendent of the county farm, it is an utter falsehood. Not one of the assertions made has a word of truth, and if the writer has the courage to sign his name to the article, he will hear of something greatly to his interest. From this letter, our readers can also see the kind of people who so often cause the commissioners trouble and annoyance. In his own choice language, we say, "Spot him."

THE LAST WEEK

OF OUR

Great One-Fourth Off Sale!

Have you made all the purchases you intended? Do you realize that 25 per cent is a great saving on a suit or overcoat? We expect a rush the last few days, and we are going to extend this sale one day longer than advertised to accommodate a good many that come for miles on Saturday to trade and have asked an extension. And

SATURDAY, FEB. 1, WINDS UP THIS SALE.

We have lots of goods left, but our sizes are broken. Look at what we have and you will surely see something that you will buy at one-fourth off.

The distance people come to patronize us, shows that our discount sales are appreciated by the conservative buyers. Don't wait until the last day of the sale as you will have better chance to inspect our stock, as Saturday is a busy day and out of town trade will expect to be recognized.

Come and be convinced that our sale is bona fide, and a sale you cannot afford to lose.

The Railroad Sandwich.

W. R. Hart, Traveling Salesman, Dayton, O., says: "Like many other traveling men, I made the acquaintance of the railroad sandwich, who afterward introduced me to old 'General Dyspepsia,' an acquaintance I was unable to shake until I met with LYON'S SEVEN WONDERS, which I am happy to say, has put the unwelcome guest to flight. Dyspepsia and headaches are things of the past. I feel like a new man and can eat anything."

Could not Sleep at Night.

To whom it may concern:

Following an attack of la grippe and typhoid fever, I was left with a bad condition of blood and serious stomach troubles. I had no appetite, was exceedingly nervous and could not sleep at night. To tell the story briefly, LYON'S SEVEN WONDERS cured me.

Perry Long Injured.

While at work at the fair ground yesterday Perry Long met with an accident. He was up about ten feet working with an iron bar, when the bar slipped. This of course overbalanced him, and he saw that his only hopes were to jump; but all over the greund near the building were pieces of timber with nails in them, and he knew it would not do to jump on them. So he leaped like a diver and landed about ten feet from the building. When he struck the frozen ground he bursted an arter in his left foot. Dr. Hines was called and it is believed he will get along all right.

Objected.

A good story is told on old Mr. Shull north of town. He is called 'Shaky Shull" because of some nervous trouble that keeps him shaking his head. But he is a good sort of a man when he is all right, and it is only when his poor health clouds his mind that he is in any way disagreeable. He was in this condition Sunday evening, when Dan Yingling walked home from church in town with Mr. Shull's daughter. Mrs. S- was also along with them as all had attended services at the Church of God meeting. When they reached Mr. Shull's residence he came down, opened the door and admitted them, and then went back to his room. The three sat down and chatted a little time, as was very natural and proper. But Shull's head wasn't quite right and he objected. He soon "put in an appearance" as the lawyers say, with a vicious looking shotgun and informed all concerned that he "didn,t want any man sitting up with his wife" and told them to leave, which they did in a wild hurry. Then he "wished he hadn't" and struck over across the road to Will Hull's to see if he could find them. He put the solemn question to Mr. Hull, "Would you want another man to be sitting up with your wife?" Mr. Hull admitted that such a plan would not be very agreeable, and later got his neighbor soothed down and secured a family reunion. We have not heard from Dan.

Roby Again.

This time it is not the Roby race track, nor is it the Columbian Athletic Club with its prize fights. This time it is the suit that Mr. Roby and E. A Shedd have brought to secure to them the title of a large tract of land, that lies along the margin of Wolf Lake and its outlet near Roby, Whiting and South Chicago. It appears that they undisputed possession of certain tracts of Swamp land, that originally bordered on the water. But having bought them from the state of Indiana, which in turn had received them as a gift from the United States. As the water courses changed or the lake dried up, there was left a margin of land between the old waterline and the present. This strip was claimed by new parties, some of whom tried to get a title to it by locating government scrip for land, on this fringe of swampland. The court now holds, that Roby is entitled not only to this extra strip of land along the water, but to the center of the stream or lake, or proper line in the lake if the lake shoud be surveyed, "Mrs. Roby's husband" is probably nearly a million richer by this decision.

Got $500.

A queer suit was recently decided in the English court. A well known Opera star sued her manager for heavy damages on the claim that he had broken his contract with her. She being the leading lady of the company had expected or was promised that her name should appear at the head of the list of characters and in prominent type, on programs, bills, etc. But the manager out of a spirit of ill will, put her name everytime, down among the other characters, and in the same small type. So she brought and gained it. The court decided that prominence was a part of what, she was entitled to, and that the absence of this prominence injured her reputation as well as did her a financial damage, and gave her a judgment for $500.

Another Runaway

O Buchtel's team Broke Up Things in General Saturday Evening..

Monday's Daily.

Just as the DAILY COURIER was being delivered Saturday evening, I. O. Bachtel's fine team which he drives on his delivery wagon ran away. Curt Harris who works for Mr. Bachtel had driven up to the near door of Hebel Bros. store and was unloading flour. The team had a heavy iron weight tied to them but this was of but no use so far as holding them was concerned. They started east just as two men in a buggy drove by the head of Bachtel's team. In making the turn the team came in close contact with the buggy but the men made no attempt to stop them. They went east and at a lively gate. They ran against a telephone pole just east of Mr. Bachtels mill when they were stopped. Both horses were loose from the wagon, and the end of the tongue was broken off and the remainder driven into the ground. Fortunately the horses were not hurt and but little damage done to the wagon.

Sol Barney was up from St. Joe yesterday and of course made us a friendly call. We never see Sol. but we think how mistaken our voters were in 1894 in not making him clerk, But it is too late to cry now. Sol. is not only a good business man but would have made an intelligent officer.

John J. Baxter and wife returned this week, from a prolonged visit in the northwest and southwest. They were first in Minnesota, at Fairmont, and later Mr. Baxter went into Wisconsin. Then both went to Oklahoma, where they have relatives They bring word that the relatives, at Fairmont are doing well Miss Lucinda Daniels is spending the winter in the South. In Oklahoma, Adam Jackman and wife are on a farm, and having improved health. Mr. Baxter is uncertain whether he will locate in Oklahoma or not.

A Battle Scarred Veteran.

Nearly everyone in Medina Co., Ohio knows Stephen Rolph, of River Styx, the one legged veteran, who lost his leg at Winchester, Va., March 23, '62. In all probability the exposure and privations of army service, the effects of which are felt as they grow older by nearly all old soldiers, were the cause of the serious nervous prostration and sleeplessness of which Comrade Rolph complained. He says.

"People hereabout know me pretty well, but you can tell others that I was down for about six months with nervous prostration and sleeplessness for which I tried various doctors and medicines, but Dr. Wheeler's Nerve vitalizer has done me more good than all the doctoring I had done. The first bottle gave me such great relief that I have used several and I feel almost restored to my former good health."

Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer can be relied upon by any who are suffering from nervous troubles, sleeplessness, etc. If all tired out and run down, you need a reliable nerve and system tonic and health restorer as this remedy is. Sold in Auburn by F. E. Davenport, and by all dealers everywhere. 1-5

J. W. Pierce, Republic, Ia., says: "I have used One Minute Cough Cure in my family and for myself, with results so entirely satisfactory that I can hardly find words to express myself as to its merit. I will never fail to recommend it to others on every occasion that presents itself." Davenport the Druggist. See book.

A new society among the members of the medical fraternity will be organized in Ft. Wayne on Feb. 18th, to be known as the Upper Maumee Valley Medical Association. It will include in its membership physicians in the counties of Allen, Whitley, DeKalb, Steuben, Elkhart, Noble and Wells, in Indiana, and Allen, VanWert, Williams, Paulding and Defiance in Ohio. The organization committee by whom the call is issued, is composed of fourteen Ft. Wayne doctors.

Among the unique dresses worn by the ladies at the "Hard Times" social at Mr. Zent's was that worn by Mrs. Rose Shull, which was the wedding dress of old Mrs. Feagler, who lives with her son John Feagler. She is now 82 years old and the dress is 65 years old. It is almost like the dresses worn recently, having puffed sleeves, and general style of what are called "empire." We have often heard it said that fashions return about so often.

Saturday's Daily.

E R. Shoemaker, of Waterloo, was here to-day attending the populist meeting.

Mattie Moody was married this forenoon, at her home, the residence of Clerk D. D. Moody. The fortunate young man was Mr. Milton Walters of Toledo, Ohio. Mr. Walts of the M. E. church performed the ceremony and they left on the north-bound noon train for their new home in Toledo. The COURIER sends its best wishes for their future.

For a pain in the chest a piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound on over the seat of the pain, and another on the back between the shoulders, will afford prompt relief. This is especially valuable in cases where the pain is caused by a cold and there is a tendency toward pneumonia. For sale by Davenport the druggists.

Solomon and Henry Deets, of Fairfield, were in town to day, and brought the sad news of of the death of Israel Ringler, a well known young farmer of that township. His disease was some sort of neuralgia of the bowels We are pained to hear of his death as he was at one time a pupil of ours, and for some years a teacher in his township. He was a most worthy citizen.

Best Cough Medicine.

Many merchants are well aware that their customers are their best friends and take pleasure in supplying them with the best goods obtainable. As an instance we mention Perry & Cameron, prominent druggists of Flushing, Michigan. They say: "We have no hesitation in recommending Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to our customers, as it is the best cough medicine we have ever sold, and always gives satisfaction. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle by Davenport the druggist.

Eugene Altenburg and wife of Indianapolis were in the city over Sunday the gueste of relatives and friends. Mr. Altenburg left to-day to resume his travels in the interest of the Dental house and Mrs. A. will remain here for a week or more.

Rev. F. L. Erlougher called at the COURIER office this morning. He is pastor of the M. E. church at Waterloo and evidently thoroughly interested in his work. He is also pastor of the church at Grove Bethel in Jackson township.

Utah's two new senators are Frank J. Cannon a son of the well known Mormon leader of that name, and Arthur Brown. Both are republicans and are in favor of free silver to benefit the silver mines of that section and for higher "protection" in the way of tariff duties.

J. E. Pomeroy has a pretty lively law partner, in the "person" of a big, blinking owl. They say the owl is an emblem of wisdom, and we hope friend Pomeroy will find the live bird of more value than we find the stuffed one that adorns (?) the COURIER sanctum.

S. M. High, Will Zeigler and the other teachers of Jackson township were here to-day. They came to visit our public schools and get new ideas and methods. It shows they are taking a live interest in their work.

The Pierceton Record advertises a man named Makemson, who refuses to pay a just account. Good idea to keep such fellows before the public. A man who is able to pay, but not willing is a proper subject for such honors.

Prince Henry of Battenberg, who married Queen Victoria's youngest daughter Beatrice, died at sea last week of "coast-fever." He was with the British expedition that went into the Ashantee country and captured their king.

Chas. H. Bliss who was formerly publisher of the Times here is now at Pensacola, Fla. He has gone there for his health, his wife and children having gone to her home at Tipton, Ind. He says the Populists want him to start a paper there. We presume he will if they buy it for him.

The B. & O. has a new president. It is John K. Cowen of Baltimore. He is a son of Dr. Dr. Cowen who used to live at Garrett. He has been the road's principal attorney for some years. He is also a member of congress.

About six weeks ago we had a solitary case of what was pronounced diptheria And now our exchanges come up with headings about "another siege of diptheria in Auburn." We assure our friends that solicitude is entirely misplaced at present. Auburn is in her usual sound state of health.

Fawcett, the postmaster at Lagrange, has been superseded, by a man named Rowe. We suppose this was done on account the scandal that was caused about a year ago, by his staying in the office one Sunday with his lady clerk. A man needs to quit such foolishness before he begins to handle Uncle Sam's mail, or your Uncle Grover will get after him.

Coldwater, Mich., is taking a new departure in school work, or rather is talking of doing so. Instead of encouraging the pupils who graduate, to spend the usual sums of money on dresses, gifts, pictures, to etc, etc, they will try and have them take the money and use it on a class trip to some point of interest, like a trip up the Lakes, or to Niagara. It looks like a good plan.

Sheriff Stroh yesterday caught a Mr. Steele of Churubusco who had left that place with about $40 that did not belong to him. Three other fellows were interested in the deal and had received part of the money, Mr. Stroh caught all of them and received some $36 back. He took Steel to Churubusco to-day.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Blum were over from Garrett to-day. They report Miss Bertha Shaffer as yet not enjoying very good health.

TO GERMANY

Coming east on the B. & O. express last evening was a fair haired, red cheeked little girl of about ten years, who seemed to have no people traveling with her, and judging by the home made bundles she was watching it was evident she was prepared for a long journey. It was noticed, too, that the conductor and brakemen seemed greatly interested in her, and took pains to say a friendly word to her, or ask if there was anything she wanted, nearly every time they passed her, Even traveling men had a cheery word for the lone little girl, and it was plain to see that though making the journey alone, she would not lack for kind care and attention. On going over to inquire her destination, we were surprised as to hear her cool reply, "I am going to Germany." Here was food for thought, This apparently inexperienced little girl, starting off calmly and confidently on a journey that would make many an older head anxious, and a more experienced heart uneasy. But to her, there seemed nothing extraordinary in it. She went on east, past the Junction, as calmly and confidently as if she had traveled around the globe. We may never hear of her again, but the sympathies of our better nature should go out toward the little fair haired German, with a hope that her long journey may be a safe one, and loving friends greet her on the farther shore.

Liars!

The Times, of Washington, D. C., has a good one on Congressman Heatwole, now a representative from Minnesota, which Mr. H's friends in Auburn will read with some interest. Here it is:

"Representative Heatwole is being slowly but surely forced to the conclusion that if all men are not liars a large proportion of them are. One of his constituents, J. A. Spencer, of Dundas, Minn., represented himself to be the sole survivor of the great Custer massacre, at the Little Big Horn, in 1876, and desired to obtain compensation for his services from Congress.

Mr. Heatwole journeyed from Washington to Northfield during the Congressional holiday recess, principally to discover whether there was any foundation for the claim made by Spencer. Mr. Heatwole was honest in endeavoring to secure just recognition for his constituent, in the event that he could substantiate the claims. Mr. Heatwole had Spencer visit Northfield and made every possible effort, by a long personal interview in his office, to get at the real facts. Spencer claimed he enlisted December 20, 1875, at Fort Snelling, was enrolled in Campany A, Eleventh United States Infantry.

He gave a long list of dates and names calculated to lend verisimilitude to his narrative, all of which were faithfully recorded by Mr. Heatwole. He claimed to have seen Custer fall and to have escaped and lived several months on blackberries and roots, sleeping in caverns. He was finally captured by a half-breed scout, who took him to Fort Bulford and received $200, presumably for arresting a deserter.

But, alas! This pretty tale wouldn't stand scrutiny. The War Department was unable to verify a single name or date from its records, and the conclusion seems inevitable that the imaginative Mr. Spencer has been romancing."

This old estate matter is again interesting the people who claim descent from this famous old Dutch lady of early New York. She has descendants all over the country, Michigan alone, being able to show up over fifty. Our own county used to have a few, and perhaps has yet. One family of the Clarks in the north part of the county, and we believe Mr. Shugers' people were of the number. It is now claimed that some lacking evidence has been discovered that may help the heirs. This, however, is doubtful, as so long a time had passed without the heirs trying to secure their rights that the "statute of limitations" will probably prevent their getting anything at this late day.

The rains Saturday with the melting of the snow made considerable water. On Ninth street between Main and Jackson, water has no outlet and as a result it found way to the basement of the Swinaford House, and in order to keep the furnace going Mr. Forkner had to employ men to carry out the water. This work was kept up all day Sunday and yesterday a pump was put in and water was pumped from the basement. The change in the weather, however, has been in Mr. Forkner's favor as the water has now frozen and hence does not find way to the basement. This is a street that should have the attention of the town board and we presume Mr. Forkner will appear at the next meeting and make a complaint. He has certainly been put to a great expense in keeping the water from putting out his furnace fires.

Queen Victoria is an admirable woman and an excellent queen, but this fact need not blind public opinion to the fact that she is no judge of poetry.

Rud Kipling says China's fleet could wipe out the entire American navy. Mr. Kipling occasionally unloads a bit of entertaining fiction on the public that he doesn't get any pay for.

The Rhinebeckers were proud of their distinguished townsman when he was a candidate for Governor, but after his inauguration he did not bestow a single office in his gift upon them.

The London Chronicle is slightly mistaken when it says that "Lord Dunraven's failure, etc., has done more to breed bad blood between the two nations than President Cleveland and Secretary Olney combined." His lordship may be a thorn in the flesh on the other side, but he is only a joke over here.

The Venezuelan commission will be a puzzler to the learned British critics. It contains two Republicans, two Democrats and one man of independent views. What the British critics must discover is how the verdict of this commission can be alleged to be dictated by partisan sentiments.

William Watson, Lewis Morris and Alfred Austin have all been considered by Queen Victoria as candiates for the laureateship. If she had not stopped when she fixed her choice on Austin the chances are that eventually she would have pitched upon a poet for the position.

Austria's new ministry has sent a circular to all public prosecutors reminding them that the freedom of the press is guaranteed by the constitution, and warning them that the illegal practice of confiscating newspapers on the ground that they incite to hatred and contempt will no longer be tolerated.

It is John Bull's ready assumption that he is the natural lord of the earth that has brought him into collision and forced upon him a recognition that he is everywhere making antagonists of those who ought to be his friends. Just now he is feeling very angry and threatening to fight all the rest of the world, if necessary, to keep what he has got and get what he wants. But he will cool down when he takes a calm view of the situation and will see the necessity of letting other people's possessions alone and of mending his own manners.

The art of etching seems to be wonderfully provocative of humbug. A few lines which, were they drawn on paper with pencil or pen, would escape comment, become (says the Nation) invested with a wonderful interest when they are scratched on copper. Time was when Mr. Hamerton had to complain that the public knew nothing of etching; but that time is long past, and to-day an artist who fails as painter and draughtsman has but to publish his feebleness in several "states" to become a considerable personage. Reproductions of a good many things are important only because they are etched.

George W. Smalley, American correspondent of the London Times, is trying to show that there is ground for impeachment proceedings against President Cleveland. Mr. Smalley's contention is that the President, in his message on the Venezuelan question, by his threatening statements, usurped the rights of Congress, which alone has the power under the Constitution to declare war. There might be some point to Mr. Smalley's contention if the President had used language threatening war in his intercourse with foreign powers. But the Constitution gives him the right and makes it his duty to communicate with Congress by message. It is ridiculous to say that he is liable to impeachment for making recommendations on matters that are solely within the power of Congress to determine. It might as well be said that he is liable to impeachment for recommending certain revenue legislation.

An incident in illustration of a smart trick said to be not infrequently played by coyotes in securing food from among the herds of sheep on Western ranches is related by a rancher of Grant County, Oregon. He had a herd of about 1,000 sheep, and recently missed a large number. In searching for them a herder found three sheep lying on the brink of a precipice, their throats marked with the teeth of a coyote. He made his way to the bottom of a canyon, 300 feet below, and there found the bodies of 110 sheep, or rather parts of their bodies, for the coyotes had been feeding on their carcasses for a week or more. From other incidents of like character it was concluded that several coyotes had got among the herd when the sheep were driven off their bedding ground during a storm, and had herded them to the brink of the precipice, much as a lot of sheep dogs would drive sheep. When the edge was reached the coyotes pressed the herd so hard in the rear that the 110 at the front either jumped or were pushed over the precipice.

Colorado is red in the face with the energy it is giving shouting to the rest of the world, in the expectation of calling mankind's attention to the marvelous richness of its gold mines. At present, from the stockholders' point of view, all there is to Colorado is Cripple Creek, and Cripple Creek is certainly a wonder. But it does not matter if the second level of Cripple Creek were as rich in gold as the surface of New Jerusalem, there would be doubting Thomases in plenty. The world's notice has been drawn to the sag in the values of the South African stocks in London, Paris and Berlin, and as a consequence all stocks of gold-mining companies everywhere are looked on with more than doubtful eyes by capital. Capital is owned by human beings, and human beings have a disinclination to be taken in twice by the same game. There is no doubt at all that there are rich mines in South Africa, and there is scarcely less doubt that there are rich mines in Cripple Creek. All the same, gentlemen with money would, just at the moment, rather take a flyer in something else than gold-mining shares, unless something extra attractive can be offered.

The war scare is not without its humors for disinterested spectators. At any other time the way in which the serene British subject has arisen and stamped around in much wrath and fury would be an effective antidote to melancholy. The sudden assemblage and dispersion of diplomats, the hasty meeting of cabinet councils and the mysterious talk of mobolizing armies and of navies suddenly sent into commission are as exciting as anything outside of a national political convention. The world suddenly becomes cognizant of the existence of a South African republic which had been slumbering peacefully for several years without being so much as noticed. A party of overambitious Englishmen go on a trip in the republic's territory, and the poet laureate of England writes a wonderfully and fearfully bad poem in honor of their ill-advised picnic. And to cap the climax the Emperor of the most imperiously governed country in Europe, next to Russia, sits down and composes a letter congratulating the people of the republic upon preserving the integrity of their free democracy. Kaiser Wilhelm interrupting his work of punishing people for lese-majeste congratulates President Krueger on behalf of political freedom and thereby becomes a most interesting subject of observation. His present policy may be wise, but it is also gayly and charmingly irreconcilable with those autocratic speeches to the reichstag. It will be surprising if some of the kaiser's socialist opponents in that chamber do not allude to the incident with gentle but sincere irony. On the whole it is a matter of satisfaction that both Wilhelm and his irate friends in London are doing a little to make the situation amusing. These things relieve the strain.

Tell-Tale Coat Collars.

The man who thinks he has the best of his tailor had better take off his coat and examine the tag under the collar, which with great care the fashioner of garments has sewn in. There let him look at the stitching which binds that innocent-looking bit of linen to the cloth. Let him then see whether the tailor is a fool or not.

As surely as bad habits leave their mark upon the countenance of the wicked, so the wily fashioner of wardrobes has set his seal. The honest man, the beat, the slow payer, the schemer and the dolt are known by the stitches. By their marks ye shall be understood, or words to that effect.

The object of this new sartorial fancy is to enable knights of the shears to tell at a glance whether you are good pay or not. It's all in the threads, as it were. Here is the key to these ingenious tabs of the tailor. The "jog" stitch is the one regularly used for good customers, who require good work. The criss-cross is significant of slow pay. The stitch with dots and dashes, which looks like the Morse alphbabet, tells the inquiring tailor that the owner is a bad risk. The reverse dot stitch shows the good fellow who wishes his friends to dress well, but hates like thunder to pay what they will finally owe on his introduction.

The round curves are used to indicate a mean man, and the tag with convex loops at each corner is a sure black eye for the wearer. It's a good scheme, altogether, the tailors think.—New York World.

A "Tam."

Get Germantown wool or if a thick cap is desired, wool of a heavier variety, and an ordinary bone crochet needle.

Make three chains to form a loop or ring. Fill with ten stitches. Keep on increasing every three rows. First taking every fifth stitch, then every tenth, then every fifteenth, etc. Continue this until the top of the cap measures eleven inches. Judgment should be used, of course, about dropping an occasional extra stitch in order to keep it flat. When the top measures eleven inches, crochet three perfectly plain rows all around.

Then decrease by skipping one stitch every twentieth, every fifteenth, tenth, etc. Keep on decreasing until the hole is small enough to fit the head.

Make three rows plain for the band.

The stitch is simply the plain crochet stitch, known to everyone who has even the slightest knowledge of crocheting.

Electric Lights in Theaters.

It is believed that the first electric light installed in an American theater was a Jablochkoff candle, used as a focusing lamp in the old California theater, in Bish street, San Francisco, in 1878. The managers of the theater at that time were Messrs. Barton Hill and Frank Lawler. The play was "Antony and Cleopatra," Rose Eytinge and Cyril Searle taking the leading parts. A. H. Reece was the engineer in charge of the work. Seventeen years have worked a complete revolution in theatrical lighting, and today there is not a theater in the United States which could dispense with the electric light.

The Pope's Book Not In It.

Mgr. Merry del Val, the Pope's private chamberlain, denies that a book of Pope Leo's is in the Index Expurgatorius. The author of the book on the sanctification of the blood of the Virgin was not Cardinal Pecci, but a canon of the cathedral of Perugia when the Pope was Archbishop, who wrote the book while insane. It was published without authority, and the Archbishop did his best to suppress it even before it was put in the Index aspect of some chief European provinces of the Ottoman dominion. These are likely to be involved, not less seriously than those of Asia Minor, or Anatolia, with Armenian and Syria, in the general confusion and strife of different races and religious communities, and the armed intervention of foreign powers, by which the very existence of the Sultan's empire is menaced with disruption. Macedonia especially, with its population divided between Turks, Greeks and Bulgarians, occupying a large territory which intervenes between Roumelia, the proper European Turkey, and the Mussulman province of Albania, has for many years past been in a very disturbed condition. To the north of it lies the almost independent principality of Bulgaria; to the south, in Thessaly, it is approached by the kingdom of Greece.

The military forces of Bulgaria, if its ruler were enabled, by more favorable political relations with either of the great powers, Russia or Austria, to undertake such an enterprise, might possibly be sufficient to conquer a portion of Macedonia, with the facilities afforded by the geographical situation.

The whole internal policy of this unhappy empire, in default of equitable and efficient domestic rule, is to support itself, with its official agents, of fiscal extortion, upon the mutual animosities of its diverse races of subjects, who are allowed to outrage, plunder and massacre each other, so long

A Fagin in Real Life.

Theodore Grant, a New York Fagin, was convicted of teaching boys to steal. He had been arrested with three of his pupils, Morris Jonkofsky, aged 9; Louis Silverbloom, 8; and Samuel Hallowitz, 13. "He stole," little Jonkofsky told Justice Hayes, "and he taught us kids to steal. We would take things out of each other's pockets. Mostly we were 'shades' and 'workers.' He did most of the 'picks' himself. I used to go up in front of a woman and knock something out of her hand, and stand so she couldn't pick it up easily. Then Grant would pick her pocket from behind. When there was a crowd we would 'shade' Grant. He did the work while we crawled around so people couldn't see."

"What have you to say for yourself?" asked the justice.

"When I was pulled by de cops dis kid had just touched a pocket, but I wasn't in de job," said Grant.

"This is Fagin and Oliver Twist in real life," said the justice. "The sentence of the court is that you be confined in the penitentiary for one year on each of the three complaints against you."

BEAUTIES OF REMINISCENCE.

The Most Natural Years of Our Lives Are Those of Childhood.

In the Ladies' Home Journal Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, D. D., in an admirable article on "The Memories of Our Childhood Homes," writes that, "Reminiscence makes us little even when we are old, and helps to keep us pure and fresh with the springtime that was in us a score or a generation of years ago. A boy can never become utterly bad so long as there remains with him a memory of his father and mother in the act and attitude of prayer. The time may come with the hardening and chilling process of the years when he will himself cease to pray, but from the canvas long ago painted there will never fade the figures of those, now asleep, whose heads were seen day by day bent in humble, confiding worship, and who in inspired priestliness laid the morning sacrifice upon the family altar; and the memory of father's and mother's prayer helps, at any rate, to keep alive in us our own possibilities of prayer.

"The most natural years of our lives we live while we are children, and there is always rest and purification in getting back into touch with them. When the burdens press a little heavily, and the future is thick with uncertainties, the wish will sometimes shape itself that we might be back again among our free, fresh, childish days. We do not understand it very well, but there is something gone that we would dearly love to have back. Those may seem to have been rather unproductive afternoons that we used to spend up in the garret, listening, in the pauses of our merrymaking, to the rain pattering on the roof, and we so dry and sheltered underneath, but our life means more even to-day because of them and because of our memory of them."

Edna Lyall's "Dream Children."

The famous English authoress, Edna Lyall, writing of her life and early literary influences and work in Ladies' Home Journal, says: "From the early days of my authorship up to the present time there has always been a story on hand, and writing has become so much a part of my life that it is difficult quite to understand what life without a vocation would be like, or how people exist without 'dream children.' They cost one much suffering, and bring many cares and anxieties; they are not what we could wish, and we are conscious of their faults. Still they are our 'dream children,' and when they cheer the dull or interest the overworked there comes a glad sense that it has all been worth while, and we are thankful that the gift was given us."

NOTES ON EDUCATION.

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO PUPIL AND TEACHER.

Many Disadvantages with Which the Teacher in the Country Has to Contend—What to Do with the School Books—Educational Notes.

The Country Teacher.

What is being done for that teacher out in the country? Not enough. Perhaps by enumerating some of the disadvantages with which she must contend we can better suggest some plans which might make her lot more pleasant and her work more efficient.

The country teacher is obliged to scatter her forces. No specializing here. She must needs understand the human nature of pupils from 5 to 20 years of age. She teaches all the common branches and to all grades from the beginning, primary to the advanced grammar grade. The recitation period must be short, that all classes may be heard. She is limited in time, so that supervision of work at the seats is practically impossible. And what an important part of one's education is the aid one receives while preparing a lesson! How much more could our pupils do if they could only have more assistance in how to study!

If some of the pupils are not supplied with pencils, slates, or necessary books, the teacher must change her plans for a few days until the parents go to town. John and Mary tell pa the teacher said so and so is needed. Pa says he is going to town in a few days and he will get these things. But when pa does go to town he is so much more interested in the price of hogs or potatoes, or what not, than he is in the progress of the school, that he forgets all about the supplies the children need, and the teacher must needs wait another fortnight for John and Mary to get their books. Some hold that the teacher should furnish pencils and paper for the children of indifferent parents, but she can't afford it until she is paid more; it isn't her business to furnish these things, anyway.

Cold weather draws on apace; the stovepipe needs cleaning, a window light is broken, and there is no wood in the "yard." What is to be done? Send a note to the director? He is busy with his farm work. The wind whistles through the broken window, the stove would smoke if a fire were built; and so the pupils and teacher shiver until the director gets time to fix things. What's his hurry? He gets nothing for his services—the law forbids it. What a law!

The teacher wants to attend a teachers' meeting. She has no way to go. The people with whom she boards think time too valuable to spend in taking her. It is too far to walk; and the poor girl is disappointed in her desire to be progressive.

What about the country teacher's boarding place? Usually not more than one family in the district will take boarders. It is often a place very undesirable in many respects. The teacher must study by the family table in the room where "games" and "racket" and poor light and talks on "household economy" and barnyardology are common. The teacher cannot retire to her room and study; there is no stove there. The price she can afford to pay for board will not supply such luxuries. She tries to prepare her lessons for the next day; wishes she might study in other lines—do some Reading Circle work—but alas! her environment is against her.

She counts up her net earnings at the close of the term, and finds that more schooling and more books are out of the question—the wages are so low that she has not enough money remaining to pay for these things. She struggles on for two or three terms, and concludes that teaching school is not just the thing she thought it was. Another takes her place, and so the changes are "rung out," and—

"Thus the multitudes go like the flower and the weed,
And wither away to let others succeed;
Thus the multitudes come, even those we behold,
To repeat every tale that has ever been told."

Those who have never attended a country school may be inclined to doubt some of these statements; but those of us who make it a business to inspect these country schools see conditions as they really exist, and whereof we speak we know. One matter I shall never forget. In one school I took down the stovepipe and cleaned it, and built a fire for the pupils. There is rarely a case similar to this, for directors do much more than the patrons give them credit for, as a rule. They need more glory, less blame, and some pay for what they do.

These conditions exist. What is being done to better them? Not much, except what the county superintendents do by way of arousing interest during their visits to schools and in educational meetings they hold.

What can be done to remove the difficulties? Perhaps the following would help some:

Pay teachers for time spent in educational meetings.

Have free text-books for all public schools.

Raise the standard for certificates so that boards will be justified in paying teachers wages sufficient to enable them to purchase needed books, journals, attend a term of school now and them, and pay enough for board and room to secure needed facilities for comfort and advancement while teaching.

Reduce the supply, reduce the supply, reduce the supply! It means better teachers and better wages. It is the quickest way to secure better teachers and the surest way to better wages.

Provide each county with an assistant superintendent, thus enabling the county superintendent to devote nearly his whole time to school inspection and educational meetings.

Provide the township system of school districts and no other except for towns and cities, and pay school officers for time necessarily spent in the performance of school work.

Something must be done for "That teacher out in the country." Educational papers can aid her by devoting more space to matter she can use in her school.

The State Teachers' Association can assist her by devoting more time to the consideration of the environment of the country school and country school teacher, and less time to High school courses and State normal schools. That Normal idea is made too prominent. There is creeping in too much machinery, with too little adjustable gearing to suit the circumstances of every school.

The Normal Institute can help her by having for instructors those who have come in actual contact with the country school.

All hail the day when the country teacher can make as rapid progress with her school and in self-inprovemen' as can her city sister!

That teacher out in the country needs the earnest co-operation of educational leaders—practical leaders; we have too many theorists.

Who will lend a hand?—Supt. F. H. Bloodgood.

What to Do with School Books.

Keep all your school books if you possibly can. Never sell them or dispose of them in any way unless it is very plainly your duty to somebody else to do so. For instance, in a family an older sister may let the younger children have her books when she is done with them. This may save her parents the expense of buying new ones and having the same books duplicated in the household collection. Or there may be in your acquaintance a girl too poor to buy books, who will be very glad and thankful to have yours as a gift. In this case it will be your pleasure, I am sure, to make this friend happy and to relieve her of anxiety, and help her in procuring her education. But as a rule I would advise you to keep your books for yourself. Even when you have finished studying in a particular book you may want to refer to it, and after your school days are over your books will be reminders of the delightful times you had when you used them. School books are valuable because they are written in a clear, plain, straightforward style which it is quite easy to comprehend. They do not wander away from the point, and they give a great deal of information packed up in a small compass. A good school book on any subject is a real treasure.

All books should be treated with respect. No nice person leaves books lying around heedlessly, with the bindings opened widely so that they become loosened, and the pages curling up at the corners. If a girl is neat about her room and her dress, she will surely be so in the care of her books. Never let books gather dust. They are as ornamental as pictures or flowers or vases, and a house in which there are a number of books is already half furnished.

If by any chance books have been used by a patient in illness, such as scarlet fever or any other contagious disease, they must immediately be burned up. This is the only safe way. A child recovering from such an attack may ask for his or her books to play with. Let the books be given, if the mother is willing, but they must be destroyed afterwards. Even if they have remained on shelves in the room and the patient has not so much as touched them, they must be burned, for books have a way of preserving germs of disease, and must be used only by people who are not ill with anything infectious or who are perfectly well.

Do I think books should be covered? To save the bindings, you mean? It depends on how very clean and dainty are the hands which hold them. Smooth, white paper makes a good covering, and is easily renewed, and most publishers in these days provide attractive covers for the beautiful books they sell.—Harper's Round Table.

To Educate One's Self.

A young man in a letter to the editor of the Ladies' Home Journal inquires the best systematic course of reading, as a substitute for an academic education, with the view of equipping himself for literary pursuits; and also which books would be the most beneficial to read with the idea of preparing himself to enter the field of fiction. To the query regarding a substitute for a college education Edward W. Bok replies in the January Journal: "As a substitute for a college education, where it is a matter of choice, I am not so sure, since so much depends upon the man. To one man a good course of reading, wisely chosen and followed, would be infinitely more helpful than a college education, while in the case of another man just the reverse would be true. Some men absorb information more readily and retain it better under self-training, while others need the compulsory force of teaching to impress things upon the mind. But where a college education is, for some reason, not accessible, and a substitute must be found, then a course of reading is unquestionably good—none better, in fact."

With respect to the inquiry concerning a preparation to enter the field of fiction, Mr. Bok considers it difficult to answer, "since so much depends upon the particular 'field of historical fiction' desired. However, the best reply, perhaps, is that which suggests the reading of a number of the best novels dealing with successive periods of English history from Saxon times to the early part of the present century. I give a list (not reproduced in this extract) which includes typical books by the various masters of English historical fiction, but it might be doubled in length several times over without exhausting the available books of value in this one field. A like selection may be made from the novels treating of different historical periods severally of France, Germany, Spain, Italy and other countries of Europe and America. The field is almost limitless, but I have begun with the history of England, as containing the direct sources of American history which need to be grasped before one can fairly understand the beginnings and progress of our own national life."

FERDINAND AUGUST BEBEL.

Distinguished German Who Fiercely Attacked Emperor William.

Ferdinand August Bebel, whose fierce attack in the German Parliament upon Emperor William II. on the occasion of the debate relating to the curtailment of the right of free assemblage has caused so much commotion in Germany, shares the leadership of the Socialist-Democratic party in that country with Herr Liebknecht. Bebel is in every sense a self-made man. He was born Feb. 22, 1840, in Cologne, and received his early education in a village school near that city. Later on he attended a grammar school in Wetzlar, and in 1860 he removed to Leipsic, where he established his own business, that of wood-turner and carver, in 1864. Two years prior to that date he had joined in the workingmen's movement in Germany, and soon became one of the most aggressive leaders in that cause. From 1865 to 1890, when he removed to Berlin, Bebel was president of the Workingmen's Educational Club in Leipsic and member of the permanent Executive Committee of the German Workingmen's Association. In 1867 he became identified with the editorial management of the Volkstaat, a socialistic paper in Leipsic, and continued this connection until he became one of the managers of the Vorwaerts, the leading German socialistic daily published in Berlin. He was elected to the North German Parliament in 1867 and to the German Parliament in 1871. In the election of June, 1893, he was even elected in two districts, choosing the mandate from the Strasburg district. From the beginning of Bebel's Parliamentary career dates his uncompromising attitude against all monarchical institutions. Bebel is at present treasurer of the Socialistic party in Germany, to which office he was elected in 1892. During the reorganization of the party, in 1890, Bebel advocated parliamentarianism as the chief means of agitation, but in this he was opposed by the extremists of the party. He served as a delegate to the international socialist congresses in Paris, 1889; Brussels, 1891; Zurich, 1893, and Breslau during the present year. On the latter occasion he made his famous speech, in which he said that socialism would crush imperialism, for which he has just been sentenced to six months' imprisonment.

TO PREVENT EXPLOSIONS.

Something New for Effective Use in Blast Furnaces.

To prevent damage to blast furnaces by the explosions that frequently occur in the top of the stack, from the ignition of accumulated gases, the improved bell represented in the accompanying illustration has been devised and patented.

The bell, seated in the hopper, has a perpendicular cylindrical extension at the top of which is an outwardly opening pivoted door valve, which is adapted to be opened automatically by the force of accumulated gases or explosions.

The bell extends approximately half its length above the top of the hopper when the bell is in closed position, and when the bell is in the lowermost position its upper cylindrical portion projects above the upper surface of the hopper, and all danger of the valve's being clogged or affected by the contents of the hopper is avoided, the valve being thus free to operate at all times.

RIPANS TABULES

Mr. L. A. Rocher is a farmer residing about three miles out of Colon, N. C. His home is somewhat in the backwoods. In an interview with Mr. S. T. Godfrey, a correspondent of the Telegram and Sunday Times, Mr. Rocher, on the 17th of June, 1895, said: "I am 61 years old, and until I was nigh unto 50 years old I was always well and peart, then for a long while, and until last February, I suffered with indigestion and could not eat anything hardly at all. My daughter, who lives in the city, sent me some of Ripans Tabules, told me how to take them, and they have completely cured me. My wife is now troubled with the same complaint, and has written daughter to send some more of Mr. Ripans medicine. I want you to tell everybody how I got cured, for it is a blessing to humanity.

ALL AT SEA

But Finally Rescued from Danger, Result of Taking a Friend's Advice.

There are thousands of women to-day entirely at sea, so to speak, as far as their ailments are concerned.

They are overtaken by some female complaint, and send for their doctor in all haste. He usually tries this and that without success; he is all at sea, and his poor patient is with him.

Suddenly a lady friend tells the sufferer to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because it has cured her.

The following letter shows the result of that trial, and is a sample of thousands of similar cases happening daily.

"I had been very sick for a long time; doctored with many prominent physicians. They pronounced my case dyspepsia, and said there was a tendency to cancer of the womb. There was a sense of fulness and weight in stomach after meals, loss of appetite, and offensive belching of wind, dizziness, 'all gone' feeling in pit of the stomach, headache, heartburn, palpitation at times, urine high colored. A lack of interest in all things.

"The doctor's medicines gave me but little relief. I was almost in despair, when a friend advised your Compound. I took it, and am now perfectly well. I can recommend it to all women. A number of my friends and neighbors have taken it on my recommendation, and have always found relief." — MRS. JAMES CRANKSHAW, Frankford, Pa.

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, OF ROXBURY, MASS., Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston. Send postal card for book.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the right quantity is taken.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it. Read the label.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bed time. Sold by all Druggists.

MRS. JOHN GORDON.

One of the Most Brilliant of the New Generation of English Women.

Among the most brilliant of the new generation of women in England who are winning fame as scientists and in other professions formerly regarded as open only to men, is Mrs. John Gordon. Before her recent marriage to the well-known Scotch physician Mrs. Gordon was known as Mana M. Ogilvie, and had won fame more than national as one of the foremost of British paleontologists. While this fame may have been partly due to the incongruity of association between the beautiful woman student and the dead relics of the past to which she devoted her name, there can be no question that her recognition as an authority in this branch of science would be justly due on the ground of merit alone. Her books on paleontology are known to students everywhere, and have won her the degree of doctor of science from the University of London, a very unusual honor to be bestowed upon a woman. Even while yet a student Mrs. Gordon gave promise of the brilliant future in store, capturing the gold medals and several scholarships at the Ladies' College of Edinburgh, and also at Heriot College in the same city. Her native Scotch town not providing sufficient opportunity for study, she went to London, and, after passing the preliminary South Kensington examinations, entered the scientific department of the London University. The most successful victory her industry won at the university was the gold medal offered for the best examination in zoology and comparative anatomy. During recent years Mrs. Gordon has devoted her time chiefly to the study of paleontology, conducting original research at Munich University and doing field work in the Alpine regions. It was there she met Mr. John Gordon, whom she recently married. Mrs. Gordon will not abandon her scientific pursuits.

Intelligence of the Beetle.

Last week I came home one night, and by accident opened the pantry. I was surprised at finding at least a hundred big beetles scampering across the floor to escape into their lair. I saw that they all disappeared down a circular hole in one corner of the closet. Next night I sallied forth on a tour of extermination. I prepared a wooden plug to stop up the hole and a flat cudgel with which to annihilate the critters. I approached the pantry with a lighted candle, opened the door suddenly, and before the roaches fully realized my presence I had their escape completely blocked. It was a sight worth seeing. Some of them were in the corner playing "Copenhagen." Some were in the center of the pantry playing "ring around rosy." When they saw the light they suddenly interrupted their sports and made a bee line for home. Astonishment was written on every lineament of their black bodies when they saw their escape cut off. I set the candle on the floor and belabored them right and left with my weapon. Soon I had the floor strewn with corpses. All at once my light went out. A venerable looking, patriarchal sort of cockroach, realizing that the salvation of his family and relatives lay in darkness, had climbed up the candle and thrown himself across the flame. Like Arnold Winkelried, he died in a trice, but before I could strike a match the last of the still living bugs had found some secret means of exit and had disappeared. That's what I call intelligence. I have that hero's body embalmed in my collection, and since that adventure I have the greatest respect for roaches. When I want to exterminate them now I treat them royally to 10 cents' worth of poison.—Houston Post.

The Devil's Dozen.

In all the civilized countries of the world thirteen is referred to as being somebody's "dozen." In America, Australia, Great Britain (present day) and several other lands that number is said to be a "baker's dozen." In Italy it is referred to as the "cobbler's dozen," there being a tradition that there was formerly a law which compelled cobblers to put twelve tacks or nails around the edge of a boot heel. Finally, when nails became cheap, a center nail was driven for "luck." That nail was, of course, the thirteenth, and in order to break the spell of that unlucky number, the number in the heel was never spoken of as being more than an even dozen. In old England thirteen was called "the devil's dozen," but exactly why is not known.

Settled a Point.

The question as to whether the United States has exclusive jurisdiction over a soldiers' home, which was raised in an assault case at Milwaukee some three weeks ago, has been decided by a United States Judge, who holds that the homes come under State and not Federal laws, as the lands have never formally been accepted by the United States. The case was of particular interest, as, if the jurisdiction had been found to belong to the Federal government, the inmates of the home would have been deprived of their votes.—Springfield Republican.

Profit in the Suez Canal.

The Suez Canal represents at present a clear profit income of over £1,600,000 a year, and this, too, means a saving to the commerce between east and west of over £2,000,000 a year. Its political and military value is somewhat problematical, since the sinking of a single ship or dredger would render it impassable.

RESULTS OF MALARIAL AND TYPHOID FEVERS.

A Case Cited in Three Oaks, Mich., that Will Interest Delicate Women.

The Effects of the Fever Were Felt in the Weakest Spots.

A WARNING TO MOTHERS.

From the Press, Three Oaks, Mich.

Out at Three Oaks, Mich., lives Mrs. J. S. Flowers, from whom we publish part of a most interesting letter. The first part of the letter was taken up with a description of her sufferings as a result of malarial and typhoid fevers. These consisted of rheumatism, nervous prostration, boils, severe pains in head and back, etc., etc. The feature of her letter which will be of the most interest, however, follows, and it will interest many women, and particularly mothers of young daughters:

"I had also been a sufferer for sixteen years with painful menstruation. Every time I would have to lie down most of the time, as it was impossible for me to stand. At last, as a result of this remedy (Pink Pills), they nearly disappeared. Every time they should come I would cramp and would have to use hot applications, and would take hot slings, teas and every known remedy, but of no avail. After using Pink Pills two months they came on without any pain whatever. It had been two years since there had been any color. The doctors said it might be the turn of life, but as I was too young, only thirty-three, he thought it strange if it was. Now I am just as anyone should be at those times.

"Another trouble I had was a weak stomach from a child. Every little while I would have bad vomiting spells, consequently the doctors found me a very hard patient to treat. My physician said he had spent more time in studying my case than that of any patient he ever had. Several physicians advised me to use an electric battery. We got one and I used it for some time before I commenced using the pills, and continued it for awhile after I began using them, but I found out I could get along as well without it and just depended on the pills.

"When I commenced using them I was so discouraged that I had given up the thought of ever being any better, as after every attack I was so much weaker and more helpless. It seems almost a miracle to me that after trying so many remedies that your medicine should have helped me so much. I can now walk quite a distance without getting very tired, and the bunch on my back is much smaller than it was.

"I can furnish plenty of proof that these statements are all true from friends who have seen me suffer and know just how helpless I was when I commenced using your medicine. I have used in all thirty-two boxes. I am perfectly willing to tell what has helped me and have recommended your pills to several persons who are now using them. I do not believe I would have been alive now had it not been for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and am very thankful that there is such a medicine, for they have helped me when everything else failed."

Respectfully,
MRS. J. S. FLOWERS.

Sworn and subscribed to before me this 19th day of October, A. D. 1895.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood, and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose bulk) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

A Smoker's Stratagem.

The editor of the Melbourne Spectator, the Rev. Lorimer Fison, is a Wesleyan with a backbone and a considerable amount of humor. He edits the paper with his coat and boots off and a great pipe in his mouth. He relates that just before his ordination he was sent for by the Board of Examiners.

"Mr. Fison," said one of the board, "your papers are excellent, but there is one thing we object to:"

Fison asked what it was.

"You are addicted to the evil habit of smoking."

Fison explained that he saw no evil in it, but, taking a large plug from his pocket, said: "In deference to your opinion, gentleman, I promise you this: as soon as I have smoked the plug I hold in my hand I will cease smoking forever."

They were satisfied, and he was ordained the next day.

But, as he refills the big pipe, he chuckles and tells you: "I have kept my word—I've got that very plug yet."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

Gen. Scott's Foresight.

A biography of Gen. Scott, written by Gen. Marcus J. Wright, is the latest addition to the "Great Commanders" series. It contains an anecdote by Gen. Charles P. Stone, who was on Scott's staff. Soon after the outbreak of the war in 1861 Secretaries Seward, Chase, and Cameron called upon Scott and found him at dinner. They told him they had come to get his judgment of the prospect. It was immediately after Lincoln's first call for troops. The General was the head of the army, but getting too old to hold that responsible position in that trying time. He invited them to sit down at the table. Gen. Wright says: "He went on to explain his idea of how the war would progress from year to year. While he was talking Mr. Seward seemed to be somewhat impatient and put in several little interruptions, but finally subsided and allowed Gen. Scott to proceed. The General gave an outline of a war probably lasting from three and one-half to four years, but resulting in favor of the Union. On the General's announcement of his opinion that the Union would triumph Mr. Seward, rubbing his hands, inquired: 'Well, General, then the troubles of the Federal Government will be at an end.' To which Gen. Scott replied: 'No, gentlemen, for a long time thereafter it will require the exercise of the full powers of the Federal Government to restrain the fury of the non-combatants.'"

Polite Japanese Boys and Girls.

"In Japan I visited several schools," says a writer in the Cincinnati Tribune, "and I must admit I never saw such a nice lot of children. Their politeness is wonderful and gains for them the admiration of all the strangers who visit them. As soon as I entered the school the little boys and girls stood up and inclined their heads Japanese fashion to salute me. In answer to various questions they replied without bashfulness, but with an air showing how they appreciated the honor of being visited.

In Olden Times

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action; but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

The Sorrow of China.

The Yellow River is styled the "Sorrow of China." During the last century it has changed its course twenty-two miles, and now flows into the sea through a mouth 300 miles distant from that of 100 years ago. It is estimated that its floods in the present century have cost China 11,000,000 of lives.

Frost, Frolic, and Business.

The wind over frozen ponds and lakes, over snow fields of plains and open country, is heavily charged with frost and fine particles of frozen matter. It is the most penetrating way for chill to set in. Sudden warmth, sudden chill, and severe colds. Girls and boys skating, driving for pleasure or business, and men at work afield know the difference in temperature. Yet the youngsters skate away and with mouth open laughing take in a dose of sore throat. Drivers and workmen throw aside wraps and all know the next day from soreness and stiffness what sudden chill means. Now the best thing to do when housed is to rub well at once with St. Jacobs Oil. If you do, you will not have sore throat; or if you are stiff and sore, it will cure by warming the surface to throw out the chill.

One of the hardest lessons to learn is that we are made out of the same kind of clay as the people we don't like.

Lung complaints, Bronchitis, Asthma, etc., are speedily relieved and if taken in time, permanently cured by Dr. D. Jayne's Expectorant. You will find in it also a certain remedy for Coughs and Colds.

Look Out.

Several of our exchanges are publishing the advertisement of Drs. Kennedy & Kergan, of Detroit and we would like to put them on their guard. We did the same about two years ago, and they paid the first half of the bill all right but we have never been able so far to get the balance. Recently, they wanted us to advertise again for them. We replied that they must first pay the old score. This has sealed their mouths completely as since then we have not been able to get them to cheep. We advise our brethren of the press to look out for them They could pay, no doubt, if they wanted too, as they have a fine office up in the heart of the city. But if they don't care any better than they pay the printer, we wouldn't give much for their treatment,

Kaffir Corn.

It will be remembered that at the time of the Waterloo fair last fall, the COURIER spoke of the Kaffir corn and Alfalfa on exhibition there by J. E. Thomson, of Smithfield. Now we notice that papers all over the country are speaking of the new grain. It has been introduced into the Northwest, and more particularly into Dakota, which is so far north that our own "Indiana corn" or "maize" does not make a good crop. But the Kaffir corn will grow in a short season, and the grain can be used for bread, while the stalks produce an extra big yield of fodder. It is not a real corn, but something between corn and millet, and seems to partake of some of the qualities of both these. Another point that strongly recommends it to the Dakota people, is its ability to stand the drouths that prevail up that way nearly every year. It is likely that this quality will recommend it to other sections of the country where drouths often come. It appears that its roots are strong and go deep into the ground, thus enabling it to get moisture, when shallow growing plants would die We presume it will pay people here to look into this matter. No doubt Mr. Thomson could give them all needed information

Auburn's Lecturer.

In the person of Hon Cal Husselman, Who is Now attending Farmers' Institutes.

Hon. Cal Husselman is this week lecturing at Farmers' Institutes. As noted in the DAILY he was billed for Lagrange on Moday and Tuesday, Albion on Wednesday and Thursday and Warsaw Friday and Saturday. As a lecturer Mr. Husselman has given good satisfaction wherever he goes. The Lagrange Register, in the writeup of the Institute at that place speaks very highly of him and his lectures, a part of which we clip:

"Mr. H. is a jolly German farmer and in all his work by his unlimited supply of humor, kept his audience interested; as a speaker he is decidedly practical. He said tiling had become a necessity and the farmer of to day who neglected it was behind the procession Deep tiling is the best, the ground will become looser and absorb surface water sooner, and in times of drouth there will be a greater reservoir of moisture for plant life to draw from.

Land well drained can be fitted sooner in the spring for the summer crops—crops will ripen sooner and frost will come later than if there was much surface moisture.

He then explained how to construct a tile drain and further illustrated the benefits derived from tiling by a corn crop of his own on underdrained land which yielded a good crop with only one rain, when other fields in the vicinity were almost a failure.

The "Big 4" combination on the farm was also discussed by Mr. Husselman. He urged system in everything, and advised for a speciality some thing you had a taste for. The Combination as outlined by him was 1st Raise clover, because it is a profitable crop and one of the best fertilizers: 2nd. Raise corn on the the clover sod; 3rd. Raise cows from the hay, corn and fodder and 4 h Raise pigs from the grain and skimmed milk from the cows. To feed the cows and pigs, crush the grain, cut the fodder in small pieces with the cutting machine, mix the two, with water, let stand a few hours and feed. Mr H., gave also some good practical ideas on butter making, and urged good warm barns and stables for stock,

The following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved. That we heartily recommend Mr. Husselman to all Farmers Institutes as a pleasant energetic speaker, full of good practical suggestions and happy thoughts for his brother farmer and his family and we will ever greet him with right hand of fellowship and welcome him to our institues.

MARRIED

On Saturday evening, January 25, 1896, at the home of the bride's parents in Jackson township, Charles O. Tenney of Lake Odessa, Mich. was married to Ida Hough second daughter of John and Sarah Hough, Rev. F. L. Erlougher, pastor of the M E. church at Waterloo officiating. The bride has for two years past resided at Eaton Rapids, Mich. but returned on Saturday evening that the marriage night be solemnized at her home. The groom is an enterprising young business man with the firm of McKelvey & Townsend of Lake Odessa.

The bride is well known to a host of friends in the vicinity of her home as a lady of intelligence and refinement and all will extend congratulations and wishes for a life of prosperity and happiness.

Relieved at Once.

Not a few who read what Mr. Robert Rowls, of Hollands, Va, has to say below, will remember their own experience under like circumstances: "Last winter I had la grippe which left me in a low state of health. I tried numerous remedies, none of which did me any good, until I was induced to try a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The first bottle of it so far relieved me that I was enabled to attend to my work, and the second bottle effected a cure." For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle by F. E. Davenport the druggist.

Populist Meeting.

The people's party met in the band room at 10 a m. to-day and elected a county chairman secretary and treasurer. Quite a large number of the party were together and the matter of establishing a new paper was quite thoroughly discussed. The election of officers resulted as follows:

W. F. C. Francis.....Chairman
J. G. Lawhead.....Vice Chairman
J. Y. W. McClellan.....Secretary
D. T Smith.....Treasurer

HON. FREEMAN KELLEY, of Waterloo, was asked to give his views in regard to establishing a paper and in connection he made quite an interesting speech on the silver question.

Agriculture.

The Most Valuable Industry In The United States.

The latest full report of crops of all kinds in the United States was that for the year 1894, the year 1895 not yet being in shape for a correct statement. But the year 1894 showed:

	BUSHELS	VALUE
Wheat	460 267 416	$225 902 025
Corn	1 212 770 052	554 719 162
Oats	662 036 928	214 816 920
Rye	26 727 615	13 395 476
Barley	61 400 465	27 184 127
Buckwheat	12 668 200	7 040 238
Potatoes	170 787 338	91 526 787
Hay, tons	54 874 408	468 578 321
Tobacco lbs.	406 678 385	27 760 739
Sugar lbs.	700 000 000	5 553 388

The total cotton crop reached near ten million bales, and rice 122 million pounds but we find no value given to either. The rice crop is decreasing, owing partly to recent dry seasons.

This gives a total value of the agricultural products only in the above table of 1,636 million dollars, which the cotton and rice crop would no doubt increase to more than 2,000 millions of dollars, to say nothing of the value of the many smaller and less important crops. It will be seen that the value of our annual output of gold and silver, looks small beside these figures.

Points Often Overlooked.

Terrible Accident

The editor had a brief notice yesterday that a nephew, Arthur Davis had been killed at his home in Laporte county Wednesday. But as there was no definite statement we waited for details. The dailies had various reports, erroneous, as now appears, and we have not yet a full account. It appears, however, that he was using a sawing machine to cut firewood, when the balance wheel burst and struck him in such a way as to cause instant death. He was badly mutilated. He was a very worthy young farmer, and a son of the editor's sister, Mrs. Davis, whom our ladies will remember, as both she and her husband have visited us here. Mr. Davis, the father of the unfortunate man, was a member of the legislature during D. D. Moody's first and second terms there, and quite a prominent citizen. The deceased leaves a wife and three children.

Another Big Bridge,

Now comes Detroit with a plan to have a big bridge, one that will beat St. Louis It is to be put across the Detroit river and with its shore approaches will be two or three miles long and will cost when completed, about four millions. The Michigan Central road is largely interested in the project, but other roads, as well as prominent men of wealth over the country will take stock in it. So far the trains have been taken across each way on large ferry boats. The boats can take several cars at a time and when they reach the shore, these cars are run onto the tracks and then made up into trains already in waiting to go on with them on the through lines east or west. At Port Huron, about eighty miles north of Detroit and at the foot of Lake Huron there is a long tunnel under the St Clair river enabling the Grand Trunk to haul its trains back and forth between Port Sarnia on the Canada side and Port Huron on our side. But at Detroit, the river is pretty wide for a tunnel.

Surprise Party.

Mrs. F. S. Lane, formerly Miss Cora Spitler, being on the point of leaving here to establish their home in Lagonier, her friends planned a surprise for her last evening. During her absence at prayer meeting they gathered at her home here, the residence of Mr. and Mrs. L. Spitler, and on her return, she was astonished to find the house full of her friends. A very enjoyable evening was passed by all. There was also a bountiful lunch and then the presentation of a fine rocking chair, given by the friends as a testimonial of the esteem in which she is held. In the new home to which she goes, the memory of this evening with her friends will always be bright.

Can't Come Too Soon

The fact that all sorts of schemes are resorted to in politics is becoming disgusting. A Matter of Opinion.

A gentleman was greatly surprised and pleased the other day at the reply a lady gave to the question. "Do you plant Vick's Seeds?" Her answer was: "I always plant Vick's seeds in the front yard, but we get cheap seeds in the back yard, which I know is a mistake"

It pays to plant good seeds, and we advise our friends who are thinking of doing anything in this line to send 10 cents for Vick's Floral Guide for 1896. This amount may be deducted from the first order. James Vick's Sons, Rochester N. Y, are the pioneers in this line

Gold or Silver

There is a new plan that some one has invented to solve the gold reserve trouble. It is to let the government issue two kinds of bonds, one payable in gold and the other in silver. Then let those who prefer gold bonds, buy that kind, and those who prefer silver, buy the silver bonds. It looks like a sensible plan, and it would decide which metal has the most friends. We would like to see it tried.

Epilepsy 20 Years.

Cured by Dr. Miles' Nervine.

A few years ago, Mr. L. W. Gallaher, was an extensive, successful expert manufacturer of lumber products. Attacked with epilepsy, he was obliged to give up his business. The attacks came upon him most inopportunely. One time falling from a carriage, at another down stairs, and often in the street. Once he fell down a shaft in the mill, his injuries nearly proving fatal. Mr. Gallaher writes from Milwaukee, Feb. 16, '95.

"There are none more miserable than epileptics. For 20 years I suffered with epileptic fits, having as high as five in one night. I tried any number of physicians, paying to one alone, a fee of $500.00 and have done little for years but search for something to help me, and have taken all the leading remedies, but received no benefit. A year ago my son, Chas. S. Gallaher, druggist at 191 Reed St., Milwaukee, gave me Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, and I tried it with gratifying results. Have had but two fits since I began taking it. I am better now in every way than I have been in 20 years."

Truthful Hazzard

Passed Through on the East Bound B. & O. Train Last Night.

Saturday's Daily.

GEORGE HAZZARD.

Every little while the COURIER has to present the picture of the immortal George Washington Hazzard, to his many admirers in Auburn. Here he is again. It will surprise his old friends to know that by the glare of the electric lights, George's eyes looked lovingly overthe town of Auburn last evening. But such is the case. He actually looked over Auburn——but from a car window, and at a safe distance. C. E. Emanuel was over at Garrett yesterday on some legal business, and came home on the 7:35 evening train. After taking his seat in the car, a conversation took place between himself and another, in which Mr. Emanuel spoke of getting off at Auburn. At once a stranger a few seats forward arose, and asked Mr. Emanuel if he lived in Auburn, and was answered in the affirmative. The stranger said, "I once lived in Auburn myself." "I know you did, Mr. Hazzard," returned Mr. Emanuel, who had recognized the face and voice. A conversation followed. Hazzard said he had been a benefactor to Auburn, because he "had started the National bank for them, and when it was at the point of failing, had come to its rescue and saved it. But the ungrateful people had stoned him for it." Does anyone doubt but this speech was made by Hazzard? Such a brazen lie could come from no other source. He spoke of old times, asked about Dr Ford, and sent him his regards as well as to H. C. Shull, D. D. Moody, Nick Ensley and many others who were prominent in the legal fights that were had over him and his doings. The Auburn people who thought they detected a smell of sulphur from the southward at 7:35 last evening, now have an explanation of the mystery. He was on his way to New York and Washington.

THE DECISION

The decision of the supreme court setting aside both the latest apportionment laws, those of 1893 and 1895, will have the effect of putting us back where we were under the law of 1885, and where we should have been permitted to remain. That law, was perhaps as fair an apportionment of the state into legislative districts as any political party is likely to make. It is true it was made to favor the democrats as far as it favored any one, but in a general way it was fair. The people at large were satisfied, though a few politician in both parties, gave a kick, because it did not favor their particular interests. And when the democratic legislature tried to make a change in 1893, they did a very useless, and to some extent, a foolish thing. Lagrange and Steuben sent a state senator, under the law of 1885, and DeKalb and Noble sent another. But this did not suit some ambitious politician, and it was changed so that Noble and Whitley should send a senator and DeKalb was put into a side district with Allen. That meant Allen, the strong county, would always have the senator. It was a foolish piece of business, and we are glad it is knocked out. The republican legislature of 1895 put DeKalb and Steuben together, and Noble and Lagrange. That would secure them both senators, but it was a fraud on the two republican counties of Steuben and Lagrange, for while they each had to furnish the majority of republican votes, each one had a less number of delegates in a nominating convention, than did the other county, which could in that way get the nominee every time it desired. This gave great dissatisfaction to the two north counties, and all parties up there will be pleased to see the law killed We believe the legislature of next year, will be wise, if it allows the law of 1885 to remain, unless there is such a change of population in the "Gas Belt" as to justify a change in apportionment in that section.

A Horse-Diver

At one of the popular pleasure resorts in Seattle, Wash., they have a peculiar attraction. A horse leaps 30 feet down into the water of Lake Washington and then swims ashore. A high platform is constructed on the edge of the wharf which is just wide enough for the horse and two men. As the horse ascends the platform he seems to be in delight, and standing at the top, he tosses his head around to look with a proud air at the crowd. When he comes out of the water his master seizes him by the bridle and immediately starts him off on a run and keeps him moving until he is thoroughly dry. When the water is cold the horse often shows signs of weakening and needs a great deal of urging before he will make the leap. At such a time the thing impresses one as cruel sport. The cold water sometimes bewilders the horse and he does not seem to know in which direction to swim, and often finds himself under the dock.

Colonel Conn.

Of Elkhart, gave His Annual Wage Distribution yesterday.

The thirteenth annual reception tendered to Hon. C. G. Conn, occured at the Bucklen opera house at Elkhart last evening. The sum of $9,329 was distributed among 147 employes as their share of profits which had accrued at the band instrument factory during the past year. This makes nearly $60,000 which has been divided among the employes during the past five years. Mr. Conn was not present, being detained at Washington upon urgent business. The dividend was not so large this year as in former years, owing to the stringent monetary market. A fine musical program was rendered to over 1 200 people, and the affair was decided success.

From Dixie Land

NEW BERN, N C., Jan., 29, 1896.

DEAR EDITOR COURIER:

Thinking a few thoughts from this part of the Union might be of interest I will try and pen a few thoughts. New Bern is a town of about 8000 inhabitants of whom at least 3 5 are negroes. The town is one of the oldest in the state, being settled in 1709 and it shows its age in more ways than one, yet it has some modern improvements such as electric lights, stand pipe for water supply and an extra good fire department. The streets with few exceptions are narrow and those that are macadamized are done with oyster shells. The sidewalks excepting the main part of town are paved with elm roots. Some of the dwellings are of modern architecture, but the majority look as old as the hills. A number of reminders of the late unpleasantness are visible. A number of forts and breastworks are plainly visible, but the most striking is the National cemetery with its more than three thousand inhabitants of whom over a thousand are unknown. About seventy are from Indiana regiments. The cemetery is beautifully located on the west bank of the Neuse river, north of town.

Yours Truly,

S. B. MUTTINGER.

Randall Declines.

After the weekly had gone to press we received a communication from Mr. P. A. Randall that he would not be a candidate for congress. Up to the present writing we have not learned exactly what caused the change as he had been prominently mentioned in that connection for a month or two, and had been at several places in the district to sound the local leaders as to the feeling on the matter. As far as we have learned his candidacy was well received, for he is regarded as a safe, conservative and able man. We know personally that among the best democrats of Fort Wayne, and the district he has many staunch supporters. As soon as we learn fully, the reasons for his withdrawal, we shall lay them before our readers.

The withdrawal of Mr. Randall leaves the field, for the present at least, to James M. Robinson, who was a candidate against McNagny, at the Kendallville convention of four years ago. At that time there were but the two candidates, as Mr. O'Bourke, who was present with quite a number of delegates, suddenly announced that he would withdraw. Then of course the first ballot decided it, McNagny getting 56½ delegate votes and Robbinson 48½. Those who were present remember that the votes of the different counties were divided in such a way that all depended on how DeKalb voted. After a hot struggle in the DeKalb delegation, the vote was given, 11½ for McNagny and 4½ for Robinson, and the former got it.

Better'n Solomon.

An exchange says:

In Maysville, Kentucky, there is a Police Judge who beats 'em all, when it comes to unique and sensible originality. Four boys aged from 14 to 16, were brought before him last Monday for ringing door-bells, rapping on windows, and begging money on pretense of being orphans. It was their second offense, they having been let off the first time with a lecture. The Judge sent for their mothers; and when the ladies came, he informed them that each must flog her boy in open court, and to the satisfaction of the court, or the boy must take 30days in the workhouse. You see he was afraid the flogging might be "commuted," or insufficiently administered, if done at home, so he insistered upon its being executed in his presence. The mothers, after consultation, announced that they would "flog 'em." The Judge sent a policeman for stout wooden paddles, which, being placed in the hands of the mothers, the seance was ordered to proceed, and continue till time should be called. It did proceed, and the yelling of the culprits being heard blocks away, attracted a great crowd When they had been "paddled" till the Judge thought it about equal to thirty days in prison, he allowed them to go home with their mothers. It is quite probable that they will not again indulge in the mischief which got them into trouble.

A Pig Story

The season snake stories has not yet opened; the fish story crop will not be ready to harvest till next summer; the bear story belongs only to the far north or northwest. But northern Indiana must have something to tell, even if it tells the truth and we fall back on the "pig story." But unlike most of the "stories" alluded to our pig story is true, and it is as wonderful as the best of them. Here it is:

A week or two ago, Benjamin Gerig, a staid and reliable Amish farmer, living just over the Allen county line south of the Hopewell church had a nice lot of pigs. They were well cared for, and would average about ninety pounds in weight each. But one day he noticed the number was one short, but thought little of it, supposing that when night came the missing one would come up with the rest. But it did not come, and he could not find it, nor did it appear the next morning. Two or three days afterwards however the boys were working in the woods and in the course of their work, they noticed a good sized tree that had a hole in the trunk twelve or fourteen feet from the ground, but as the trunk was all whole the rest of the way and at the ground, they had a curiosity to see how much of a hollow it had. So they concluded they would make that tree into wood also. So they cut it down They found it was hollow clear to the ground. But what was their surprise, when the tree had fallen, to find the lost pig sticking head down, at the bottom of the stump. Of course it was dead, and one shoulder had been eaten away. Otherwise the body was whole. Now the question is, how did that 90 lb pig get up twelve feet and into the hollow tree? It is easy enough to see how, when once up the tree and in the hollow it could fall down to the bottom. The only possible solution of the question is that some strong animal, like a wild cat, killed the pig and carried it up to the hole and dragged it in and then made a meal off it. And it must have taken a strong animal to do it. Now let our readers put on their thinkers and solve this puzzle. That it is true a number of the neighbors who came to look at it all testify.

Dead-Law

Apportionment Law Of Indiana Declared Null And Void.

There has been a case before the Supreme Court of Indiana for some time to test the constitutionality of the late laws apportioning the state into legislative districts, Technically, the suit is of William L. Denney and others against the state of Indiana on the relation of Fred E. Basler. By the decision, the apportionment acts of 1895 and 1893 are declared unconstitutional. December 17, 1892, the court held the apportionment acts of 1891 and 1879 unconstitutional, so that the only act now in existence under which members of the general assembly can be elected this year is the law of 1885. The court points out that this act of 1885 has never been challenged, and that until some one does challenge it, or the legislature, in special or regular session, passes another, it stands as the apportionment law. Justice Howard wrote the opinion in chief.

This was an action brought by the appellee to enjoin the appellants, as clerk of the circuit court, sheriff and auditor of Sullivan county, from proceeding in their several official capacities to hold the election for 1896, for the senators and representatives in the general assembly, under or pursuant to the provisions of the apportionment act of 1895; and for a writ of mandate to compel said officers to proceed to hold said election for senators and representatives under the apportionment act of 1893.

The main point to be considered was, whether the legislature was empowered by the constitution to make an apportionment of the state into legislative districts at any other time, than that indicated or fixed by the terms of the constitution of the state. Those that opposed the apportionment laws of 1893 and 1895 contend that the legislature cannot make up these districts at any other time than once in six years, which is the session of the legislature next after the enumeration of voters is taken. In the present case, the enumeration of voters was taken last spring, the spring of 1895 and the next session of the legislature after that date should make the apportionment. This would mean that an apportionment could only be made by the legislature that meets a year from now, the legislature of 1897. They therefore contend that the legislature of 1895 which passed the apportionment law before enumeration of voters was taken, was in the wrong.

The other side, however, contend that the legislature possesses all political power, and in a general way has received from the constitution the right to enact such laws and exercise such functions from time to time, as in its judgment the general needs of the state may require. They claim that the term of six years is only a general direction, that such apportionment shall be made at least once every six years, but does not prohibit them from making such apportionment oftener, or at other times, if the legislature thinks best.

The court admits that if no restricting clause had been introduced into the constitution, its general provisions might give the legislature the power to pass such a law almost any time. But there was a restricting clause inserted, which is section 4 of article 4 of the constitution which says:

"The general assembly shall at the second session after the adoption of this constitution, and every six years thereafter, cause an enumeration to be made of all the male inhabitants over the age of twenty one years."

And section 5 of said article contains the following provision: "The number of senators and representatives shall, at the session next following each period of making such enumeration, be fixed by law, and apportioned among the several counties, according to the number of male inhabitants above twenty one years of age each."

So, the decision of the court is that both laws, that of 1893 and that of 1895, are null and void, and that the only legal apportionment in the state, is that made by the legislature in 1885. The apportionment law of 1891 had already been declared void in a case that came up earlier, and for a different reason.

Condensed Testimony.

Chas, B. Hood, Broker and Manufacturer's Agents, Columbus, Ohio, certifies that Dr. King's New Discovery has no equal as a Cough remedy. J. D. Brown, Prop. St. James Hotel, Ft. Wayne, Ind., testifies that he was cured of a Cough of two years standing, caused by La Grippe, by Dr. King's New Discovery. B. F. Merrill, Baldwinsville, Mass., says that he has used and recommended it and never knew it to fail and would rather have it than any doctor, because it cures. Mrs. Hemming, 222 E 25th St., Chicago, always keeps it at hand and has no fear of Croup, because it instantly relieves. Free Trial Bottles at Robbins and McCord's Drug Store. 3

TO THE SUFFERERS OF RHEUMATISM

After using Groff's Rheumatic Cure for some time in my practice I take great pleasure in saying that it is a most wonderful remedy for Rheumatism; in fact it is the only one I have found for the cure of this disease in all its various form. Dr. E. E. Tull, Chicago.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

DOINGS OF THE DAY.

SUMMARY OF THE NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Eventful Happenings in Every Known Hemisphere—Fires, Accidents, Crimes, Politics, Religion, Commerce and Crops, Sandwiched with Minor Affairs.

DEFEATED

With Two Hundred Killed Was a Spanish Column By Gomez.

Key West (Fla.) special: Advices received from Havana report a bloody engagement between Spaniards under Canella and Cubans under Gomez. The fight occurred between Cajuca and Quivican, on the Havana and Butanabo Railroad. Canella, with 1,200 Spaniards, was proceeding up the railroad when he was surrounded by the army of Gomez. The Spaniards formed a hollow square and the Cubans charged. The fighting was desperate, and the Spaniards soon fled. Gomez pursued, and Canella's entire force would have been wiped out but for the timely arrival of a fresh column of Spanish troops from Quivican. The government admits the fight, but refuses to give losses. Wounded Spanish soldiers taken to Havana say Canella's loss was over 200 in killed alone.

Spaniards in Havana are cursing the United States and insulting American residents since the action of the Senate committee looking toward the recognition of the insurgents. Americans, fearing for their safety, want the United States to send a warship to Havana.

Sprang at a Witness.

At Richmond, Ind., James Sipple was convicted of shooting Joseph Revelee last February. The jury imposed a sentence of six years' imprisonment and $50 fine. While the prisoner was being taken from the court-room he attempted to assault A. Z. Hoffman, a resident of Milton, who had aroused his ire by testifying against his character. Sipple's assault was prevented by Deputy Sheriff Richard Smith, who had him in charge, and he was handcuffed. The rage of the prisoner was great, and he threatened every resident of Milton who had testified against him.

Serious Collision.

Passenger train No. 42, the New York express on the Wabash, had a head end collision with a freight at Oakley, eight miles east of Decatur, Ill. The freight was backing into the siding when the collision occurred. Engineer Rose, of the passenger train, a resident of Springfield, was killed, and Conductor Wheeler, of the freight, is missing. No deaths among the passengers are reported, and none of them are supposed to have been injured.

Almost Incredible.

Miles Williams, a negro, was driving a pair of mules at Montgomery, Ala., when one of the animals balked. This angered the negro, who jumped from the wagon, tied one end of a rope securely to the balking mule's tongue and hitched the other end to the traces of the other mule and pulled the balking beast's tongue from its mouth, roots and all. Of course the animal died. Williams is in jail and will be severely dealt with.

Col. Coit Acquitted.

The jury in the Coit case at Circleville, Ohio, returned a verdict of not guilty, after being out three days. Col. A. B. Coit was indicted for manslaughter by the grand jury of Fayette County. He commanded the militia which fired into the mob at Washington C. H. in October, 1894. The verdict is of vital interest to the national guard of the State.

Electrocuted.

John Haacke, aged 22, an employe of the Electric Light Works, at Hamilton, Ohio, was electrocuted in front of Music Hall in that city. An arc light had gone out, and Haacke let down the globe to see what was the matter. He got hold of a live wire, and was instantly killed. He was unmarried.

Drowned in an Oil Tank.

Two men were drowned in an oil tank at Knoxville, Ohio. Chas. Edminston was on the tank skimming something out of the oil, when he was overcome by the fumes from the oil and fell in. James Neckley, an oilwell driller, tried to rescue Edminston and both were drowned.

Pierced by a Crowbar.

Charles Doyle, a miner of Newberg, Ind., was caught under a mass of falling slate and a heavy crowbar he held in his hands was forced into his body. Four ribs were broken and he will probably die.

Fell Dead in School.

Lillian Wilson, 16-year-old daughter of Isaac Wilson, fell dead in school at the Duncan school house south of Kokomo, Ind.

Masonic Temple Theater, Ft. Wayne, Indiana.

Feb. 27.—"1492."
Feb. 29.—"Fencing Master."

Held Prisoners in Cuba.

Mrs. James Dalton of Marion, Ohio, has received word that her two sons, Hugh and Will McConn, aged respectively 25 and 22 years, are held prisoners of war by the Spanish in Cuba. The young men have been fighting in behalf of the insurgents.

Business Failure.

The Union Shoe company of Chillicothe, Ohio, has assigned for the benefit of creditors. Hard times was the cause. Liabilities are $100,000, with assets at $50,000.

Prisoners Walk Out.

Harry Madden, Reus Lambert and John Hess broke jail at Greensburg, Ind. The jailer and Sheriff were at North Vernon, and left the prisoners in charge of a servant girl, who, after giving them their dinner, forgot to turn the combination lock on the main door. When she had gone the three prisoners named walked out, and have not yet been caught.

A Village Almost Destroyed.

The business portion of the village of Center, Ind., north of Anderson, was destroyed by fire, including the Panhandle railway station, postoffice, Odd Fellows hall, telephone exchange, the big general store of John H. Trees and two dwellings.

STATE OF TRADE.

Some Signs of Improvement in the Business World.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Trade Review says: Though business is still waiting, there are some signs of definite improvement. It is now believed the first payment for bonds will cause no further pressure of the money markets even as respects loans on collateral, although the difficulty of making commercial loans still checks operations. But large maturities at the end of January have been met more satisfactorily than expected, and merchants and bankers report signs of promise for a good spring trade. No increase appears as yet in the demand for some forms of iron and steel, in which good contracts have been made this week, and uncertainty as to congressional action still affects the industries and commerce, but the increase in inquiry and reports of dealers are deemed an assurance of a large trade coming, whenever the uncertainty is over. Signs of improvement in the iron and steel business are gratifying, even though they spring from combinations which raise the price of coke and allotted the output of lake iron ore.

THREE KILLED.

A Disastrous Explosion at Altoona.

A special from Altoona, Pa., says: A boiler in the Hollidaysburg Iron and Steel works exploded and wrecked the building. The boiler was blown through the roof 200 feet into midair and came crashing down through the roof in another portion of the works. The force of the explosion was felt in every part of the town. The dead are:

GEORGE EVANS, mason, crushed under the boiler.

CON EVANS, helper, skull burst open.

MERRIL TREESE, 15 years old, head ground off under a wheel.

Two tramps, who had been roasting potatoes at a furnace, were buried under the ruins and their bodies have not been recovered. It is believed Samuel Keppart, Robert McMurry and John Woomer will die from the effects of internal injuries. Twenty employes of the mill were badly scalded about the face and body and were also injured by the fall of timbers and machinery.

MAN-EATING INDIANS.

Terrible Fate of an Exploring Party in Mexico.

Hermosillo (Mex.) special: A terrible fate is believed to have befallen a party of five gold prospectors who left here several weeks ago for the interior of Tiburon Island and which is inhabited by the Seriés tribe of Indians. There were six members of the exploring party originally, but one of the men has arrived at a ranch here and reports that he and his companions came upon a village of Indians; that they were all taken captive and preparations were begun to butcher them, when he succeeded in making his escape. He belived all the other members of the party were killed and their flesh eaten by the Indians. He states that the Indians all wear valuable gold ornaments and that there were many evidences of the existence of rich mines on the island.

Major General Miles on Coast Defences.

Major General Nelson A. Miles, commanding the army, accompanied by Capt. F. Michler, of his staff, recently appeared before the Senate committee on coast defences. He stated that he had examined Senator Squire's bill and approved its provisions. It was absolutely necessary, he said that appropriations be made for the protection of the seacoast cities of the United States. The only places where provision had been made for any considerable defence were at New York, San Francisco, and Boston, and the defences at those places were entirely inadequate and insufficient. He recommended the immediate increase of the artillery by two regiments, or at least 2,000 men. The entire cost of coast defence fortifications for adequate protection of the country he estimated at about $80,000,000.

Both are Void.

Indianapolis special: The congressional apportionment act of 1895 was declared unconstitutional by the Indiana Supreme Court in a decision handed down recently. The act of 1893 was also declared void and the next election will be held under the old act of 1885, unless the Governor should in the meantime call a special session of the legislature for the purpose of passing a legal act. The Supreme Court holds that the provisions of the State constitution providing that an apportionment shall be made every six years, upon the basis of the sexennial enumeration, is mandatory. There was no dissenting opinion. The act of 1893 was passed by a Democratic legislature and the act of 1895 by a Republican legislature.

Panic at a Wedding.

One hundred and fifty guests were present at the home of Albert H. Baker, near Sandusky, Ohio, to attend the wedding of Mr. Baker's daughter. Just as the ceremony was about to begin the floor suddenly gave way, precipitating seventy-five people into the cellar, a distance of ten feet. Fortunately the lamp was extinguished but the candles set fire to the clothing of some women. A panic ensued. The people were piled four and five deep. It was some time before the fire was extinguished and the guests extricated from the cellar. Mrs. H. N. Norton was fatally injured, and William Arnold and William Stair were badly hurt. Many others received less serious injurious.

Engine Falls Between Wharf and Ferry Boat.

San Francisco special: At the Northern Pacific Coast Railway company's wharf, in Sausalito, while the engine and tender were being put on board the ferry, the apron connecting the ferry boat and slip gave way and the engine and tender plunged downward between the end of the boat and the wharf. Fireman Williams leaped from the tender and landed in the bay. He was badly cut by the timbers he encountered in his jump, but was rescued. Engineer Turner went down with his engine and was either mangled to death or drowned. His body has not yet been recovered.

A Family Cremated.

A log house occupied by two families named Page, near Marshall, Mich., was destroyed by fire, and Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Page and their two sons, one 3 years of age and the other 3 months old, were cremated. Harvey Page was awaked by the flames and aroused his brother Wilbur and the latter's wife, who slept in another part of the house. Wilbur and his wife escaped. Harvey tried to save his wife and children and perished with them. Not a trace of the bodies of the unfortunate victims, except a handful of ashes for each, were found when the ruins of the house were explored.

Insurrection in Formosa.

San Francisco special: The steamer Rio Janeiro has arrived from Hong Kong, and the Yokohama, Japan, mail says: In the northern districts of Formosa, where it was supposed order had been completely restored, a general insurrection has broken out. The Chinese are making a desperate effort to drive out the Japanese conquerors. The Japanese troops, which have just returned from subjugation of the island, will be returned to Formosa and a permanent garrison established.

Caught in a Folding Bed.

A combination folding bed and bookcase closed up the other night, at Fostoria, Ohio, imprisoning its occupants, Mrs. M. H. Bohreer, wife of the Traveling Passenger Agent of the Mobile and Ohio, and her mother, Mrs. D. Eshelman. By almost superhuman effort Mrs. Bohreer managed to kick the end out of the death trap and crawl out feet first, when she released her mother. Mrs. Bohreer sustained probably fatal injures, but Mrs. Eshelman was uninjured.

Walker Is Firm.

Indianapolis special: Commander-in-Chief Walker, of the G. A. R., who has returned from Chicago, where he attended a meeting of the Western Passenger Agents' association, said he thought the roads would eventually grant the concessions demanded by the G. A. R. He was informed the Great Western railroad would allow a thirty-day extension. The commander will call the committee of the council of administration at Indianapolis, February 7, and if the railroads have not made the concessions then the encampment would be taken away from St. Paul.

A Sad Accident.

At Pittsburg, Penn., Nora Steele, aged 2 years, while lying in her crib, kicked over a stand on which was a lighted carbon oil lamp. When the lamp struck the floor it exploded and threw burning oil about the room. The place immediately took fire. Before Mrs. Steele could rescue her children little Nora, was crowing over the excitement she had created, while 5-year-old sister Mary, was burned to death. Mrs. Steele, mother of the children, was fatally burned. Two other children were saved by being thrown from a window.

Double Killing.

A double killing occurred at Shofters Lake, Andrews County, Texas. Crick Atmore and Wills Mason quarreled over a section of school land both wanted, and came to blows, after which both went home, got Winchesters and went on a hunt for each other. They met on the bank of Shofters Lake, simultaneously fired, and both shots took effect. Atmore was shot in the head, dying instantly, and Mason was shot in the body, dying in less than an hour.

Toledo's Mafia.

Jaliam Zarick, one of Toledo's Italian colonists, appeared in Squire Parker's court recently, and asked for a peace warrant to restrain some of his compatriots from ending his life. According to Zarick Toledo has a flourishing lodge of the Mafia, who are anxious to stick stilettos and other disagreeable things into his person. The three men pointed out by Zarick were held.

Final Settlement of the Armenian Question.

St. Petersburg special: Notable arrangements point to a conclusion between Russia, Great Britian, France and Italy for a final settlement of the Armenian question. These include Russia's occupation and administration of Anatolia and the purchase of Cyrpus by Great Britian.

Fatally Burned.

Cincinnati special: Jacob Bruehl, a barber, his wife and 7-year-old boy were fatally burned at their residence, on Knowlton street, Cummingsville, from the effects of an explosion of a gasoline stove. The father received his injuries trying to save his sick child, after the bed had caught fire.

Cursed His God.

Raus Smith, died in the Lexington, Ky., Asylum recently. He was a large cultivator of watermelons, but some years ago his crop failed, and, it is alleged, that he went about cursing God Almighty. Since then his crops never amounted to anything, and he finally lost his mind.

A Relic of 1861.

John McConnell of Dunkirk, Ind., has a relic in his possession, it being a copy of the Christian Advocate, published at Cincinnati April 10, 1861. It was just prior to the firing on Fort Sumter, and the paper shows many evidences of the approaching crisis.

Harrison's Alleged Fee.

Gen. Harrison is said to have received a fee of $10,000 for the two hours speech he made in the United States Supreme Court last week, or $5,000 an hour. There are probably 10,000 words in his speech, which were worth at least $1 per word.

Can't Fight in Mexico.

City of Mexico special: Secretary of the Interior Cozlo has wired the State Governor of Chihuahua that no prize fights must be allowed in Jurez. Fifteen hundred troops will be sent there to prevent the fight.

Off for Cuba.

Cadiz special: Gen Weyler, the newly appointed captain general of Cuba, has sailed hence for Havana. He was accompanied by Generals Ahumada, Barges, Ochando, Bernal, Arolas and Melguizo.

Germany Preparing.

It is reported that Germany has ordered twelve torpedo destroyers from Thornycroft & Co., the shipbuilders. The new vessels are to have a speed of thirty knots an hour.

Banker Kills Himself.

Hon. George Barnard, cashier of the Fort Stanwix National bank, of Rome, N. Y., committed suicide, recently. The bank has been closed pending an investigation.

Drank Lamp Oil.

Mrs. J. W. Dawkins, becoming mentally weak from loss of sleep, committed suicide at Parkersburg, W. Va., by drinking lamp-oil and camphor.

ALIENS AS PAUPERS.

UNWORTHY IMMIGRANTS TO BE BARRED OUT.

If We Are to Preserve Our Institutions and Maintain the American Standard of Wages, This Must Be Done—Foreigners and Crime.

A Nation of Immigrants.

Washington correspondence:

THE regulation of immigration is a very grave matter that concerns the United States and in Congress at the present time several bills are pending upon the question of immigration. Perhaps one of the best posted men in Washington on the subject is Senator Lodge, chairman of the Immigration Committee, and he has introduced a bill in the Senate, the main feature of which is an educational test for immigrants.

The question of regulating and restricting immigration, said Mr. Lodge in a recent expression on the subject, is one of the gravest which now confront the country. We are certainly in no present danger of being overcrowded by desirable immigrants, but we are at this moment overcrowded with undesirable immigrants, and this latter condition is steadily growing worse. The immigration of people of those races which contributed to the settlement and development of the United States is declining in comparison with that of the races far removed in thought and speech and blood from the men who have made this country what it is. Moreover, all immigration from every quarter is showing a tendency toward deterioration, which is by no means gradual. The last census bulletin shows that the foreign born citizens, or those of foreign parentage, furnish more penitentiary convicts than are supplied by the entire native born population, which, of course, greatly outnumbers the population of foreign birth. In the immigration of late years we note also the appearance of secret societies dangerous to law and order and hostile to every theory of American institutions.

According to statistics in 1880 the foreign born element constituted one-seventh of this country's population and one-third of its paupers. The census of 1890 showed that people of foreign birth made up 30 per cent of the total white population. This one-third of the population furnished one-half of the criminals, two-thirds of the inmates of reformatories and two-thirds of the paupers in almshouses.

Later statistics show that in every 100 foreigners over 16 years of age who came to the United States between March and November, 1892, the illiterates were divided as follows: Italy, 66; Poland, 56; Hungary, 28; Russia, proper, 20; England, 10; Ireland, 8; Wales, 6; Germany, 2; Scandinavian countries and Denmark, less than 1. Of the 440,793 foreigners who came to this country in the year ended June 30, 1893, 57,897 over 16 years of age could not read, 59,582 could not write, and 61,038 could do neither. Senator Lodge pointed to these figures to show that if an educational test had been applied during that year, the large number of the least desirable foreigners would have been excluded from the country.

The more any thoughtful man examines the statistics relating to this question, he continued, the more he must be alarmed at what it shows. The disease, in my opinion, cannot be treated by gentle palliatives. It will require sharp remedies, and the longer a cure is postponed the more heroic the remedies will have to be. I believe we need intelligent and discriminating restriction. We must sift the chaff from the wheat. Immigrants should know how to read and write their own language before they are allowed to enter the United States. This is a fair test, based upon intelligence and not upon money.

Going back rapidly over the history of immigration, Senator Lodge said that before 1820 no record was kept, but that probably 250,000 immigrants came to the United States between the close of the revolution and that time. From 1820 to 1890, inclusive, the number of immigrants reached 16,497,096. The majority of these came from Great Britain, Ireland, Germany and the Scandinavian countries. The quality of immigrants was high until the last few years.

In the fiscal year ended June 30, 1890, 455,302 immigrants came to the United States; in the next fiscal year, 560,319; in the next, 579,663, and in the fiscal year ended in 1893 the number was 440,793. There was a decrease in the latter year because quarantine regulations during the winter of 1893-94 practically stopped immigration.

The majority of undesirable immigrants were divided for the four years in nationalities as follows: Austria-Hungary, 56,199 in 1890, 71,042 in 1891, 76,937 in 1892, 57,420 in 1893; Russia and Poland, 46,671 in 1890, 74,923 in 1891, 122,047 in 1892, 58,684 in 1893; Italy, 52,003 in 1890, 76,055 in 1891, 61,631 in 1892, 72,145 in 1893.

We have now before us race problems which are sufficient to tax to the utmost the fortunate conditions with which nature has blessed us and the highest wisdom of which our public men are capable. I do not, for one, desire to see these race problems multiplied or complicated. I do not want to see the quality of American citizenship decline beneath the effects of an unrestricted immigration and I am utterly opposed to a system which is continuously dragging down the wages of American labor by the introduction or the importation of the cheapest, lowest and most ignorant labor of other countries.

A short time ago a committee examined six ship loads of immigrants from Bremen, Antwerp, Amsterdam, Southampton and Liverpool and of 1,000 who were over 16 years of age 331 were illiterate. What becomes of such illiterates is answered by Carroll D. Wright, who says that 77 per cent of the population of the slums of Baltimore, 90 per cent of the slum population of Chicago, 95 per cent of the slum population of New York and 51 per cent of the slum population of Philadelphia are persons of foreign birth or parentage.

At present there are three methods proposed to restrict immigration. One is to increase the cost of immigrating by imposing a tax of from $25 to $50 on each immigrant. Another is by consular inspection abroad, by which only such immigrants as our consuls would approve of could enter the country. The educational test of Senator Lodge will probably, however, be adopted.

They Talk Very Fast.

January has been a busy month for the Congressmen who wish to make it appear that they are doing their share of the talking in Congress and are anxious to have their constituents aware of the fact. The circulation of the Congressional Record has largely increased from the above cause and thousands of voters have been placed on the free list.

This publication is supposed to contain a faithful representation of all that transpires on the floors of Senate and House, and yet it is a fact that there is not a greater fake in the world than this document which is printed under Government auspices. Voters who do not know the means taken by their representatives to get their speeches published have no idea when they read the columns of printed matter so well punctured with "loud applause" that not more than 200 words of the speech was delivered in the hearing of other members.

The way the game is worked is as follows: A member wishes to secure some space in the Congressional Record. He finds an opportunity in a big dbeate on some important question which is set for some particular day. Going to the leader of his side of the House he begs for ten or even three minutes, which is granted. Being recognized by the speaker, the member proceeds with his speech. Perhaps he may utter 600 words when the gavel falls and his time is up. Under the rules, he is allowed to "revise his remarks" and furnish the same to the Record. When the speech is published it contains several thousand words and the voters take it for granted that the speech was really made.

During a recent debate over the Dingley tariff bill, Mr. Crisp gave three minutes of his time to Howard of Alabama, and when the Congressional Record produced the latter's speech it was of sufficient length to consume thirty minutes in reading. The next day Mr. Dingley gave a half minute of his time to a member from New England and the record showed that 3,000 words had been delivered in the thirty seconds, notwithstanding the necessary interruptions for "loud applause."

THEODORE C. SEARCH.

The New President of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Theodore C. Search, the new president of the National Association of Manufacturers, was born in Philadelphia fifty-two years ago. He is the president of the J. B. Stetson Hat Company, of the Quaker City, which is the largest hat manufactory in the world. Mr. Search is more widely known, however, as the founder and head of the Philadelphia textile school. This institution is one for education in the best methods of manufacturing textile fabrics, and also takes cognizance of other industries and mechanical arts. The school was the first of its kind to be established in this country, and under the able management of Mr. Search has been pronounced the best in the world. The new president is considered by his colleagues in the manufacturers' association to be bold and aggressive in his advocacy of the protection of the home market against foreign manufacturers. He is an earnest believer in the great commercial advantages which would accrue to the United States and favors every measure that would promote the interests of American trade.

STRANDED STEAMER ST. PAUL.

The Big American Liner on the Beach Off Long Island.

The wreckers at work attempting to float the stranded steamer St. Paul, which went ashore on the outer bar off Hotel Brighton at Long Branch, N. J., took advantage of a favorable tide and, according to reports received by the officials of the company, succeeded in moving the big ship about 20 feet. The stern of the vessel was also moved seaward about four degrees. At high tide the St. Paul registered at her bow twenty-two feet of water. That registration, however, included about seven feet of sand, into which her bow is sunk.

CAPT. JAMISON.

Since this first effort to move the ship there is, at this writing, absolutely no change in the situation. The St. Paul is as steady as a rock and betrays no ill effects from the buffeting of the wind and waves. The passengers' baggage and all of the cargo have been taken off, including the $1,300,000 in gold which she carried. This was her first return trip since the recent accident, which occurred in her engine room at her dock, whereby ten men were instantly killed or badly injured.

"AMBER" IS NO MORE.

The Gifted Writer Who Has Brought Sunshine Into Many Homes.

Mrs. Martha E. Holden, better known to newspapers under the nom de plume of "Amber," died recently in Chicago as the result of an operation for cancer. In her death there passed from earthly scenes a woman who by the sweet productions of her pen brought sunshine into many a household and lifted the burden from many a weary and sorrow-laden heart.

Mrs. Holden was born in New York State forty-two years ago. She settled in Chicago in 1877. Poverty made her acquainted with human suffering, but did not interfere with her endeavors to make herself heard in the field of literature. She soon began to contribute to the Chicago newspapers articles which breathed a love of life and humanity and which were remarkable for their wealth of metaphors and brilliancy of language. Her writings brought forth expressions of admiration and were copied all over the country. For several years past she had contributed a series of beautiful letters to the Chicago Herald, and later to the Times-Herald under the title of "A String of Beads."

There are hundreds of newspaper readers throughout this land to-day who will mourn the passing away of this gifted writer, who had tinged their lives with a warmth and glow which made them forget mundane troubles.

BOERS MAY TAKE HIS LIFE.

John Hays Hammond, an American, in Jail in the Transvaal.

John Hays Hammond, an American mining expert, now in prison in the South African republic with the charge of treason against him, received $60,000 a year salary from Cecil Rhodes, the diamond king, head of the Chartered company and former premier of Cape Colony. The clever American engineer was Cecil Rhodes' right-hand man, and the charges of high treason may be pressed with unusual vigor by the Boers against Mr. Hammond for that reason. He is a native of San Francisco. He graduated from Yale College in 1876.

JACK HAMMOND.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

The President sent to the Senate the nomination of John H. Puck to be collector of customs for the district of Miami, Ohio.

Senator Allen, of Nebraska, introduced a bill prohibiting the purchase or use by any Federal official of any convict-made goods.

It is expected that the Supreme Court will soon decide whether the Commissioner of Pensions has the right to order reductions.

Congressman Avery, of Michigan, offered in the House a bill providing for the erection of a life-saving station at Charlevoix, Mich.

J. B. Morton, national commander of the Regular Army and Navy Union, has issued a call for the annual convention to be held in Washington May 18.

The House sub-committee has made a reduction of $400,000 in the Indian appropriation bill, as compared with the amount provided for the current fiscal year.

A bill to grant pensions to soldiers who served in the Confederate army and afterward served in the army of the United States has been introduced by Senator Peffer.

The urgency deficiency bill was reported to the Senate. It increases by $1,509,664 the total appropriation for deficiencies over the amount appropriated by the House bill, the total being $5,930,667.

The Comptroller of the Currency has declared dividends in favor of insolvent national banks as follows: Northern National Bank, of Big Rapids, Mich., 5 per cent; the Lloyds National Bank, of Jamestown, N. D., 10½ per cent.

Albert H. Wolf, a Chicago contractor, is the lowest bidder for the steel and iron construction above the fourth floor of the postoffice building at St. Paul. His bid was $25,509, and he will probably get the contract. The next bidder was L. Schreeber & Sons, of Cincinnati, $25,850.

A favorable report will be made to the House on the bill providing for a commission to treat with the Shoshone and Bannock Indians to so modify their treaty rights as to prevent conflict with Montana's game laws, which present condition caused the recent disturbances at Jackson's Hole.

The Michigan State Association of Washington celebrated the seventy-ninth anniversary of the admission of Michigan to the Union with a banquet at the Hotel Page. Nearly all the members of the Michigan delegation in Congress and many of the citizens of Michigan living in Washington were present.

NATIONAL SOLONS.

REVIEW OF THEIR WORK AT WASHINGTON.

Detailed Proceedings of Senate and House—Bills Passed or Introduced in Either Branch—Questions of Moment to the Country at Large.

The Legislative Grind.

An animated debate over the question of taking a vote on the pending silver-bond bill closed the session of the Senate late Thursday afternoon. Mr. Stewart declared that it made no difference when a vote was taken, or whether any was taken. It was all "dress parade" and "buncombe." He added the significant statement that the pending silver amendment would be germane as an amendment to the tariff bill, and that when the latter measure came before the Senate he would offer a silver amendment to test the Senators on their choice between tariff and silver. The Senate went into executive session and then took a recess without any exact understanding as to the time of taking the vote. The attendance in the House was slim. The report of the Elections Committee in favor of the sitting member, D. B. Culberson, from the fourth Texas district, and against T. H. Davis, was adopted without division. On motion of Mr. Doolittle (Rep., Wash.) a resolution was adopted requesting the President to transmit to Congress the report of the Board of Engineers on the Nicaraguan canal. The bill to amend the dependent pensions act of 1890 so that in considering widows' claims seven years of unexplained absence should be deemed sufficient proof of the death of the soldier, was passed. The speaker announced the appointment of Mr. Wellington (Rep., Md.) on the Committee on Labor, and Mr. Belknap (Rep., Ill.) on Railways and Canals.

The Senate Friday spent most of the time sparring over the free coinage measure. The House confined itself to routine business. Most of the session was devoted to the District of Columbia appropriation bill. The regular attempt was made to have all the expenses of the District government paid by the District, but the motion made by Mr. De Armond (Dem., Mo.) to effect this was ruled out on a point of order. The District bill carries $5,417,960, $353,423 less than the sum appropriated for the current fiscal year.

How He Scheduled.

A Detroit jobber last week got an order from a small interior town, and replied that, as the customer was unknown to him, a check would be necessary before he sent the goods. The check came and the goods were shipped. The jobber also sent a blank form for a rating, so that in case of future orders he would have something to go by, as the customer's commercial rating could not be learned through the regular channels of information. The blank has been returned, filled out as follows:

Q. What amount of stock do you carry? A. All we can get trusted for.

Q. What is due on your books and accounts? All we want these times.

Q. What value have you in real estate? A. Less than three years ago on some property.

Q. What do you owe on book accounts? A. All bills that are due.

Q. What do you owe on notes? A. All notes that are not outlawed.

Q. What other debts are you owing? A. Gratitude to the Lord.

Q. Is any of above owing to relatives? A. One-seventh goes to the Lord.

Q. Is there a chattel mortgage against your stock? A. Not that we know of.

Q. For what amount are you insured? A. All we can afford to pay 3 per cent for.

Name references. A. St. Peter.

His Fourth Year.

Foot-ball has proved to be of great interest to the general public, and people are ready to accept many remarkable stories of the athletes who indulge in it, but it is doubtful if even "Uncle Gabe," in a story given by the Sunny Hour, really believed that foot-ball possessed such wonderful powers as he seemed to ascribe to it.

Uncle Gabe walked around the stalwart foot-ball player with an air of critical curiosity, looking him over as he might have looked at a horse he was about to purchase.

"Amandy!"

"What is it, Gabe?"

"He's right onto six foot, ain't he?"

"Every inch of it."

"Weight about one hundred and ninety odd?"

"I reckon."

"Well, foot-ball does develop 'em most powerful."

"Certainly, a fine young man."

"Man? 'Mandy, Professor Bunter told me hisself 't that feller's in his fourth year! Talk about your oatmeal porridge.

Shot by His Dog.

Louis Lezotte was shot by his own dog while squirrel hunting in the woods near Rehobeth, Mass. He had a double-barreled gun with him, and sighting a squirrel high up in an oak, Lezotte let go one barrel, badly wounding the squirrel. Standing the gun against the tree Lezotte began to climb to secure his quarry.

The dog, which from the time of the discharge of the gun had been running excitedly around the tree, began to jump against the trunk as if trying to follow his master. His paw struck the trigger of the unloaded barrel, sending a charge of shot up past Lezotte's side and lodging in the muscles of the right arm near the shoulder. Lezotte fell, but managed to make his way to a doctor in Rehobeth, who sent for an ambulance to take the wounded man to the Rhode Island Hospital.

Ten Thousand Sheep in a Flock.

Ten thousand sheep in one flock were driven across the plains from Bismarck to Forest City, S. D., last week, and 8,000 head traveled on in a bunch from that place a hundred miles or so further. The sheep were bought in Montana a few at a time, and 150 miles of territory was traversed in the course of making up the big herd. The sheep were destined for ranches in South Dakota.

Out of His Line.

The Boston Transcript reports that two gentlemen fell into a talk about books.

"What do you think of the 'Origin of Species?'" asked one man.

"I have never read it," was the other's reply. "In fact," he added, "I am not interested in financial subjects."

CHAPTER XXXII.

If Colonel Prinsep had been perturbed by their interview Jane was no less so. Heaven forbid that she should condemn him for her suspicions, she thought, and only find out their mistake when his life and her own were both ruined. An occasional feeling of anger against him also helped her to the decision to which she at last arrived. She would herself prove his innocence—or guilt.

An opportunity occurred a few days later. The regiment was to go out into the country to practice maneuvers, and as on an occasion like this all the officers would necessarily be absent from their quarters, Jane could visit the Colonel's bungalow without danger. For this was what she finally resolved to do.

Yet she felt her courage flag, as having successfully eluded her mother's observation, she started away on her mission. The two bungalows were not far apart, and by good luck she encountered no one on the way; yet at the gate she paused irresolute, feeling naturally unwilling to cross the threshold of her lover's home.

While she hesitated the sound of wheels decided her, and she went in quickly. It would not have done to be seen standing thus outside his gate. Once inside she put away all scruples and walked on toward the veranda. As she had surmised, none of the servants were about, and the bungalow door being open she might enter if she chose. A deep blush suffused her face as she stepped in. It was the Colonel's dressing-room, the room in which the proof, if proof there were, would be.

Directly—for there was no time to be lost, at any moment she might be disturbed—she crossed to where his boots stood side by side on a pair of shelves. Each in its turn was reversed, and after a hasty scrutiny again set down in its place. On none was found the triangular mark she had seen for an instant in the foot-print which the soldiers had on their arrival so thoughtlessly but effectually effaced.

That clew having failed, another yet remained. In her pocket was the bit of cloth she had picked up near the spot where Jacob Lynn was murdered. If she could find the gaiter from which it had been torn, her doubts would become certainties; and she would know the worst. She knelt down beside a portmanteau, and slowly—caressingly, an onlooker might have thought—turned over its contents without finding what so unwillingly she sought. Another box and a wardrobe were equally ineffectually searched; and as she rose to go, a sigh of relief escaped her parted lips.

But so much had not been required of her, and she felt very grateful, very glad at her non-success.

Throwing back her veil, she passed through an open door into the next room. It was plainly yet comfortably furnished, its owner having evidently hit the happy medium of having sufficient, yet not too many, things about him. Jane took in every detail at a glance, and moving slowly forward, mechanically picked up a closed velvet photograph frame that stood on his writing table. It fell open as she raised it, and her brow, which had puckered into an anxious frown, cleared as she saw her own pictured face. It was a photograph that had been taken during their engagement, and underneath was inscribed, in a bold handwriting that she recognized as his own, "Jenny, January 20th to April 14th," the dates of their first meeting and the parting on their wedding day.

The girl's eyes grew moist as she gazed. But the next moment her expression changed as she saw an envelope lying on the same table addressed to Miss Knollys.

She put down the photograph frame and turned away. After all she could not expect that he would remain true to a mere memory, yet it pained her that he could turn so soon to one she had always looked upon as a possible rival. That he loved her and her only, with a love incapable of change, was the only excuse she had been able to urge for the crime of which she suspected him, and should it become no longer possible to plead that extenuation her one solace amid so much misery would be removed.

He would marry Diana Knollys, she felt sure; everything seemed shaping toward that end, and the match was a more desirable one, of course, than that he had contemplated before. Yet a wild, passionate desire came surging into her heart that she had not sent him away from her—that she had condoned the crime instead of suffering it to part them, as her duty to the dead man had seemed to dictate. It would have been so easy, so perilously easy, to forgive, even though she might never be able to forget.

She sighed so deeply as she left the room that an unseen watcher, who had stood for the last few seconds half concealed by a heavy curtain, which he held back with one hand intending to come in, made a hasty movement to follow her, then on second thoughts, refrained.

Jane had slipped out of the bungalow unchallenged, but as she passed through the compound gates she came face to face with Valentine Graeme.

"Are you going home, Miss Knox? May I walk with you?" he asked, jumping from his horse and handing it over to his syce's care.

She looked up furtively into the Adjutant's face. He was frowning, and she guessed that the meeting was as unpleasant to him as to herself. That he would not betray her she felt sure, yet was equally certain that she had fallen irretrievably in his estimation.

"You did not go with the rest to-day?"

"I? Oh, yes! We were all out; but it was over sooner than we expected."

"Then you are all back?"—blankly.

"I think so. I did not hear of any one staying behind."

"And—and Colonel Prinsep?" she faltered.

"You have not seen him?"—awkwardly.

He looked into her face. She was gazing at him wistfully, her eyes full of a mute entreaty, as though imploring for an assurance, which yet she was ashamed to beg.

"I shall not mention that I met you today," he said, hastily, looking away.

"I wish I could explain——"

"Don't try—I am certain"—the certainty only growing on him as he spoke—"I am certain that you had good reason for whatever you have done."

She put her hand into his with a sudden, grateful impulse, then as suddenly withdrew it.

"Thank you so much," she murmured, shyly.

The silent vow she had registered by Jacob Lynn's grave to bring his murderer to justice seemed to her as she reflected on her way back the height of Quixotic folly. Had he been so good to her that she should, for his sake, unsex herself, and do such violence to her feelings by taking on herself such a hateful task? Surely it was self-immolation sufficient that she should lose all chance of happiness because it might be that the man she loved was accountable for the death of the man who had so loved her. For until he had cleared himself of that suspicion she would never again speak to Stephen Prinsep, nor take his hand even when courtesy would seem to make it needful. Yet she herself would never lift a finger to either shake the faith of any one in his innocence, or to prove it. If every proof of the murder lay link by link in her hand, she would not move in the matter. The onus of such a step must be with some one stronger, some one more fitted to bear the opprobrium that would be felt and justly earned. It was better to break so terrible a vow than keep it. If heroines were made of such stuff as this, she was no heroine. All the enthusiasm of keen self-blame that had urged her on at first seemed to fade away, and she saw the whole thing as it was in its bare unloveliness. She knew now that her heart would have broken had she succeeded in her endeavor. How for a moment could she have believed herself capable of such cold-blooded cruelty, even though she had justified it to herself in the name of duty? Her own heartlessness shocked and appalled her. She felt very humble and contrite as she made her way to her house.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Meanwhile the deputy commissioner had not been idle. That there had been a motive for the crime he felt convinced, and if this motive were at once discovered it would materially aid the efforts of his subordinates. Now, if there were anything at all in that letter in the Argus, which had finally decided him to move actively in the matter, Jane Knox could supply the missing clew. He resolved to question her at once, before she had time to hear from other sources that inquiries were on foot, and he would question her alone.

Circumstances favored him. Two or three mornings later, as he was walking to the Cutchery, he met Jane driving herself, and she pulled up when she saw him.

"My father went to call on you, Mr. Knollys. Did you see him?" she asked, quickly.

"If he went to my office, I must have missed him, I am afraid, for I am very late this morning, and my clerks did not know when to expect me. But is it anything you and I can arrange? I need not say that I shall be delighted to help you in any way I can"—with a politeness that did not seem so terrible to Jane as generally it did.

"Thank you very much. It is about the small house next to yours, in your compound almost. They said it belonged to you, when I asked about it for Mrs. Dene. She has been ill again—you know she is never strong—and is coming here for change of air. That house would just suit her, if you would not mind letting it for so short a time."

"Of course it is at her service. I will send word to the babu directly, to see it is made comfortable for her. It is partly furnished already, and whatever is wanted shall be sent over from my bungalow during the day. When does she arrive?"

"The day after to-morrow."

"You will be glad to see your friend."

"Oh, very glad. I am to stay with her first, until she gets a little stronger."

"Then we shall be very near neighbors. Diana will be pleased when I tell her."

In spite of his wish to be ingratiating, there was a touch of condescension in his kindness that Jane instantly detected. She colored and did not reply.

"And now, Miss Knox, there are some questions I wish to ask yourself," went on the deputy commissioner, briskly.

"I will answer what I can."

"It is on the subject of the murder of Jacob Lynn," he observed, slowly, watching the expression on her face, and noticing how gradually it grew white and hard with self-repression. "I was away when the court of inquiry was held, and am not satisfied that full endeavors were made to bring the matter to a just conclusion. I have been informed that at one time you were engaged to Trooper Lynn. Forgive me for intruding on your private affairs, but—is it true?"

"Yes."

"And would you mind telling me when this engagement came to an end?"

"I considered myself free about the first of April," she answered, in a low voice.

"Considered!"—sharply. "Was there any difference of opinion? Had Lynn any reason to think that you were bound to him still?"

"There was some mistake. I cannot explain. It was—it was——"

"Don't distress yourself, Miss Knox. Believe me, I do not wish to pain you more than I can help; but it is my duty to find out certain facts. Do you mind telling me when—the exact date, if possible—Lynn admitted you to be free?"

Jane Knox stood for a few moments in silence, her face flushing with the feelings of alternate shame and sorrow, which these questions had provoked.

"Did you complain to any one of—of his annoyance?" he asked, after a short pause, and had to lean forward to catch the unwilling murmured assent.

"To whom? To your father?"

"No."

"Then who was it?"—somewhat impatiently.

"Colonel Prinsep."

"Colonel Prinsep!"

Nothing but that ejaculation, yet Jane knew that the suspicion which had been growing on the deputy commissioner had become a certainty in his own mind. Fact after fact had been forced from her, not rendered by her own volition, and with the worst results. By her own lips she had betrayed the lover that she loved, yet only by direct lies could she have saved him.

"Is that all you wish to know? May I go?" she asked, wearily.

It dawned upon him slowly, for the commissioner, though shrewd, was not naturally quick of apprehension, that he had caused her more suffering than he had known of at the time. Whatever reason she had had for jilting Stephen Prinsep, upon what should have been their wedding day, on her side at least it had not been lack of love.

Foreseeing many difficulties ahead, his brow was puckered into a decided frown as he continued his way to the Cutchery. He was only too well aware—as what magistrate is not—of the number of crimes that remain unproven, and consequently go unpunished, and knew it were certainly better that this should add one more to the list than risk making a false or untenable accusation against one who held so high a position, socially as well as in a military sense, as Stephen Prinsep.

When he went into his private office he found the quartermaster had been there, and gone nearly an hour ago. An accumulation of letters and business papers lay on his desk, and during the morning a case came on at the Cutchery, but he went through all mechanically and without his usual keenness. It was a relief to him when the thanedar came in with his report on the subject of which his brain was full.

The report itself dealt principally in negatives. Trooper Lynn had no enemies among his comrades—was not of a quarrelsome disposition even when in drink; no one in the barracks seemed to have a suspicion as to who was answerable for his death, yet a vague opinion prevailed that had it not been for his fatal passion for the Quartermaster's daughter he would be alive still.

When Mr. Knollys returned to his bungalow in the afternoon, he met his daughter on the veranda.

"I am just going to send off those invitations for the dinner party—Monday's dinner party," she said, standing on tiptoe to kiss him.

"Did you ask Col. Prinsep?"

Then, as she held up the addressed envelope in reply, he took it rather roughly from her hand and tore it in half.

"I won't have him enter my house again. You understand, Diana. If you meet him in society, you must be merely civil to him, nothing more; if he calls, he is not to be admitted."

"But, papa——"

"Not another word. You may be quite sure I should not give such an order without good reason."

"Then whom shall I ask in his stead?"

"Ask Valentine Graeme."

"He was here the night before last."

"Never mind. He is one of the nicest fellows in the regiment. I sometimes think he has a penchant for you, Di."

"Nonsense, papa!"—with a brilliant blush.

(To be continued.)

IRON IN FOOD.

Spinach Contains More of It than Eggs or Beef.

Prof. Bunge, in the course of a paper on iron as a medicine, read before the German Congress of Internal Medicine, has been ventilating some ideas which are as much matter of general science (and therefore extremely important) as they are details connected with the physician's domain. He is strong on the point that iron should reach our blood through the medium of our food, rather than through the druggist's specialties. Iron, as everybody knows, is a food element absolutely essential for the proper constitution of the body. It is as rigidly demanded by the plant as by the animal; and it is from plants that Prof. Bunge shows we should chiefly receive our iron supply. Spinach, he tells us, is richer in iron than yolk of eggs, while the yolk contains more than beef. Then succeed apples, lentils, strawberries, white beans, peas, potatoes and wheat, these substances being given in the order in which they stand as regards the plentifulness of their iron constituents.

Cow's milk is poor in iron, but, as balancing this delicacy in the food of the young mammal, it is found that the blood of the youthful quadruped contains much more iron than the adult. Thus, in a young rabbit or guinea pig one hour old, four times as much iron was found as occurs in these animals two and a half months old.—London Public Opinion.

Bees as Letter Carriers.

An English apiculturist has commenced training bees for letter carrying purposes. After a few preliminary trials, he says, he took a hive of them to the house of a friend four miles distant. After some days, when the bees had become familiar with their new surroundings, some of them were liberated in a room, where they soon settled on a plate of honey which had been specially prepared for them. While they were busy eating it their trainer placed on their backs the tiniest of dispatches, fastened with the tiniest of thread, and so arranged them as to leave the head and wings absolutely free. They were then thrown into the air and soon arrived at their own home with the letters on their backs. The writing was magnified and quite legible. Here, then, is an opening for a new industry. In time of war bees would have the advantage over pigeons of invisibility, and might go through the enemy's lines with impunity.

Origin of "Tommy Atkins."

Did you ever hear an explanation of the origin of the term "Tommy Atkins" as applied to all British soldiers? It originated in this way: About forty years ago the Queen caused a little ledger to be published and distributed to every individual in her army and navy. In this book the soldier was expected to enter his name, age, date of enlistment, length of service, description of medals received, etc. In the back of the ledger, by way of instruction, a filled-out leaf was inserted. The name used in the blank was "Thomas Atkins," just as we use the name "John Doe" and "Richard Roe" in legal patterns. Soon after some wag gave the name of "Tommy Atkins" to the book, and it has since become common to apply it to the soldiers themselves.

Had No Use for Another Fortune.

A laborer employed in one of the iron mills in Allegheny, earning the munificent salary of $1.10 a day for wheeling ore in a wheelbarrow, received a telegram announcing that a relative in Ireland had died and left him $60,000. He left his job, went to Ireland, secured the cash and started upon a career of luxury and high living. Two years later he reappeared in Pittsburg, asked for his old position and went back to wheeling ore. One day another telegram came announcing that a relative in England had died, leaving him $20,000. He threw up his hands in despair. "Hivins!" cried he. "Must Oi trow up me job and go over ther and waste another year or two in spending that? It's a shame to handicap a decint workin' man like thot. Oi'll sind word to thim Oi can't do it."

The highest point ever attained by man was that reached by Cox and Glaisher, in 1862, thirty-seven thousand feet above the sea.

EDUCATIONAL COLUMN

NOTES ABOUT SCHOOLS AND THEIR MANAGEMENT.

A Chapter on the Treatment of Bad Boys—How to Cultivate the Memory—Prejudice Against Written Analysis—The School Report.

The Bad Boy.

In a recent communication to an educational journal some one tells how to treat the "bad boy." The writer assumes, of course, that all bad boys have sufficient in common to make the same treatment effective in nearly every case. Now while the teacher should have a real interest in the morals and progress of every pupil under her care, it is at the same time true that not every bad pupil is amenable to the same kind of treatment. No two bad boys have exactly the same temperament or disposition. Their home surroundings, their inherited tendencies must all be taken into consideration by the teacher who desires or expects to produce the best results. Besides, not all teachers can use the same methods. A method which would prove very effective with one teacher, would utterly fail if tried by another. The individuality or personality of the teacher has often more to do with the government and reformation of bad boys than any other element.

I have now in mind a teacher who came into a country neighborhood to teach upwards of thirty years ago. There were bad boys in the district—some that were inclined to disobedience, idleness and all manner of insubordination and mischief. The teacher was not a good scholar, but he was well informed on general topics, and could converse intelligently on many subjects. He loved justice, and pupils and parents were willing to confide in his judgment. He was stern and fearless and took no pains to smooth and mellow his tones when matters in the school room were not in accordance with his wishes. He was terribly opposed to whispering, talking and all unnecessary noise on the part of the pupils. I can almost see him yet, when at the beginning of the term as the pupils were resuming their old habits of loud whispering, he would say: "Quit that whispering there." His very look meant that it would not be safe to repeat the offense. Every tendency to idleness, noise and mischief, was rudely arrested, and in a few days it was surprising to see how quietly and agreeably everything moved along. The teacher, with all his roughness, was affable and polite, and the pupils seemed to regard him with the utmost respect. The bad boys all disappeared, and those who had been the terror of the school came up to their places like gentlemen, and gave little or no trouble.

Cases frequently arise in school in which the teacher must act promptly if he would maintain the proper degree of influence and control. He cannot wait for the slower processes of reason and reflection to bring about the desired reformation in the boy's conduct. A case which illustrates the point in hand came under my observation recently. A boy who had been in the habit of acting the clown for the entertainment of his fellow pupils, entered the room of a teacher with whom he was not acquainted. He had been attending school in his new place several days before an opportunity occurred for the exhibition of his peculiar talents. The teacher was within a few feet of him busily engaged, when the boy arose and began a series of comic gymnastics. He had scarcely begun when he involuntarily took his seat with a suddenness which called his attention to his gluteal muscles for several minutes afterward. This was a new experience to him. Hitherto he had escaped punishment, and when the teacher reproved or chided him he made his friends believe that he was innocent, and that the teacher had "a pick at him." The new teacher seized him in the act and settled him at once. The boy has behaved well ever since, and speaks in the highest terms of his teacher. Who will say, under the circumstances, the treatment was improper?

In the communication referred to at the beginning of this article, a teacher tells how a quarrelsome boy who lied, stole, swore and kissed the girls, was reclaimed and reformed by her treatment of him. The said teacher wished it to be understood that her method is "the" method of dealing with bad boys. While admitting that the spirit which she manifested is the true one, we cannot admit that her treatment will reform even the majority of boys so bad as the one she represents. The majority of boys who have reached the age of twelve years, and who lie, steal and swear, are generally too firmly fixed in their habits to be reformed in a single term. Besides it requires a will power and perseverance which the boy given over to bad habits is not inclined to exert. Boys whose home influences are in the right direction, and, who, notwithstanding their outward manifestations, still have a relish for the right, will, under the proper treatment, quit the bad and return to the good. But the question as to how the bad boy should be treated will not admit of a single solution In every case the teacher should be firm and just, and should, if possible, bring the boy to a realization of the fact. This will put the teacher in a position to assist the boy when he manifests even the faintest desire for reformation.—Exchange.

Cultivate the Memory.

A habit of forgetfulness is one of the greatest hindrances in all business and social relations, but our modern style of life and education is certainly injurious to the memory. The old methods of learning by rote have fallen into disfavor, and there was much to say against them as a hindrance to originality; but there is a time in every child's life when learning by rote is a useful thing, and it is at a very early age, for the minds of young children not being occupied with so many things as those of their elders they are in a more retentive state later on. Every mother has been struck by her child 2 or 3 years remembering perhaps for some months where a certain thing is placed, or some little events of our early youth more forcibly than those of even a few months back.

It is possible to begin to cultivate the memory as soon as a child can talk, when it should be made to describe everything it has seen during its morning walk, or to repeat some little story that has been told to it, or a short lesson which has been learned. Every teacher before beginning a new lesson should make sure that the lesson of the day before is retained and understood, for the more we overcrowd the little brain in the attempt to force knowledge upon it the less we impress upon it for future use. It is the experience of all those who have crammed for examinations that as soon as the examination is over the undigested knowledge passes away, and similarly through life. Unless an item of knowledge is assimilated it becomes as useless to the mental system as an undigested article of food to the bodily system, and in both cases they act as an irritant, interfering with the proper digestion of other matter.

In a well ordered mind the facts remain and points are, as it were, pigeonholed in such a way that they can be brought out immediately when required. There are untidy brains, in which the objects of knowledge are confused and not ready to hand, so that they may turn up at unexpected moments, but not just when wanted, in the same manner as there are untidy drawers, wardrobes and rooms, and to cultivate a habit of mental order as well as one of physical order should be the earnest desire of every mother and teacher.—Home Notes.

Written Analysis.

There is still a very strong prejudice in the minds of some teachers against written analysis, or what is known in grammar as diagramming. The sentiment against it is pure prejudice, for no one who has ever used diagrams judiciously and not as a hobby or a process of picture making has failed to acknowledge its use as a saver of both time and labor to both teacher and pupil.

It does not teach grammar? Well possibly not, but it shows the teacher at a glance whether the learner understands correctly the construction of the sentence. No, it may not teach grammar any more than the figure on the blackboard teaches the learner geometry, or the equations placed on the blackboard teach the boy arithmetic or algebra. But the figure, the equation, the diagram are all wonderfully helpful to the learner in explaining his work, in showing his understanding of the difficulties, and in helping the teacher to see at a glance that the pupil has grasped and understands the essentials of the theorem, the problem or the sentence.

Diagramming judiciously used by the teacher who has no prejudices against illustrative teaching, is a good thing. It saves time, it saves labor, it creates interest in the class, and all of these are of great importance.

Some one has said that it destroys the charm of a story or of a sentence to have it analyzed or diagrammed. No one is talking of sentiment; it is not the object of such sciences as grammar, algebra or arithmetic to teach sentiment or charm with story. There is work in this world to be done, and the child who is left wholly to be soothed with sentiment will find when he grows to manhood that the world has little use for him and no place for him to occupy. The sentimental will take care of itself, but the grammar and the arithmetic will not. Don't fear that the sentiment will be destroyed in easing the road by means of illustrative teaching. The child needs this illustrative work, and if he becomes interested, as he surely will, and as every teacher who has tried diagrams systematically will testify, your work will be made much easier in the teaching of grammatical analysis.—Educational News.

Scientific Teaching as to Alcohol.

Evidence as to the action of alcohol upon the human body has been collected from the laboratory, the autopsy room and the bedside. One series of facts opening a decidedly new field has been obtained through the works of the experimental psychologists. Through the efforts of some of these gentlemen—and we may mention particularly work done at the Heidelberg University—it seems to be established that alcohol has an effect in dulling simple mental processes, such, for example, as learning by rote, simple arithmetical calculations, and the simpler association of ideas. Another series of facts which tend to show the evident effects of alcohol is that which have been collected by students of heredity, particularly the relation of heredity to degeneration in families. The French alienists, in particular, have shown that one of the most prominent of the factors in leading to the development of mental and physical degeneration is the use of alcohol, and it is further urged by these investigators that alcohol has more than an individual or family effect, that it produces serious deterioration of the human race.

Of course, the effects thus claimed are all due to the abuse and excess of alcohol. Whether a further and more careful investigation would show that a moderate use of alcohol leads, eventually, to somewhat similar results, we cannot say. As regards the evidence against alcohol furnished by clinicians and pathologists, there has really been nothing particularly new added in late years. But if one take an unbiased survey of the position of medical knowledge and of medical men toward alcohol, and compare it with that held by them fifteen years ago we feel sure that he will see that the feeling against the use of it is much stronger. This is because there has been a gradual accumulation of facts carefully ascertained and thoroughly proved, demonstrating the ill effects of the drug. It is for the reason that the position of medical men regarding the use of alcohol has been always conservative and never fanatical that the present slight shifting of the front deserves the attention of our law makers and of all of those citizens who are interested in good government, and in the social problems of the day.—Scientific American.

The School Report.

The most important function of a school report is to make known the needs of the schools, and the first step toward reforming the lamentable conditions that exist in many of our cities is to have the facts fully set before the public. We have a right to know the worst. The public schools are largely what public opinion makes them, and it is only by giving the greatest publicity to the crying defects of the system that the proper authorities can be shamed into correcting them.—Forum.

INDIANA INCIDENTS.

RECORD OF EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK.

Flinty-Hearted Landlord at Burlington—Mr. Hayes Indifferent to the Concord of Sweet Sounds, but Succumbs to a Poker.

A Hard Law.

A sensational case of ejectment is reported from Burlington. Andrew Isaacs owed two months' rent, and failing to pay it his landlord proceeded by law to have him and his family ejected. His wife was sick at the time, and there were five little half-starved and half-clothed children set out in the road, along with the few pieces of household furniture the family possessed. Before night, under an order of a justice of the peace, all the family belongings were sold at auction to satisfy hungry creditors. Even the family Bible containing the record of the family births and deaths, was not spared.

Young Lutz Is Released.

Charles Lutz, who was sent to jail at Terre Haute for thirty days and fined $25 for kissing girls on the street, was released by Mayor Ross on payment of the fine, which was paid by the Order of Red Men, of which he was a member. His fellow members still contend that the young women who identified him in court were mistaken. His employers are to restore him to his position, receiving clerk in a large wholesale house. A picture of the man arrested in Evansville for kissing girls and women, and who said he was from Terre Haute, has been received by the police. It represents a man about Lutz's age and size, but he has different colored hair. The young women who identified Lutz in court had him pull his cap down over his head, because that is the manner in which "Jack the hugger" wore his cap when he accosted them.

Capture of an Indiana Forger.

James Dalgarn, who forged William Davis' name to a note at Coal City Thursday for $50, was captured near Cory by a posse of citizens of Coal City, headed by the sheriff. In the fight with the officers Thursday night, when the forger made his escape, he was shot in the arm, and, becoming exhausted from the loss of blood, he sought shelter in an abandoned house. A slight fall of snow enabled the officers to track him. Drops of blood occasionally found on the snow was conclusive evidence that the tracks were made by the escaped convict. Dalgarn surrendered and was taken to Spencer. It has since developed that Dalgarn, under the name of Everett, endeavored to pass a forged note for $300 at a bank at Worthington a few days ago, but failed in his scheme and quickly left the town to escape arrest.

Farmer Is Opposed to Music.

William Hayes, an eccentric farmer, lies at his home near Crawfordsville, dangerously injured and a warrant was issued for the arrest of his wife as his assailant. Hayes was almost insanely religious, and, being of the old school, did not believe in musical instruments. His wife and daughter did not agree with him, and by saving money secured from the sale of chickens and butter they managed to buy a piano, which was installed in the parlor during Hayes' absence. When he returned home he was terribly angry and proceeded to smash the instrument. While he was thus engaged his wife struck him on the head with a poker, almost killing him.

All Over the State.

John P. Morris, living near New Castle, who had been addicted to the use of intoxicants, and who despaired of reformation, climbed to the top of a straw stack near his home, set the straw on fire and then attempted suicide by firing a bullet into his brain. He fell in the burning straw, but was rescued by members of his family. It is believed that he cannot recover.

The cases against members of the Amish religious sect were taken up at Decatur and resulted in seven convictions and six acquittals. The fines were each $5 and costs, the minimum, on account of the offenders' ignorance of the laws and these cases being the first offense. They say they knew they would be "persecuted" this year, as it had been foretold by their fathers.

John R. Haines, living seven miles from Indianapolis, during the absence of his children at school assaulted his wife with a club, leaving her unconscious and dying, after which he committed suicide by hanging. The woman was still alive when the children returned, but she was unconscious, and died before surgical aid could be procured. The murderer was 59 years old and his wife 53. He was a man of dangerous temper and for several years he had frequently quarreled with his wife, often, it is said, threatening to kill her. There are eight children, but only three of them, two of tender age, lived at home. Aside from his ungovernable temper, Haines stood well in the community, and the murder and suicide have caused great excitement.

Friday afternoon Samuel Vanton, an attorney, was found dead in his office at Frankfort. The lawyer's decision to die was the result of an unhappy marriage. On July 3, 1895, Vanton, who had been a widower for many years, married Mrs. Frankie A. Meeker, a wealthy society woman of Quincy, Ill., and two months later his wife deserted him, returning to her old home. Later she filed a suit against her husband, claiming that he had misappropriated $1,500 of her funds. The suit was finally dismissed, but the loss of his bride weighed very heavily on Vanton's mind, and he frequently talked to his friends of death. In the dead man's hand was a brief note, telling where his funeral garb and clean linen could be found. Mr. Vanton was about 53 years of age, and came in 1875 from Middletown, N. Y. He had a son living in Middletown, and it was his desire that the son should have his property.

At the opening of the trial at Terre Haute of Dan Keller, his wife and his sister, on the charge of murdering Clara Shanks, the court and the counsel were dumfounded to find that one of the jurors, Mr. Soules, was drunk. In the jury box he blinked and grinned for an hour, while the crowd stared at him and the judge and lawyers consulted as to the best method of proceeding without the danger of a mistrial. Finally the defense, by agreement, made a motion to discharge the jury and excuse permanently Mr. Soules. Then the eleven were resworn and a new jury obtained.

The residence and part of the contents of the old Sines Darrow property, about one mile west of Vienna, in Vienna township, was burned to the ground. The house was situated almost at the top of a long hill, which, leading into Vienna, constitutes its only street. It was along this old road that Morgan and his cavalry, in 1863, made their famous raid across the southern part of Indiana into Ohio. The people along the road were scared out of their senses, and at the Darrow house, where he stopped for information, he frightened the mistress of the house into hysterics. Most of the people fled to the woods for protection, taking particular care to conceal their cattle and horses.

Less than fifty years ago there was really no postal system in this country. Previous to 1847 the mails were carried by private firms and rates varied according to distance. Carriers often traveled on foot or horseback and the progress was slow. In 1846 some of the post offices issued stamps of their own, called "provisional issues." The adhesive stamp was first used in this country in 1847, and prepayment was made compulsory in 1856. In 1863 the stamp containing the head of Andrew Jackson was issued, and from then until 1885 the style adopted, contained the profiles of Presidents of the United States.

STILL GOING

Sights Between Los Angeles and Albuquerque N. M.

SANTA FE, N. M., Jan., 26, 1896

DAILY COURIER:

While in waiting for train will pass a few minutes in this way. We were ferried over the San Francisco Bay to Oakland on the night of the 11th inst. where the elegantly equipped "Sunset Limited," stood in readiness to start for Los Angeles and New Orleans at 10 o'clock. With seven stops, and 500 miles, we roll into the metropolis of Southern California. This train is certainly worthy of mention, it being with elegant compartments and new royally furnished upper and lower berths sold solid and carrying the finest dinning car we have seen on any road, not excepting the N. P., Pittsburg or New York Central and L. S. Limited, Mt. Shasta Springs water being used exclusively for drinking purposes. "Oh, no, they don't drink wines on these trains, or in California, "only if you know it" it is taken by some as freely as water. "Some seem to require it."

The San Joaquin Valley pronounced in English, San-Wah-King, it being spelled in Spanish, as are many Californian towns, the Valley is about 300 miles in length by 100 miles in width hemmed in on the east by the Sierra Nevadas whose snow fringed summits are clearly seen from the train. The whole country south of Frisco is suffering for want of water, the last rainfall being in May, while the northern part of the state has been more favored. The Mojave Desert (Mohahvy,) covering about 100 miles, through which we pass before crossing the mountainous range and the famous Loop, grows nothing but the cactus of the prickly pear species, and palm tree, which seems to be a cross between a Spanish dagger and the former and seems to thrive in the hot dry sand, is about 10 to 15 feet in height with a sturdy trunk, from the size of a crow bar to that of a stove pipe. A monkey might climb one but it would bother him to back down. It is said the stalk of this tree is used by a California Paper Co., who use the pulp, in the manufacturing of paper. Los Angeles is growing very fast, many large and fine blocks and residences having gone up since our last visit to this city in '92. The green and well kept lawns, flowers and semi-tropical shrubbery, with the influence of a fine system of irrigation, make the residence portion and parks, indeed charming. Taking our leave of the city of Los Angeles, via the Santa Fe Route Limited, we jump 1000 miles to Albuquerque N. M. At the Needles we cross the Colorado River and are in Arizona. The first day out nothing but Indian settlements and the vast wastes of the barren Mojave Desert greets the eye. The Indian village is composed of adobe huts. The Mojave tribe are the lowest and hardest God-for-saken beings the sun ever shone on. They look more like animals than human. They frequent the arrival of trains and are ambitious in their efforts to sell their wears of pottery, some of which is simple and ridiculous in design. They will fight to prevent having their pictures taken, possibly thinking they are too ugly to be preserved. We were actually chased by the wooly headed "Buck skinned stocking Squaws." But we have some negatives and they are gems. The second day out, we passed over the dry desert of Arizona into New Mexico, a section seldom visited by rain, yet the sage bush and another shrub seems to thrive. About 1 p. m. our train comes to a sudden stand still, the R. R. bridge is on fire every one carries water from the engine and after two hours of lively work, the fire is controlled. It looked at one time as if the connecting link would have to go and that we would have to lay over twenty-four hours or make a general transfer. A construction train was immediately dispatched to the scene with a gang of men and large timbers, as a number of the main timbers had gone down. After seven or eight hours delay we were again on our way. We passed the time most pleasantly, in roaming about the stone and lava covered desert in search of agates, garnets and "rattlesnakes" which was a decided change and one often wished for.

We were surrounded by a contrast in scenery, of white floating clouds, deep blue sky, red sand stone walls on either side, in the distance, and beyond the table lands, in the far distance snow capped mountains, while all about us were sage bushes of a silvery gray tinge. All this, with a fine company of ladies and gentlemen, a summer's day, to "say nothing of the kodak" made this unexpected delay, one to be remembered.

U. S. Mint.

The monthly report of the director of the mint shows the total coinage during January to have been $13,033,560, classified as follows: Gold, $12,914,600; silver, $35,000; minor coin, $53,960. Beginning now the mints at Philadelphia, San Francisco and New Orleans will begin the coinage of silver dollars at the rate of $1,500,000 per month. The Philadelphia mint will coin $900,000 per month; San Francisco, $500,000, and New Orleans, $100,000. It is expected the work will continue until from $18,000,000 to $30,000,000 worth has been coined.

Political Announcements

EDITOR COURIER:—

You will please announce my name as a candidate for Congress from the 12th Congressional District, subject to the Democratic nominating convention to be held at Kendallville, April 7th 1896.

HELMER.

The new Ball is a Dinger.

Sam Newnam of South Milford was in town last week.

Mrs. John Shore and son, Wesley of Angola were the guests of Wm. X. Smith and others last week.

Rev. Reinhart and James Wagner are making wood for John Kimmel.

The protracted effort at Union Chapel is making several additions to the church.

John Hovarter and E. J. Crossley have dissolved partnership, as Mr. Crossley has accepted a position on the L. S. & M. S. R'y.

A recent letter from W. H. Duerr, who is now in the employ of the U. Y. U. H. & H. R'y. as operator at Boston, Mass., states he is doing fine.

On last Tuesday evening, while Rev. Hemminger was straining his vocal cords in the church at the corner of Hayward Ave. and Dora street, telling the people of their eternal punishment if they did not turn from the dowhward road they were traveling, and accept salvation while they had an opportunity, Rev. Albright was uniting in the holy bonds of matrimony, in the second story of the Wren block, known as the K. of P. hall, Myron H. Silkworth of Jackson, Mich., and May D. Wren of this place. Almost at the same time over opposite the court house in front of J. Havarter's ice house occurred a bloody contest between one of Helmer's fellows and a prosperous young business man of Salem Center. We are sorry to say, the contest was a draw, for there are several kids over on Buffalo street, who think they are John L Sullivans, and we would be pleased to see some one smaller in stature and mouth be the means of causing the Doctor to call on them in place of them being able to call on him to have their wounds dressed. However Rev. Hemminger is pushing forward with his efforts and the writer wishes the happy married couple a long and prosperous life.

CORUNNA.

Charles Wallace was at Waterloo last Tuesday to see his father who is very sick.

The wet weather prophet struck it rich last Friday.

James Shook, of Kansas City, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Shook, last week. They had not seen him for seven years, and you may imagine their surprise when he came in onto them without any previous announcement.

There was a chopping bee at Frank Britton's last Wednesday The U. B. and the M. E. church people went together and cut enough wood for the church to last two winters.

August Fraas and wife returned home last Tuesday after a ten days' visit with Mr. Fraas' parents in Archbold, O.

Rev. Edgar closed his meetings on the night of the 2d at Corunna.

We suppose that Mr. Groundhog saw his shadow, and of course, we will wisely prepare for six weeks more of winter.

DeKalb Woman.

The New Orleans Picayune Gives a Deserved Compliment to Miss McTighe.

We clip the following from the New Orleans Daily Picayune of January 14:

The regular monthly meeting of the Woman's Club was held last night in the parlors of the club. There was a large attendance, and the meeting was very interesting, being enlivened after the transaction of routine business by a very clever talk by Miss Lilly McTighe of Auburn, Indiana, a bright woman now visiting New Orleans and who enjoys the honor of being president of the Ladies Literary Club of Auburn.

Mrs. Sumter D. Marks presided at the meeting.

Miss Aline Nores read a highly interesting paper entitled "Joan of Arc and her Epoch, from a Nineteenth Century Point of View." The paper teemed with bright and original thought, which evolved a brilliant discussion from the brightest members of the club.

Mrs. Marks then introduced Miss McTighe, who talked in a delightfully womanly way of the work and influence of woman clubs in Indiana, and particularly in her own town of Auburn.

Miss Katherine Nobles presented the report of the first afternoon given under the auspices of the literary committee, of which she is chairman. These afternoons are arranged for the third Tuesday of each month and are for the benefit of club members only. The first of the series, held the third Tuesday of December, was a memorial evening of "Eugene Field," which was most pleasant and full of personal reminiscences of the dead poet. The next afternoon will be this day week, when the western writers, Owen Wister, Hamlin Garland and Bret Harte will form the the topics of discussion.

An exchange says: A bright little 4 year old boy was lying in the grass and looking into the sky when he spied the moon. He was astonished to see it in the daytime. Suddenly jumping up, he rushed into the house and cried. "Oh, mamma, God forgot to take his moon in last night.

A CURABLE DISEASE.

Chronic Catarrh is Pronounced Curable by Dr. Hartman.

There are an almost countless number of remedies said to cure chronic catarrh. The most of these are of no use whatever and many worse than useless, being actually harmful. A few are successful in a small number of cases—those which are very slight and easily curable—cases which might almost get well by simply taking care not to catch cold again. But of all this vast multitude of medicines it can not be said that there are more than two or three which are actually specifics, and without doubt the most reliable is Peruna. It always cures when it is faithfully and conscientiously used. It not only cures catarrh of the head and throat, but catarrah of the stomach, liver, bowels, lung bronchial tubes, kidneys, and in fact any of the organs of the human body. It is indeed a dreadful case of catarrh, wherever located, that Peruna can not cure, or at least greatly help. It may be procured at all the drug stores, and it should be given a faithful trial by those who have tried in vain elsewhere to get relief.

A book on catarrh and catrrrhal diseases of 64 instructively illustrated pages will be sent free to any adress by The Peruna Drug Manufacturing Company of Columbus Ohio.

Killed Instantly.

Peter Rosselot fell while ascending one of the electric light towers at Ft. Wayne yesterday and was killed instantly. He was in the employ of the company and was in the act of ascending the tower to to trim the lamp.

It is customary for the trimmers to ascend to the platform at the top of the light tower by means of a sort of elevator cage. The cage is suspended by a wire and balanced by a 300 pound weight at the top which runs down as man and cage go up. It is probable that the ice and sleet had filled up the pulley groove causing the wire to slip off. Rosselot was ascending as usual. When about 30 feet from the ground he felt the wire and dodged to one side. There was no chance to jump. As he dodged, the heavy weight struck the heavy crossbeam above his head, and broke through it hitting him fairly on the skull, bounded off, completed its downward course and embedded itself as solidly in the ground as if it were a hitching post.

DeKalb Man

We have received from Spokane, Wash. a copy of the big 24 page edition the "Chronicle". Among the business men noticed in it, we find a DeKalb man, of course, as shown by this sub-head:

S. H. RUSH.

Prominent among the commercial establishments of Spokane is that of S. H. Rush, manufacturer of and dealer in harness, saddles and collars, bridles, whips, combs, brushes and general horse furnishing goods, whose offices, salesrooms and factory are at 818 Riverside avenue. In 1887 this business was established and from the outset has met with exceptional favor. The trade is both wholesale and retail. The premises consist of a floor and basement, each 100x24 feet in area, splendidly appointed and heavily stocked with the commodies handled, while the articles manufactured are unsurpassed for quality, durability and general excellence. Mr. S. H. Rush came to Spokane from the east ten years ago and has thoroughly identified himself with the city's interests.

HARPER'S BAZAR.

The twenty-ninth year of HARPER'S BAZAR, beginning in January, 1896 finds it maintaining its deserved reputation both as a Fashion Journal and a weekly periodical for home reading.

Every week the BAZAR presents beautiful toilettes for various occasions, Sandoz, Bande and Chapuis illustrate and engrave the newest designs from the finest models in Paris and Berlin. New York Fashions epitomize current styles in New York. A fortnightly pattern-sheet supplement with diagrams and directions enables women to cut and make their own gowns and is of great value to the professional modiste as well as to the ametuer dressmaker. Children's clothing receives constant attention. Fashions for Men are described in full detail by a man-about-town. Our Paris Letter, by Katharine DeForest, is sprightly weekly recital of of fashion, gossip, and social doings in Paris, given by a clever woman in an entertaining way.

Both the serials for 1896 are the work of America women, Mrs. Gerald, by Maria Louise Poot is a striking story of England life. Mary E. Wilkins, in Jerome, a poor man, discusses the always interesting problems of the relations between labor and capital. Short stories will be written by the best authors.

Social departments. Music, The Outdoor Woman, Personals, What We Are Doing, Women and Men, report and discuss themes of immediate interest.

Answers to Correspondents. Questions receive the personal attention of the editor, and are answered at the earliest practicable date after their receipt.

The Volumes of the BAZAR begin with the first Number for January of each year. When no time is mentioned, subscriptions will begin with the Number current at the time of receipt of Order.

Remittances should be made by Post-office Money Order or Draft, to avoid chance of loss.

CUPID'S DARTS

And Four Hearts were made to Beat as two.

This evening at six o'clock at the home of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. Benjamine Moffitt who reside near Jackson Center occurred the marriage ceremony of their daughter, Emma to Alvin Irven, of south Jackson township. Rev. Erlougher, of Waterloo officiating. The ceremony was performed in the presence of only a few of the near relatives, after which supper was served,

Mrs. Irven is a very worthy young lady and has many friends who will be pleased to learn of her marriage. Mr. Irven is one of Jackson township's respected, industrious farmers. He has by constant labor and economic living secured a good farm and has made the necessary improvements and now starts out in double blessedness with very flattering prospects. He and his estimable wife will commence housekeeping at once at their home one half mile west of Hopewell church. The COURIER joins with their friends in congratulations.

BUSS—HOSLER.

Mr. Will Buss and Miss Mary Hosler both employes at the County Farm were quietly married at the Lutheran parsonage at five oclock last night. Rev. J. D. Brosy officiating. Mrs. Buss is a sister of Libbie Hosler, one of the compositors on the DAILY COURIER. They left this afternoon for Fort Wayne where they will spend a few days the guests of Mrs. Buss brothers. Miss Libbie also accompanied them to Fort Wayne. The COURIER extends the usual congratulations.

New Management

Mr. H. Richwine is now operating the Auburn Roller Mills.

Mr. Hilt who has been in charge of the Auburn Roller Mills, located south of the Wabash depot, severs his connection with the institution to-night and will soon move his family to Georgia. The owner Mr. H. Richwine of Wabash will take charge of the mills at once and he has secured the service of "Doc" Baird, who will see that the flour is kept up to the present high standard. Mr. Biard has had many years experience as a miller and needs no introduction to the people of Auburn and DeKalb county. Mr. Richwine informs us that his two sons will move here at once and in the near future he will also move. We are glad to note the success of the product of the mill in the past and hope it may continue

A small fire originated in S D. Hatfield's residence to day. Loss but little.

The Bloodhound

Peru Sentinel

Since the bloodhound has come into use in Indiana as a means of hunting criminals, many interesting facts have been learned in regard to the real nature of the dog. The animal is commonly supposed to be a blood-thirsty, savage beast, with red eyes, frothing tongue, ready to spring on and tear its victim to pieces. Nothing can be further from the truth, The bloodhound is not even a dangerous animal, and is usually as harmless as any household pet. They will not bite a person unless especially trained to do so. Their duty begins and ends with taking the scent of a person and following it to the exact spot where the man is. The wrongful idea of the bloodhound has been permitted to exist, doubtless as a means to terrify the lawless and fleeing fugitives.

Surgical.

Miss Smith, a granddaughter of Andrew Smith, residing south of the Junction, has had serious trouble with one of her feet for about three years, and finally it was found that the only relief would be by a surgical operation. Last Thursday forenoon it was done. The physicians in charge of the operation were Drs. Matheny and Stamets, and it was done in their office here. The operation was a severe one as the body of the foot had to be opened and a portion removed The trouble was a cartilaginous growth or tumor that was growing within the foot. The operation was successful as far as indications point, and the patient is doing well with the hopes for her full recovery.

The Groundhog.

Yesterday, February 2, was "groundhog day," and a part of the day at least, was bright and sunshiny. According to "long established custom" the groundhog will come out of his winter quarters on that day, and if he sees his shadow, will have to go back and stay in six weeks. So we suppose he is now housed up till the middle of March. The woodchuck is of the "marmot" family, which includes a number of different animals, mostly in other countries. We do not know under what particular marmot administration the American marmot was appointed to take charge of the weather bureau, but he has been in the position many years, if we are to credit a very worthy class of citizens known as 'Pennsylvania Dutchmen." As this office is not a very great political snap, he is likely to hold the place for many generations to come.

A Battle Scarred Veteran.

Nearly everyone in Medina Co. Ohio, knows Stephen Rolph, of River Styx, the one legged veteran, who lost his leg at Winchester, Va., March 23, '62 In all probability the exposure and privations of army service, the effects of which are felt as they grow older by nearly all old soldiers, were the cause of the serious nervous prostration and sleeplessness of which Comrade Rolph complained. He says.

"People hereabout know me pretty well, but you can tell others that I was down for about six months with nervous prostration and sleeplessness for which I tried various doctors and medicines, but Dr. Wheeler's Nerve vitalizer has done me more good than all the doctoring I had done. The first bottle gave me such great relief that I have used several and feel almost restored to my former good health."

Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer can be relied upon by any who are suffering from nervous troubles, sleeplessness, etc. If all tired out and run down, you need a reliable nerve and system tonic and health restorer as this remedy is. Sold in Auburn by F. E. Davenport, and by all dealers everywhere. 1-5

J. W. Pierce, Republic, Ia., says: "I have used One Minute Cough Cure in my family and for myself, with results so entirely satisfactory that I can hardly find words to express myself as to its merit. I will never fail to recommend it to others on every occasion that presents itself." Davenport the Druggist. See book.

At Longcliff.

Tom Hallam is back from Logansport where he went, as noted in the DAILY, to take his brother-in-law, A. W. Hall of St Joe to the Asylum at Longcliff near that city. Mr. Hall himself was very quiet all the way and gave them no trouble. And he was apparently well pleased with the institution after he had got settled down there. Mr. Hall's trouble dates back from his service in the rebellion. He was in the artillery and the premature discharge of a gun he was helping to load, sent the load and explosion so close to his head that the drum of his ear was ruptured and this has caused him more or less trouble ever since. Lately it seemed to him that the whole side of his head had been torn away, and at times that some one had struck him violently on that side. His brain is no doubt affected by the injury, and it is doubtful if he ever will recover.

While at the asylum, Mr. Hallam saw Mr. McDougall and found him considerably improved, though his mind still wanders. Of course he knew Mr. Hallam at once, as he also recognizes all Auburn people who calls on him, and as at other times he asked to be brought home. He also called on Henry Miller of Ashley who seems contented and doing well.

It is nonsense for republican congressmen to talk of the financial trouble being caused by a lack of revenue. It is true there is a lack of receipts enough to equal expenses as, at least half of the monthly reports show. This was so in January, when the receipts fell short of the expenses, by over five millions. But the same report showed a balance on hand of 171 millions. And from this balance, the five millions had been already taken. Why then, should congress pass a bill to raise more revenue? The trouble is all in having to keep up that gold reserve.

An Honest Man's Story.

GREENVILLAGE, PA, JAN. 23, '96.

DEAR SIR: — Thank God there is a medicine that will cure catarrh. Mr Pretzinger, I used your sample box of catarrh which you sent me. May God bless you for your kindness I used the little box you sent me and about half of a 50c. jar. They keep it in Chambersburg. I have told a great many people about your medicine. Hon. Squire Britton, brother in law to me is using it; he says it is helping him very much; he has catarrh very bad. Mrs. G. D. Ludwig, daughter of me is using your medicine. I see it in the evening before retiring to bed and am feeling better now than I have for the last five years. My head is clear and I have more energy for work and business, Before I used your medicine I felt many a time whether I was living or dead; I had no energy; I did not care for anything. I had catarrh over sixty-seven years; mother had catarrh and it turned into consumption; she died in her sixty-fourth year. I have a farm up at Strasburg, seven miles from Greenvillage. On nice days I drive up to the farm and work. Mr. Pretzinger I think it would pay you to have it put in all the Franklin Co. papers as I am a reliable, honest man, so the people say, middling well acquainted all over the County.

Yours truly,
GEO. K. ZOLLINGER.

A Solution

Recently we published a problem in arithmetic in which we had two streets one 80 feet wide and one 60 feet wide. At one corner where these two streets crossed was a pole 100 feet high. What is the distance from the top of this pole to the ground at the corner diagonally across the street? To-day we received the following solution:

AUBURN, JAN., 31, 1896.

Mr. Editor: Sir, the problem in the last issue of The COURIER is solved thus, The streets are 80 and 60 feet wide, the pole 100 feet high.

80 squared equals	6,400
60 squared equals	3,600
100 squared equals	10,000
Total	20,000

The square root of 20,000 is 141 feet, 5 inches, which is the distance from the top of the pole to the ground at the corner diagonally across the street.

Rupture Cured

AUBURN, IND., Feb. 1, 1896.

As I have suffered severely from a large rupture in my right side for the past ten years being so large that an ordinary sized truss would pass through the opening. And hearing that Dr. Casebeer could cure ruptures, I concluded to let him try mine. To my surprise after a few treatments the break closed up and I can now go without my truss or any support, without any signs of rupture. The trouble in my stomach has subsided and my heart trouble improved and I feel much like myself again.

I take pleasure in recommending Dr. Casebeer and the Fidelity Rupture Cure to all thus affected as a success in this cure. As I know of a number he has cured beside myself.

A Pittsburg astronomer undertakes to explain the fact that a comet, whether advancing or receding, points its tail away from the sun by the theory that the tail is caused by the negative electrical force of the sun. A monument to Edgar Allan Poe is proposed in Baltimore, where he is buried. One suggestion is a stone canopy, under which the poet will be seen in marble, seated in an armchair, with an antique lamp overhead, and "volumes of forgotten lore" leaning against the chair. Near at hand, with the poet's dreamy gaze fixed upon it, will be the raven perched on a bust of Pallas. The citizens have been invited to form an art commission to carry out the striking idea.

In the first public sale of bonds, that of $50,000,000 in February, 1894, the offers reached $60,000,000, and in the second public sale, which was for the same amount in November of that year, the offers reached $150,000,000. Probably the bids for the $100,000,000 bonds which are to be sold next month will amount to $150,000,000 or $175,000,000. When that fact comes out in the publication of the amount of the bids the country will realize that the Government is in no danger of going into bankruptcy, despite the revenue shortages and the raids on the gold reserve.

His lordship, Windham-Thomas Wyndham-Quin, earl of Dunraven and Mount-Earl, Viscount Mount-Earl of County Limerick, Viscount Adare, also Baron Adare of Adare, also Baron Kenry of Kenry, knight of St. Patrick, baronet of Great Britain, etc., etc., etc., evidently did well to leave the country early. It is understood that some of his lordship's numerous friends abroad are now chivalrously scoring the investigating committee and asserting that it was guilty of prejudice in its consideration of the evidence. Considering the general character of the investigating committee this reproach will fall flat. If the committee has found that his lordship's charges of cheating were untrue it was because the evidence made it impossible for the committee to do anything else. There is a very vivid impression that the earl of Dunraven and Mount-Earl, Viscount Adare, baron of Kenry, etc., has not comported himself in this matter quite as well as would an ordinary American "all-around sport."

The Sultan does not propose to have Miss Clara Barton and her American friends feed and clothe such of his subjects as have escaped the swords in the hands of his soldiers. The chief reason that actuates the sublime porte is that "it is mindful of the true interests of its subjects," and does not propose to have any one assist it in attending to their wants and necessities. Such a reply is wholly worthy of such a sovereign, by whose orders more than half a million of his subjects have been murdered in cold blood and their homes pillaged and burned. This offer of relief to the suffering subjects of another government is not the first time the generosity of the American people has exhibited itself. In 1836 and 1847, during the potato famine in Ireland, the American people sent thousands of dollars' worth of food and other necessaries of life to the famishing dwellers in that island and received the thanks, not only of the Irish people, but of the British Government, which expended itself $50,000,000 for relief during those years of famine. Nor did the Russian Government object when, during the famine period in Southern Russia, in 1891 and 1892, the people of the United States sent several vessel loads of provisions and clothing to the poverty-stricken peasants. But Abdul Hamid objects to the people of the United States expending any money to aid such of his subjects as have survived the butcheries of the Kurds wearing the uniforms of his army and furnished with arms and ammunition from his arsenals. It is this well-known fact that makes his impudent refusal all the more insulting to the people of this country, while it calls for the most prompt and energetic action. If the European powers will not act in unison with our government we ought to act alone and as promptly as the exigencies of the case will admit.

The national association of milk, butter and cheese dealers, comprising what is known as the National Dairy Union, represents an army of pure food champions which is conducting a relentless war against the adulteration of dairy products. It is a work that merits the unqualified support of all citizens who appreciate the close relationship that exists between pure food and public health. Pure morals and pure food are the sine qua non of sound bodies and healthy minds. Of all food adulterations those substitutes for milk, butter and cheese that modern chemistry has made possible are the most deleterious, therefore the most reprehensible. It is doubtful if their manufacture can be fairly defended by any considerations of public need. The fact that there is a big market for imitation dairy products does not justify their sale. While the laws in many States are framed so as to compel the manufacturers of butter substitutes to label them as such, it is an undisputed fact that the people in thousands of instances are imposed upon by the adulterations. Against the work of the association is arrayed the solid influence of the manufacturers of imitation butter and filled cheese, backed by a capital of $10,000,000, which is capable of wielding great power in State Legislatures. The union has secured the passage of laws to protect honest dairy products in Nebraska, Kansas, Michigan, Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina, Massachusetts, Missouri, California, Washington and Colorado. Attempts to secure this kind of legislation from the last Legislatures in Illinois and Indiana failed, but the union is composed of such plucky fighters as ex-Governor Hoard, of Wisconsin, and James Hewes, of Baltimore, and it is only a question of a short time when Illinois, one of the greatest dairy States in the West, will have protective legislation of this character.

Get Free Coal from a Sand-Bar.

Farmers along the Ohio River for twenty miles above Portsmouth get their winter supply of coal from the river bed during extremely low water. During Confederate Gen. Morgan's raid through Ohio for strategic purposes he sank a fleet of over 200 coal barges. The barges and contents became an obstruction to the river, and in 1865 government engineers blew them up to open the channel. The coal has been steadily drifting down the river ever since. The chunks have been worn round by the force of the water. They range in size from a base-ball to a man's head. It is during the high water that they are kept in motion.

When the waters subside they lodge on the sand bars, and when the latter are high and dry the farmers pick the coal balls out of the bowlders and gravel. The shallows adjacent to the bars are also explored. The action of the water in all these years seems to have washed the sulphur out of the coal, greatly to its improvement. The coal balls are covered by a grayish deposit of lime, and can be handled without soiling the hands.—New York World.

Coal Ashes for Mulching.

Mr. George W. Carver, of the Iowa Agricultural College, in Rural Life, says: "I was surprised to find that every dumping place of coal ashes and cinders along the road was well set with strong plants of the wild rose, on which not a trace of mildew or rust could be found." It has not only proven beneficial to the rose, but also to the strawberry. Professor Goff, ten years ago, planted out a bed of Sharpless strawberries and mulched them heavily with coal ashes. The object was to see if this material would not act beneficially in keeping down the weeds. It not only did that to a marked degree, but the yield was more abundant than from another bed of the same variety that had received excellent culture. The plants have been almost entirely free from blight, though the Sharpless blights badly.

Early Eggs Best for Breeding.

It is always an advantage to secure the earliest eggs laid for breeding purposes. They are higher in price, but if care is taken that they are never chilled they will hatch a larger proportion of chicks, and the chicks themselves will be stronger than those from eggs laid later in the season. There is another advantage also, as the early chicks get through their moulting before cold weather sets in next fall, and with good feeding of egg-making material they will lay most of the time the next winter. A late-hatched chick has to be kept through one winter before it begins to lay, and then it produces eggs only when the price is the lowest.

The Yield of a Good Cow.

A "fairly good cow" makes from 150 to 200 pounds of butter per year, but a cow giving 6,000 pounds of 4 per cent. fat milk, if properly handled, should make on good feed not less than 225 to 250 pounds, says the Country Gentleman. To feed this cow in the North has been by common consent accepted as a fair charge. If charged up to her at actual cost of production, the figures would be much reduced; but this last is a most difficult point to settle upon, as labor and cost of crop production vary so with different States and localities.

RALLY OF ROBBERS.

HIGH-TARIFF CLAN IN CONGRESS ACTIVE.

Benton McMillin of Tennessee Exposes the False Philosophy of the Dingley Bill—Not Framed for Revenue, but to Enrich Manufacturers.

Would Make Clothing Dearer.

When the Dingley bill was being rushed through the House of Representatives the Hon. Benton McMillin, of Tennessee, vigorously attacked the unjust and fraudulent measure advocated by the Republican majority. Speaking of the proposed increase of duties on wool and woolens he said:

"But, sir, lest it should be supposed there is any benefit to come to the people from this bill, I want to call your attention briefly to the fact that when this bill shall have passed the House—for it will never become a law—when it shall have passed the House, it will have fixed on certain classes of woolen goods from 90 per cent. to 144 per cent.; on a very large portion of them from 75 to 100 per cent.; and all this is done under the pretext of the exigencies of the treasury.

Mr. Speaker, I will ask the House to go with me for a few moments into an examination of details of the high taxes again imposed on woolen goods by this bill. I have before me samples of woolen goods out of which our clothes are made, and will give the rates on some of them. These and their cost are furnished by a merchant of intelligence, integrity and experience, the correctness of whose statements cannot be questioned:

No. 1. Sample of English beaver for overcoating, weighing 26 ounces to the running yard, on which the present duty is 40 per cent., is increased by the proposed addition of 60 per cent. of the McKinley specific rate to 144 per cent. duty.

No. 2. Another sample of cloth for overcoating, weighing 27 ounces to the running yard, which now pays 40 per cent., must under this bill pay 119 per cent.

No. 3. Sample of English clay worsted, weighing 16 ounces to the running yard, which now pays 50 per cent. duty, will, when it has passed under the fostering hands of this body, pay a duty of 94 per cent.

No. 4 is a sample of English clay worsted, weighing 18 ounces to the running yard. The present duty is 50 per cent., yet this reckless majority proposes to almost double this duty by making it 95 per cent.

No. 5 is a sample of 32-inch serge coat lining made of cotton warp and worsted weft—one-third of the value and weight in the cotton, weighing 4 1-10 ounces to the yard. The present duty, 40 per cent., is under this bill increased to 96, which is absolutely prohibitory.

No. 8. A sample of English chinchilla for overcoats. The present duty of 40 per cent. is made 128, and the farmer who wears it is to console himself with the thought that while more than 200 per cent. has been added to this coat, which he must pay, 15 per cent. has been added to his corn and wheat, which he can never get.

Knit goods under 30 cents a pound, which are 35 per cent. under the present law, will be increased to 119 per cent. by this bill.

Unenumerated manufactures not above 30 cents a pound in value, which are now 40 per cent., will be raised to 116 per cent., or nearly trebled.

Other woolen goods unenumerated, worth from 30 to 40 cents, will be increased from 40 per cent. to 104.

Cloths not over 30 cents a pound in value, which are under the present law taxed only 40 per cent., will be taxed 116 per cent. by this measure. Those from 30 to 40 cents per pound in value will be increased from 40 per cent. to 108 per cent.

These are only samples, and not the most flagrant ones. Where the goods are less valuable, in many instances the rates are even higher than these. The old rule, so dear to the other side of the House—that the coarse goods used by the poor and humble should be taxed higher than the finer goods—has been most sedulously observed by them. All are taxed too much, but coarse goods are taxed most.

Now, what is the result of these great increases in practical affairs? The man who buys a suit of clothes bearing this 100 per cent. rate would, if he paid for it with labor, have to work ten hours for the manufacturer or to pay the import duty for every ten hours it took him to work out the intrinsic value of the goods. The woman who buys a shawl bearing the 90 per cent. rate would, if paying for it by sewing with a machine, have to work ten hours for the goods and then work nine hours to pay this legislative bonus to the manufacturer of the goods or to pay the duty at the custom house, if imported. We say and the Democratic party says that no American citizen should pay 100, 90, or 80 per cent. import duty or protection on any necessary of life and that no citizen of this country shall pay that rate.

Protectionist Logic.

The wholesale dry goods house of H. B. Claflin & Co., of New York City, one of the largest institutions of its kind in the country, recently published its balance sheet for 1895. The net profits for the year were $613,969, as compared with $488,312 in 1884, and only $323,786 in 1893. After stating that business had been remarkably good throughout the year, up to the time of the Venezuelan war scare in December, the report continued: "The adoption of the tariff bill now before Congress will result in an increase of profitable trade."

This is a choice sample of true protectionist logic. On its own showing the company made nearly twice as much money in 1895 under the Wilson tariff as in 1893, when the McKinley law was in force. Yet in spite of this fact, which should be enough to convince any intelligent business man that a period of high protection does not mean prosperity, and that trade may be profitable under a low tariff, the partisan Repubican manager of the company claims that if the tariff is increased business will improve! Perhaps he prefers the experience of 1893 to that of last year. But how about the interests of the stockholders. Do they want higher tariff duties and smaller profits?

To Work for High Duties.

The National Association of Manufacturers, an organization of protectionists who are engaged in manufacturing industries, held its second annual convention in Chicago recently. The meeting was noticeable for the frankness with which the various speakers declared their intention to agitate for higher duties; and for the evident purpose of the association to combine all the protected interests so as to use their influence in favor of more protection. Practically, no other question was considered but that of securing legislation by Congress which would increase the profits of manufacturers, and, as the members of the association are all McKinleyites, their convention was simply a Republican side show, which had no other purpose than perfecting plans for raising corruption funds.

On the question as to the methods of advancing the interests of the men who want protection, there was no pretense of concealment. It was openly advised that the association "should at once undertake to obtain as speedily as possible such changes in the tariff as will permit all domestic manufacturers to earn reasonable profits for themselves;" reasonable profits being whatever amounts additional tariff taxes would enable the protected manufacturer to wring from the consumers. And the result of the convention was that arrangements were made for raising a fund, rumored to be $200,000, to be used for political purposes during the coming campaign.

In view of this action of representatives of the interests which bought and paid for the favors of the McKinley bill, there can be no doubt but that the one great issue in the Presidential contest will be the restoration of high protection. It is evident that the country is to be plunged at once into an agitation for increased duties, and that all the power which the great protected trusts and monopolies can exert will be brought to bear on behalf of the Republican candidates. Nor is it to be merely an educational campaign. Wealthy manufacturers do not contribute large sums merely to pay for high tariff literature and orators. They may spend a little on those things as a blind, but the men who are furnishing the fat for political purposes know that the great bulk of their money will go into the corruption funds for use in doubtful States. And it is for that purpose that the National Manufacturers' Association is now preparing to put up its share of the public plunder which came through protection, and will be repaid a thousand fold if the McKinley law is restored.

Against this threat of the organized forces of high tariff robbery, the Democrats must be prepared to fight. They cannot meet corruption with money, but they can show the masses that such movements as this of the Manufacturers' Association are not in the interests of the people. All the facts and logic are on the side of the Democratic policy, and no amount of protectionist "education" can make sensible voters believe that the McKinley doctrine, which was condemned in 1892, is any better now. If the friends of tariff reform will but do their whole duty, all the corruption funds will be powerless to defeat the candidate who stands for low taxes, high wages, and Democratic good times.

The Average Is 41.75 Per Cent.

At an annual meeting of manufacturers in Chicago, on Tuesday, there was much talk about the present tariff and the tariff of McKinley. We learn from the dispatches which briefly report the proceedings that at a meeting of one section of the association there were adopted resolutions denouncing "British free trade" (these words referring to the present scheme of duties) and calling for a protective tariff.

How many of these gentlemen know what the average ad valorem rate of duties is under the tariff now in force? The Government's reports show that it was 41.75 per cent. last year upon the goods actually imported. The same reports show that the ad valorem rate for the four years of the McKinley tariff (annual average), was 48.65 per cent. If 48.65 per cent. was protection, is 41.75 per cent. "British free trade?"

Is there any other country in the world where an elaborate and complicated scheme of customs duties (including many which are so high that they are prohibitory), yielding $147,901,218 in customs taxes in a year, at the average rate of 41.75 per cent., upon imports valued at $354,271,990, would not be regarded by all intelligent men as a high protective tariff?—New York Times.

Tariffs Decrease Trade.

Arguing in favor of the enactment into law of the Dingley tariff bill the New York Tribune says: "With a tariff passed which would add a large percentage to duties on nearly all imported goods, and especially on wool, woolens and lumber, better prices and larger transactions would be encouraged." By "better prices" the Tribune means higher prices, for in the same editorial it complains that prices of goods are now too low.

The plain people of the country, who have at times become confused by high-tariff jugglery with facts and statistics, whereby it has been asserted that every good thing owes its existence to the effects of protection, and that wages were higher and prices lower because of heavy import duties, will find in this utterance of a representative Republican journal a test of the main principle on which the McKinleyite theory is based. If it be true that the increased duties of the Dingley bill would result in higher prices, the Democratic claim that protection makes goods dearer cannot be denied. If goods will cost more under a higher tariff than under the present law, it follows that an increase in tariff taxes means increased prices to the consumers of goods. There can be no escape from this conclusion. Either it is true that the advance in duties proposed by the Dingley bill would, as the Tribune says, raise prices, or it is not true. If not true, then it would not benefit in the least degree the producers in whose interests it is claimed it was passed by the House.

A second protectionist error is repeated by the Tribune in its absurd claim that larger business transactions would be encouraged by a law which increased prices. Put in its simplest form this is equal to saying that if things can only be made to cost more people will buy more of them. And this argument is put forward seriously as a reason why the country should abandon its low-tariff policy and return to McKinleyism.

Does anyone actually believe that higher prices stimulate trade? Is it not a fact that except for the brief time during which merchants were laying in stocks of goods in anticipation of a rise, increased cost has always meant diminished sales? The experience of every man who has anything to sell, or who buys goods, flatly contradicts the Tribune's claim. People do not hasten to buy things because they are dearer, but just the reverse. If a protectionist merchant were to advertise: "Great advance in prices," or "Large stock of dearer goods now opening," would there be a rush to his store? Evidently not. Buyers go where they can get goods cheapest, and the lower prices fall, the greater the amount of things sold. Any advance in cost of an article, no matter how small it may be, inevitably operates to check sales. Nothing is more certain than that every reduction in price has been followed by increased consumption.

This is a point which the masses of the people can settle for themselves. They have only to suppose a general increase in the cost of the staple articles they use, and then as "would I be able to buy as much goods if prices were 15 or 20 per cent. higher than they are now?" There is only one answer possible, and it will show the absurdity of the pretense that a scheme to make goods dearer, even if called "better prices," would encourage trade. As every sensible consumer knows, increasing the cost of goods by high tariff taxes, would certainly result in greatly lessening consumption. This, of course, would injure production; and so in the long run would not only hurt the people in their capacity of consumers, but as producers as well. The best interests of the whole people are served by a policy which enables them to get as much as possible of all the kinds of wealth they need. Any plan to increase sales by raising prices is ridiculous and a fraud.

Fossilized Sea Horse.

One of the queerest relics of a bygone age yet unearthed in Montana was found a short thime ago near Bannock, and is now in the possession of Jules Guyaz of Medicine Lodge. The relic was found by placer miners sixteen feet below the surface, and is the petrified remnant of an animal that raised its young, fought its battles and lived its life thousands of years ago, when Montana was covered by a sea which is not recorded upon the maps of the present day, and had a climate probably similar to that of Africa. Mr. Guyaz is a graduate of the celebrated Jardin des Plantes of Paris and is a naturalist of ability. To the find he attaches considerable importance. It is apparently the head and upper jaw of a variety of the sea horse, and is about eighteen inches long from the point of the nose to the top of the head. About midway along the nose is a large hump several inches long and as many high. The eyes are set very far back toward the base of the head. No sign of nostrils appears, indicating that the animal to which the head belonged was distinctly of the amphibia class. The teeth are small and perfect, extending entirely around the mouth to the back of the jaws. In the center of several of the teeth perfect crystals are formed, a fact of considerable importance from the scientific standpoint. The entire piece is perfectly petrified.—Minneapolis Journal.

An Epidemic of Toothache.

One of the most singular epidemics ever reported is one of toothache, which broke out among the officers of the British army engaged in the Chitral campaign a few months ago. A careful medical investigation of the strange visitation is in progress, and the statistics promise to be highly interesting.

Some farmers in Massachusetts returned to the census enumerator four bushels of flaxseed as the yield of that State; New Jersey did four bushels better, raising in all eight bushels; while Arkansas claimed twelve bushels and 26 pounds of fiber.

TO BUILD A NEW CITY.

OLD WAR VETERANS GOING TO THE SOUTH.

A Grand Army Colony in Georgia Which Promises to Be a Big Success—Emigrants Flocking In with a Western Rush.

The First Town.

A Fitzgerald, Ga., correspondent, writing of the new G. A. R. colony being founded there, says: The men who followed Sherman to the sea are once more "marching through Georgia." But the people of this State do not look upon the present invasion with such consternation as they did on that of over thirty years ago, for this is one of peace—the invaders have come to live with the invaded. The movement to colonize members of the G. A. R. in the South has made a fine start and already Fitzgerald, the "metropolis" of the colony, has a population of several thousand.

Fitzgerald is in Irwin County and not five miles distant from the spot where Jefferson Davis was captured. The original plan of this colony was to provide a home in a milder climate for the veterans of the Federal armies. The project started with Philip Fitzgerald, a pension attorney and wealthy property owner of Indianapolis. At least 4,000 veterans have put their money into this co-operative movement and decided to come South. These old soldiers and their families make a total of about 16,000 persons. It was at first intended to defer the opening of the colony until next spring, but the immigrants could not hold back and they are now coming by hundreds and thousands from all over the country north of the Ohio river, and between the Mississippi river and the Rocky Mountains, fleeing from the rigors of Northern winter.

FIRST HOUSE IN THE G. A. R. COLONY.

The immigration is a reminder of the rush to the West before the day of railroads. Wagon trains are climbing the mountains and crossing the valleys. Of the 3,000 settlers who have arrived at Fitzgerald in the last thirty days a large proportion came overland by wagon. There are immigrants who drove all the way from the Dakotas, Kansas, Nebraska, and one family was six months on the journey from the State of Washington. These people drove every mile from the far northwestern corner of the country to the extreme southeastern corner.

The movement has gone far beyond the Grand Army and thousands of young men and a great many men who pioneered in the West have joined it. But old soldiers are in the majority. The pension disbursements at the colony will exceed $50,000 a month. Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Missouri are represented by a class of sturdy young men who have come to farm. They say that the farms in their native States have been cut up so small that their fathers cannot afford to further subdivide. The boys, upon coming of age, have to strike out for themselves. Hitherto they have set their faces toward the land beyond the Mississippi and the Missouri, but they prefer a more genial climate.

The colony has bought 35,000 acres and has options on 65,000 more. The shareholders in the co-operative company get their land at cost, which, however, includes the outlay for surveying and grading the entire tract, city lots and all. Ex-Gov. William J. Northen, of Georgia, sold the land to the colony at $3.50 an acre, although some of it cost him a great deal more. One thousand acres were laid off for a city site.

Like an Oklahoma Town.

At present the town site resembles Oklahoma City or Guthrie thirty days after the public lands were thrown open. While most of the little pine board shacks are grouped in one corner of the reservation, they are found straggling through the forest for two miles. At night the woods are illuminated by huge bonfires of pine logs around which the settlers assemble to discuss the future of the colony.

The tract of land upon which the colony is located is a high, rolling ridge about twenty-five miles wide and 150 miles long, extending through half a dozen counties in Georgia to the gulf coast in Florida. It is thickly wooded with the long-leaf pine. The turpentine manufacturer has worked some of the forest, but not all of it. The lumberman has not yet made an impression on it. The soil is not of the sandy character so common in south Georgia, but is dark, somewhat resembling the prairie soil, except that this has an iron pebble, which indicates a fine fruit soil. That the land will raise splendid fruit has been shown by the success of some Connecticut men, the Tifts, and a colony of Pennsylvanians who have settled on the western edge of the ridge.

All who were at the colony believe firmly in its future. There are 54,000 men, women and children already in the movement. Every train brings fresh arrivals and the population is growing at the rate of from 50 to 200 a day. Next month a railroad will be completed to the colony, and by spring there will be another. The soil is unquestionably fine and the climate healthful. Artesian wells strike water at a depth of 150 feet. The settlers say when the success of the colony is demonstrated there will be a great movement from the Northwest.

THE G. A. R. COLONY AT FITZGERALD, GA.

CUBANS IN THE SEA.

The Filibustering Steamer J. W. Hawkins Sinks Off Long Island.

The steamer J. W. Hawkins, bound from New York to Cuba on a filibustering expedition, was abandoned at sea off Long Island Sunday night in a terrific gale, and of the 176 men on board only 113 are accounted for. Ten are known to have been drowned, and it is believed fifty-three others met a like fate.

The Hawkins was of 125 tons net, and was built at Kennebunk, Me., in 1880. She was for years engaged in the fishing business, but as she had proved unprofitable she had for a long time lain idle in Baltimore harbor. Two weeks ago a man representing himself as a Mr. Tinsley approached the owners with an offer, saying he wished to buy the craft for a Mr. Smith of New York. There was no haggling over the price, and it did not take him long to become the owner of the steamer. There was an old account of the crew hanging fire, but he at once paid it. Then a local ship yard came forward with a bill, which was also paid on the spot. Obstacles seemed to melt away before his haste, for when two firms threatened to bring libel suits against the steamer their claims were paid in full as soon as a figure was named. She was at once taken to New York, where a little band of men was gathered in readiness to get on board, their intention being to join the Cuban army and fight in the ranks.

In spite of the vigilance of the Spanish emissaries a brass cannon worth $5,000, ammunition that cost $25,000 and 176 men were taken safely on board. Sunday night she sailed from that port, commanded by a Capt. Woodrow. Unfortunately, however, the boat was unfit for sea, and the hasty preparations had allowed no time for a thorough examination of her bottom, for she had proceeded only as far as the eastern end of Long Island when she sprung a dangerous leak and began to settle in the water. In spite of all the crew could do the leak gained with fearful rapidity, and within twenty minutes all had to take to the five small boats.

BLOW TO THE G. A. R.

Western Railroads Refuse to Grant Traffic Concessions.

The next national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic may go to Buffalo. St. Paul was the prize winner at last year's national encampment, but the Western Passenger Association will not make a rate satisfactory to the Grand Army of the Republic, which fact may change the place of meeting. A delegation from St. Paul was in Chicago to try to "argue it out," and they brought the Commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic with them, but the Western Passenger Association was obdurate and held out for a high rate of fare. So Commander-in-chief Walker will call a council of war to determine where the next encampment shall be held.

At last encampment, which was held in Louisville, it was voted that the next encampment should be held in St. Paul. A stipulation, however, was made that it should go there only in case a satisfactory rate could be obtained from the railroads. The Western roads bid for the patronage of the G. A. R. encampment at St. Paul by authorizing a rate of 1 cent per mile for the round trip, with a seven-day limit. At the same time a rate of one fare for the round trip to the Knights of Pythias conclave, to be held in the same city in August, was granted and a thirty-day limit authorized. Commander-in-chief Walker and prominent citizens of St. Paul immediately took issue over the seven-day limit placed on the G. A. R. excursion tickets, and every effort has been made to get the Western Association to reconsider its action and deal as fairly with the G. A. R. as with the Knights of Pythias.

With one exception the tickets to all the Grand Army of the Republic reunions held during the past ten years have been based on a thirty-day limit. The exception was the reunion held in Milwaukee. A similar dispute took place at that time, the Western roads refusing to deal liberally with the veterans. Only one excuse is put forward by the railroads for the decided stand taken on the question. This is that the thirty-day limit, if granted, means a complete demoralization of rates in Western territory and a rich harvest for the scalpers.

M'AULIFF'S BAD WING.

Details of How It Will Again Be Broken and Reset.

Lightweight champion, Jack McAuliffe, has determined to make one more effort to condition himself to re-enter the ring. But before he can make this effort he will have to undergo a course of rigorous training to get his physical condition into such shape that a surgical operation may be performed, that may restore to McAuliffe the use of his left arm, or may leave it a useless cripple. The lightweight champion broke his arm in a fight with Owen Zeigler, and as now known it was a transverse fracture of the radius and was improperly treated. Calculi have formed around the fracture, owing, it is said, to the rapid gait at which McAuliffe has been traveling of late, and these make the case more complicated. McAuliffe has been plainly told what he would be compelled to undergo, and has accepted the chance. If his enforced training brings him to the physical point his surgeon insists upon, the arm will be again broken at the original point of fracture and properly reset.

CUBA MAY BE FREE.

HOW SPAIN'S RECALL OF CAMPOS IS REGARDED.

The Veteran Spanish General Is Superseded by a Man Who Is Deeply Hated for His Former Cruelty on the Island.

Situation Is Serious.

Cuba may be free! The recall of Gen. Martinez Campos by the Spanish Government and his replacement by Gen. Weyler is a strong indication that the situation on the island is critical and that the insurgents are stronger than the Spanish authorities hitherto admitted.

On the outbreak of the revolution it was intimated by Spain that the disturbance was merely local and that a few months would see the end of the trouble. But the revolutionists gained strength every day, and then Spain decided to send her veteran and most experienced general, Campos, to take command of affairs on the island.

He was given absolute authority to call upon all the troops needed and ever since the bravest and the best of the soldiers of Spain have been sent to the unfortunate island. Gen. Campos announced that he would quell the rebellion in three months. He had subdued the former rebellion of ten years—1868-'78—and his announcement was accordingly regarded as well founded. But the three months elapsed and Gen. Campos had made no progress. On the contrary the insurgents were making headway, forcing their way each week a little nearer to the political capital, Havana. Then Campos said that winter would see the end of the revolution. Winter in Cuba, which means the rainy season, has come, but the insurgents, instead of Campos, made progress. They forced their way over six strategic lines of defense established by Campos and a week ago appeared within striking distance of Havana. This startled the Spanish Government and it has just resolved upon a change of leaders. Gen. Campos is recalled and Gen. Weyler, a man who made himself notorious during the last rebellion in Cuba for his cruelty, is appointed to take his place and will sail from Spain today. Gen. Weyler says that he will not follow the more or less humanitarian tactics of Campos, but will meet warfare with warfare. With spies and persons aiding the insurgents he will be inexorable; to those who lay down their arms he will show clemency. He will at once endeavor so completely to blockade the coast as to prevent the further importation of arms and munitions. Gen. Weyley says emphatically that in his course he will be merciless, but just. He is of the opinion that two months ago it would have been easy to have dealt the rebellion a death blow; now he fears it will be more difficult owing to the strength the movement has gained and the losses suffered by the Spanish army. Spain is still sending reinforcements to Cuba, and soon 18,000 more men will leave Spain for the seat of war.

At first it was supposed that Gen. Campos had resigned, but it is now known that the Government removed him, purely, as Campos himself says, because he was not cruel enough and spoke of conciliating the rebels instead of butchering them. He now believes that Cuba is lost to Spain and all through the political parties in Spain, who thought to frame a policy for the island, ignorant of the conditions there existing. The politicians in Madrid wanted a butcher in the field and probably have secured one in the person of Gen. Weyler.

Over the change of generals the Cuban patriots rejoice, for they believe Campos to be an abler commander than Weyler, while the cruelties of the latter will alienate those now friendly to the Spanish cause. In any case it is not likely that Weyler will make any greater headway than Campos against the insurgents, led by the veteran warrior, Maximo Gomez. The latter is one of the ablest military leaders of his time—a man of iron nerve and astute judgment. He has led the insurgents victoriously from one end of the island to the gates of Havana, 400 miles distant, and this in the face of a soldiery, greater in numbers and better equipped than the patriots. When Weyler meets him he will meet a veteran, acquainted not alone with the science of warfare, but with every pass and road and vantage point on the island.

BUNYON PASSES AWAY.

Heart Failure the Cause of His Sudden and Unexpected Death.

The Hon. Theodore Runyon, United States ambassador to Germany, expired in Berlin suddenly and unexpectedly at 1 o'clock Monday morning of heart failure. Mr. Runyon had been in somewhat feeble health for some time past, but no immediately fatal results were anticipated. No longer ago than last Tuesday evening he was present at a dinner given in his honor by ex-Empress Frederick, mother of Emperor William. Last summer he had planned to make an extended trip through Norway, but on the advice of his physician he abandoned this trip, and instead went to Carlsbad, where he took the cure. He subsequently went to Axenstein, in Switzerland, for the purpose of taking an after-cure. Since that time, however, he has manifested great activity in the discharge of the duties of his office, which have been more than usually onerous on account of the complications in European affairs, and have more or less demanded the attention and care of the diplomatic representatives of all nations.

Theodore Runyon was born at Somerville, N. J., Oct. 25, 1822. He graduated from Yale College in 1842, and in 1846 was admitted to the bar. In 1853 he was made city attorney, and in 1856 city councilor of Newark, N. J., a position he retained until 1864, when he became Mayor of the city. At the outbreak of the civil war he was placed in command of a New Jersey brigade of volunteers. In 1865 he was Democratic candidate for Governor of his State, but was not elected. In 1873 to 1887 he was chancellor of New Jersey. In March, 1893, he was appointed by President Cleveland United States minister to Germany, and shortly afterward was made ambassador.

HARD HIT AT TURKEY.

Hepburn Urges that the Minister of the Porte Be Given Passports.

The national House Monday, after an interesting four hours' debate, adopted the resolutions passed by the Senate last week calling on the powers signatory to the treaty of Berlin to enforce the reforms in Turkey guaranteed to the Christian Armenians, and pledging the support of Congress and the President in the most vigorous action he might take for the protection and security of American citizens in Turkey. The House committee had prepared some resolutions on the same subject, but it was deemed advisable after the Senate resolutions reached the House to substitute them for those prepared by the committee.

Mr. Quigg, of New York, who had charge of the resolutions, made an able presentation of the case. There was a disposition on the part of some of the members to go further than the resolutions did and Mr. Hepburn, of Iowa, proposed to give the Turkish minister his passports and sever all diplomatic relations with Turkey. His remarks denouncing the Turkish outrages and charging that the powers signatory to the treaty of Berlin were actuated from political and other considerations in maintaining the "balance of power" in eastern Europe were received with great enthusiasm and at one time it looked as if the House might be carried to his way of thinking. But the counsel of Mr. Hitt not to take rash action, in the course of which he pointed out the dire consequences that might result from a severance of diplomatic relations with a friendly power that had fulfilled her treaty obligations to us, prevailed, and the Hepburn proposition was overwhelmingly defeated.

Mr. Bailey opposed the resolutions on the ground that it would be improper for us to "insult" the parties to the treaty of Berlin by intimating that they had not carried out their obligations. Mr. Turner of Georgia took a similar view and Mr. Grosvenor of Ohio characterized the resolutions as "incomplete, inefficient and unworthy," and requested the committee to withdraw them. They were finally passed, however, by a vote of 143 to 26, after a motion of Mr. Bailey to send them to the committee had been defeated 56 to 103.

WALCOTT'S BRITISH SPEECH

Senator's Recent Return from England Gives It a Bad Odor.

Senator Walcott's aggressive speech, in which he denounced the Venezuelan Commission, the President's message, the Morgan resolution on the Transvaal and the Davis declaration on the Monroe doctrine, and expressed the hope that the English would prove their claim to the gold fields on the Orinoco, has, according to a Washington correspondent, stirred up a hornets' nest.

Many members of the Senate believed in the principles laid down so forcibly in the Davis declaration, but believed also it was inexpedient to express it at this time owing to the prospect of a peaceable settlement between Venezuela and Great Britain. These Senators weredisposed to chime in with Wolcott in attacking the Davis resolution on the ground of expediency alone, but when he proceeded to give away the whole case of the United States and denounce the President for his message and the Senate for authorizing the communication there was a decided revulsion of feeling.

Senator Wolcott has just returned from England, and, it is said, he is not yet free from the social influences there. His speech was intended to allay the war feeling and stop the jingo talk, but he went so far in the other direction that there is certain to be a revival of anti-British speeches. Senator Wolcott's speech is being severely commented on, and the prediction is freely made that his eulogy of all things English, coming at this time, may cost him his seat in the Senate when he comes up for re-election, although his term does not expire for five years.

Wiser than Solomon.

A man was recently tried for stealing a watch from a lady in an omnibus.

The man declared that the watch was his and the woman was mistaken in identifying it as hers. Suddenly the magistrate asked: "Where's the key?"

The prisoner fumbled in his pockets and said he must have left it at home.

The magistrate asked him if he wound the watch frequently with the key, and he said: "Yes."

Then a key was procured, watch and key were handed the prisoner, and he was told to wind the watch. He opened the case, but could not find any place to use the key. It was a keyless watch!

He was committed for trial.—London Amusing Journal.

GOLD AT CRIPPLE CREEK.

And the Best Way to Get There Is Over the Santa Fe Route.

The fabulously rich gold mining district of Cripple Creek, Colo., is attracting hundreds of people. By spring the rush bids fair to be enormous. That there is an abundance of gold there is demonstrated beyond doubt.

To reach Cripple Creek, take the Santa Fe Route from Chicago or Kansas City. The only standard gauge line direct to the camp. Through pullman sleepers and free chair cars. The Santa Fe lands you right in the heart of Cripple Creek.

Inquire of nearest ticket agent, or address G. T. Nicholson, G. P. A., T. & S. F. R. R., Monadnock Block, Chicago.

IMPORTANT DECISION.

Walter Baker & Co.'s Cocoa to be Sold in Ohio.

On the 5th day of December last, Messrs. Walter Baker & Co., Limited, Dorchester, Mass., well and widely known for more than a century as manufacturers of Cocoa and Chocolate preparations, issued a circular to the trade in which they stated that they had decided to withdraw all their grocers' goods from sale in Ohio. "We take this course," they said, "because it seems the only one open to us in view of the numerous prosecutions that have been instituted against parties selling our products since the recent decision of the Court of Common Pleas of Cuyahoga County in the proceedings against Mr. Rose, of Cleveland, for selling our Breakfast Cocoa.

"In that case the chemist employed by the State testified that the sample 'was made from pure cocoa, with no other adulteration than the removal of the oil.' He also testified that he never had examined any powdered cocoa' except the oil had been removed or starch or Sugar added' and that, without such removal or addition, it was impossible to make a powdered cocoa which would keep in our climate.

"The name Breakfast Cocoa is applied only to powdered cocoa; and we have always stated conspicuously, on every can, exactly how ours is made—namely, by removing 'the excess of oil' without the use of any chemicals and without the addition of starch or sugar.

"Our object has been to produce an extract of cocoa containing the stimulating and exhilarating properties of the bean in the most convenient, concentrated and digestible form; and our success has been fully attested by the leading physicians and teachers of cooking. We fully believe we have adopted the best method known for the purpose, and there is no question that the demand for the product is great and greatly increasing."

On the 18th January, Messrs. Walter Baker & Co., issued another circular to the trade in which they said:

"The Circuit Court of Cuyahoga County has reversed the decision of the Court of Common Pleas to which we referred in our circular of December 5, and decided that our Breakfast Cocoa, being a pure article, made from the cocoa bean by the removal of the excess of oil, is not within the provisions of the food law of Ohio, and that it may be sold with its present label. This sustains us in the position which we have always maintained.—that the law is intended to prevent adulteration and not to interfere with trade in purified products, when sold under their appropriate names.

"We therefore take pleasure in announcing to you that we shall at once place our Breakfast Cocoa on sale again in Ohio; and for the convenience of the trade we shall see that a full supply reaches the State at an early day to replace what has been withdrawn."

Forecasters.

Some people are so influenced by the electric currents of the atmosphere that they can foretell the coming of a thunder storm with perfect accuracy, and others there are with nerves so sensitive that they are sure of having neuralgia from a low and fretful state of the nervous system. Now why can't the latter be warned in time and know that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. To use St. Jacobs Oil promptly will ward off an attack, or if attacked, will promptly cure. Such people can do for themselves what others do from weather prophecies, heed the signals and save the wreck and disaster.

In the event of war Great Britain could put in the field 662,000 officers and men, with 696 guns, against Germany's 4,643,923 soldiers and 3,470 guns.

The most of the world's petroleum is produced in the Unites States, our only important competitors being Russia.

A great many men throughout the country, including plenty of really swell fellows, have got it into their heads, rightly or wrongly—and we are by no means sure that it isn't rightly—that there is no reason why any man should pay more than $3.00 to $5.00 for a pair of shoes, and, to say the least, the idea has this foundation in reason, that excellent shoes are now made for $3. To pay $8 to $12 for a pair of shoes is simply throwing away money, and in many cases this is done to gratify a mistaken notion that none but your favorite shoemaker is worthy to adorn your feet. The recent improvements in shoe machinery make it possible, as shown by the well-known W. L. Douglas $3 Shoe, to produce a shoe to-day that will compare favorably in style, wearing qualities and comfort with those offered at $6, $8 and $10 per pair.

A Canal Choked Up

Is practically useless. The human organism is provided with a canal which sometimes becomes choked up, namely, the bowels, through which much of the effete and waste matter of the system escapes. When they are obstructed—constipated, in other words—Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will relieve them effectually, but without pain, and institute a regular habit of body. This medicine also remedies malarial, bilious, dyspeptic, rheumatic, nervous and kidney trouble, and strengthens the entire system.

RIPANS TABULES

Mr. W. D. White, the advertising specialist, who is to be found at No. 221 West Bancroft street, Toledo, O., asserts that in his case dyspepsia was an inheritance. He obtained his first supply of Ripans Tabules by remitting 50 cents to Lord, Owen & Co., the wholesale druggists of Chicago, because he could not then find them in Toledo. Now the druggists there have them—always have them. Mr. White asserts that he carries one of the little vials with him, and if he has that distressed feeling after a hearty meal, or a headache, he takes a Tabule. His wife also uses them, and, writes Mr. White, "if my boy feels sick, he asks for one."

Ripans Tabules are sold by druggists, or by mail if the price (50 cents a box) is sent to The Ripans Chemical Company, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York. Sample vial, 10 cents.

A Lay Sermon.

Editor Barns, I am full and running over, and having no audience in whose presence I may proclaim my views, and also realizing the fact that you sometimes open the columes of your paper for the introduction of a short sermon, I therefore take liberty to send you the following sermon with the prayer that you will kindly publish it, and that every christian may read and ponder upon it.

In view of the fact that a majority of the preachers now days take their text out of the bible, I propose to follow suit and take my text out of the bible. And as my text or starting point, I desire to state that quite recently a young girl who is just budding into womanhood and upon whom nature has bestowed her gifts with a bountiful hand, was arrested on a charge of obtaining five dollars by means of false pretenses; was bound over and sent to jail to await the action of the grand jury at our next term of court, I desire to further state that this girl once had a christian mother with whom I and my family were well acquainted and whose cold and lifeless body my wife assisted in preparing for its resting place amidst the city of the dead, at which time this girl was but two years of age. That christian mother, as she was about to embark upon the chilly waters of death for that beautiful shore, committed her babe to the care of christian fathers, christian mothers, to christian brothers and christain sisters of Waterloo. Let us inquire how faithfully have we performed that sacred trust. This girl was cast upon the great river of time at an early and tender age down whose turbit waters, she was compelled to float and thus far in that voyage how many of us have extended to her a helping hand or given her a word of friendly advice? The question asked by one standing in the dawn of man's creation, "Am I my brother's keeper" has come ringing down along the ages until it is pressed upon you and me with all its accumulated force gleaned from the teaching of the Gospel of the Son of God. It has been said that when Stanley and Livingston met in the wilds of Africa extending their hands each to the other they stood and silently wept. What a picture for our contemplation, two sturdy men each the representative of a continent, one from the orient, the other from the western Main standing in the presence of those dark skinned savages their feet pressing the virgin soil of darkest Africa beneath the broad branches of those giant forest trees, silently weeping. And yet this pathetic picture only adds additional proof of the common brotherhood of man. And it was Christ's mission on this earth to more firmly cement this common brotherhood and it was to this end that, he gave us his Gospel. Let us hear what Paul, the great apostle, to the gentiles, says regarding this matter in his letter to the Romans, first chapter, sixteenth verse, "For I am not ashamed of Christ for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one who believes, to the Jew first and also to the Greek." There are those who maintain that Paul was a fanatic at the time he made this bold declaration; others say he was an enthusiast and that his words are visionary and we must confess that considering the time it was enunciatnd it was at least a cold and startling proclamation. The gifted but infidel Gibbon informs us in his Decline and fall of the Roman empire that at this time Rome was the mistress of all the civilized world and that all the wealth learning and philosophies of the nations were pouring into the seven hilled city. And yet in the face of all this Paul was anxious to come among them for the express purpose of proclaiming the teachings of one who had but recently been crucified on a Roman cross and say to the gaping, wondering throngs that this same Jesus had given to the world a gospel that was the power of God unto salvation.

The only gospel ever proclaimed to the children of men claiming the power to make a good man out of a bad man a good woman out of a bad woman. Those ancient schools had their teachers who taught different and varied systems of philosophy but no pupil was permitted to enter their schools unless he was wealthy and honorable and not only this but he must have sprung from a noble family. These facts lent additional force to the message Christ sent to John who was in prison and heard of the wonderful workers of Jesus and havining sent messengers to Christ to enquire whether he was the Christ or whether we should yet look for another. Jesus said, go tell John that the blind receive their sight and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up and the poor have the gospel preached to them, Matt. 11th chapter, 5th verse. But not only were those ancient schools powerless to change the hearts of men, for the institutions of the present make no such claims or presentations; we have many secret organizations in our midst and I am finding no fault with any of them, yet more of them pretend that they can make a good man out of a bad man. Let a profane knock at their door for admission and the first thing they do is to appoint a committee whose duty it is to investigate his character and if their committee report him a thief, a robber and a liar their hands go up in holy horor and the black balls begin to drop into the ballot box until it looks darker than the shades of eternal night. Paul was anxious to go to Rome and redeem their out casts from society and bring them back into the great brotherhood of men, teach them of a higher life, of a holier sphere. He had already witnessed the Almighty's power of the story of the cross. He had in passing along the gravel walks of Jerusalem beheld the motely throngs as they gathered round the illiterate fisherman of Galilee on the day of Pentecost and heard the wonderful proclamation of Peter that God hath made that same Jesus whom ye have crucified both Lord and Christ, Acts 2nd chap. 36th verse Had at that that time seen three thousand of those stiff necked Jews bow their heads in meek submission to the mandates of the crucified One. In a few days after had witnessed the conversion of five thousand more and in a short time thereafter had heard the startling news that seven thousand more had bathed themselves in the blood of Jesus and were marching under the flag of the cross. Had witnessed the rapid strides of this gospel until at the close of eight years from its promulgation at Jerusalem it had smitten the woole land of Samaria by the sword of the spirit. What good Almighty power could have done so much against such opposition. In a word Paul had felt the cleansing power of this gospel in his own heart and was therefore anxious to proclaim it to others. Now what is Paul going to say to those Romans when he gets there? Is he going to teach them the doctrine of original sin, the philosophy of faith or the intricacies of Arminianism? No, he is only going to tell them the story of the cross; tell them that Jesus came into this world that he might not only teach the children of men how to live, but by His own life might give them an object lesson which we may safely follow; tell them how Jesus of Bethlehem spent his life in doing good binding up the broken hearts, drying the tears of sorrow, stooping down and taking poor fallen humanity by the hand and raising them up, teaching them of a higher life in this world and of holy aspirations in that life to come. The most beautiful words ever spoken by the Empress Josephine was when she said in her dying hour, "I have never caused one tear to flow." She possessed the spirit of Christ, had been with Jesus and learned of him. Paul says God was in Christ reconciling the world unto Himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them, and hath committed unto us the work of reconciliation, II Cor. 19v. Now, if it be true that the life of love that Christ lived on this earth is to redeem the world, and the work or life of love hath been committed unto us, what manner of life ought we to live? How does our individual life compare with the life that Christ lived? How many poor, fallen creatures of weak humanity have we assisted in raising up out of the dark and terrible pit into which they have fallen, and by our work of love restored to their rank in the great brotherhood of man. Surely we lack no opportunity here in Waterloo. The fields are white and waiting for the harvest. Our streets and walks are being pressed by the unhallowed tread of human sharks who are lurking along our highways, our byways and alleys waiting for an opportunity to pounce upon our sons and daughters in an unguarded moment and rob them of more than life. I appeal to the christain mothers and christain sisters of Waterloo to make greater efforts in rescuing these fallen daughters of Eve. Not by attempting to pry them out of the miry pit with a twenty foot lever, but by stooping down and taking hold of them with loving hands and teaching them in love of a higher life, of a holier sphere in which to live It is said, and I believe truly said, that the sisters are the bone and sinew of the church. But in view of what Christ has done for women is there not a good reason for this state of facts? When Jesus came on earth women among pagan nations were considered but little above beasts of burden. They were publicly bought and sold in the marts and shambles of all the cities. It is said of Socrates that he thanked the gods for three things: First, that he was born an intelligent being and not a brute; second, that he was born a Greek and not a barbarian; and third, that he was born a male and not a female. This then, was the condition of women among those pagan nations as the gospel found them. But since the day our Savior mingled his tears with the tears of the weeping sisters around the tomb of the sleeping Lazarus, women have held a high and exalted position wherever the gospel of the Son of God has been taught. Then let us renew our efforts in rescuing the victims of sin and pollution in our town, plucking them as brands out of the consuming fire, and in the morning of that great day when the sheeted nations shall come forth in judgment, Jesus no longer as the meek and lowly one of Palestine, shall come with the bright crown of rejoicing resting on His fair brow and His sandals damped by the dews of the new made morn, to meet us on the borders of that beautiful land as we come bringing in our sheaves.

Waterloo, Jan. 25, 1896.

Meanest Man.

The meanest man hails from near Shelbyville, says an Indiana exchange. He had a well that needed cleaning badly, but fearing the treacherous quicksands at the bottom, he was afraid to undertake it He hung his coat on a post near the well and went into hiding for a few days. His neighbors missing him, and finding his coat near the well, surmised that he had sunk beneath the quicksands, so they worked with a will to find his dead body. After the well had been thoroughly cleaned out in their efforts to find the body, the wretch showed up.

SPINAL weakness easily cured by Dr. Miles' Nervo Plasters.

From Topeka, Kan.

EDITOR COURIER:—

It may not interest your readers to know that Albuquerque, New Mexico, is a town of 10,000 Mexican-Americans, and that we saw in captivity there one of those rare Gila (He la) monsters, found only in the Gila river—is nineteen inches in length, has a tail like a snake, a black, forked tongue, a head resembling that of a boa, four legs and the hide matching the coating of a crocodile. It is the most poisonous viper known to the world, a bite from it meaning sure death. We found it interesting to see this sort of thing, but will say little of it as it has already been extensively advertised The breath from it will kill or paralyze its prey. We only laid hands on its back to see if we were recognized, and the stranger was quickly observed and took his "hands off" Rattle snakes are numerous in New Mexico, though are not of the large variety; yet live as long and have as many rattles as the other kinds Saw one of these confined having fourteen rattles, and had not eaten anything for six months and no sign of hunger. This fast is by way of experiment, the keeper desiring to know how long the snake will live without food. We started to write you while at Santa Fe, but had to quit as the Mexican band started up "Marching Through Georgia," in honor of Gov. Thornton's return from El Paso, in the interest of suppression of the prize and bull fight billed to take place down there in the near future, arrangements having been made with the most famous bull fighter in Spain to paricipate in this fistic carnival. Fighting bulls from Sonora, Mexico have been ordered for the occasion, and it will likely take place in El Paso Del Norte, Mexico. The city of Santa Fe is the oldest town in the territory if not in all of Mexican domain. Out of a population of 8,000 there are only about 600 Americans, the rest being natives and of "slow speed." They are lazy, and and the majority without a cent of money. It is common to see a line of these loafers on the sunny side of some old adobe and there they stand from morning till night, little knowing or caring how the rest of the world lives. These dark skinned people live principally on goat's milk and seem to be perfectly contented. The palace of Governor Lew Wallace is one of the relics of antiquity, being over 300 years old, now used by Uncle Sam for the distribution of mail matter. This building, like all of Mexican architecture, is of adobe style, one story high, flat roof, plastered outside and in, being whitewashed without. The front of this mansion covers one block, facing south and fronting the public park. Ragged cottonwood trees line the principal streets. Many of the thoroughfares are very narrow, and the whole town has the appearance of having been platted in the dark and early ages, and very little progress has been made since. There are only about a dozen business houses and probably one hundred residences of modern design, constructed by "eastern enterprise," which has made the west, "with its resources," what it is today. An Indian school and territorial penitentiary are located here, but since the military post has been taken away, Santa Fe is extremely on the quiet The altitude is a little over 7,000 feet, and the town site is overshadowed by a snow capped mountain, the foothills of which are dotted with scrub pine and cedar. There are many towns in western New Mexico and Arizona constructed of one flight mud adobes without windows, and are entered from the roof, reached by a ladder. The writer has seen the flower garden and children's play ground on the roof of these homes of the Mexican Indian and as the flyer did not stop at these quaint villages, we caught them with the kodak through the car window, and thus have negatives preserved for future entertainment.

Trinidad, Colorado, is a town of 10,000 and at an elevation of 6,000 feet and the best business town in the state outside of Denver, Cripple Creek and Colorado Springs. The climate is very fine, sunshine being the rule (sand storms on the side). We leave the mountains at this point and chase down across the vast prairies of Kansas, dropping over 5,000 feet in the first 500 miles, encountering the raw, penetrating winds of the central valley and as we crawl out of our berth, find we have hit the changable climate that needs no introduction, rain, mud, slush, sleet wind and finally a report of a cold wave, which arrives promptly on schedule time direct from the Dakotas, and we have it 15 above zero—all of the above within six or eight hours. After a ten weeks' absence from such conditions this state of things is certainly a rare treat Assuring you that Topeka is the capital and has a population of not less than 20,000 and that the people are crying hard times, I am yours.

Very truly,

RALPH W. COBB.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

Name the Farm

Farmers' Advocate, London, Ont.

It has been frequently suggested that great good would result from each farmer placing his name and on his farm in a conspicuous place on his barn or road gate. Not only would persons driving for the first time to the place more easily find it, but it would add much pleasure and interest to people driving from place to place. This latter result would have especial effect with regard to well kept and pretty homes. An observing person will seldom pass a beautiful farm steading without a desire to know who is its enterprising owner. If such a practice were general a marked improvement in the appearance of our farms, and therefore of our country, could not fail to result. Every tidy man would feel a heightened interest in making his farm-front, roadsides, etc, more beautiful, knowing that every passer-by would commend him as the owner. It would also have a good effect upon the untidy man's farm, because the contrast between his slovenly place and his neighbor's well-kept home would shame him into fence repairing, tree plainting and other lines of improvement. The idea of naming the farm is certainly commendable. Would not the above be a suitable topic for farmers' clubs to discuss this coming winter?

Floral Novelty

Among the fruit and flowers novelties which 1896 brings, us, we notice that the enterprising and reliable firm of James Vick's Sons, Rochester N. Y., are already calling attention to three, which seem to have won great favor where known. They are the Double Sweet Pea, the only one in the world true to name, "Bride of Niagara," the "Early Leader Tomato," the earliest of all the tomato family and sure to become a great favorite, and the already famous blackberry, the "Rathbun"

From the praise and compliments given so abundantly to the "Bride of Niagara," this sweet pea must be more than charming and from the encomiums lavished on both the new tomato and this new blackberry, it is pretty certain no garden desiring to have the first and best of every thing, can be without these three new comers.

By the way, readers, are any of you so far behind the times as not to know "Vick's Floral Guide?" If any of you have never seen it, send 10 cents to this firm at Rochester, N. Y., and get a copy. You can deduct this from the first order for seeds and the pleasure and information their Guide will give you will certainly induce you to keep up the acquaintance.

Relieved at Once.

Not a few who read what Mr. Robert Rowis, of Hollands, Va., has to say below, will remember their own experience under like circumstances: "Last winter I had la grippe which left me in a low state of health. I tried numerous remedies, none of which did me any good, until I was induced to try a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The first bottle of it so far relieved me that I was enabled to attend to my work, and the second bottle effected a cure." For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle by F. E. Davenport the druggist.

THREE GRAND TOURS TO HONOLULU,

Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands, about which so much has been written, has been aptly termed the "Paradise of the Pacific," and the title is well deserved for, aside from its magnificent scenery, wonderful volcano, Kilauea, and its interesting inhibitants, its climate is unrivaled, and offers a most delightful change to the residents of the eastern and middle states, who desire to escape the rigors of a northern winter.

The attractions and advantages of these beautiful islands are brought within easy reach by the series of excursions which have been inaugurated by the Northwertern Line, and which will leave Chicago at 6:00 p. m., January 15, February 10 and March 5, reaching San Francisco on the evening of the third day after departure from Chicago. Steamers of the Oceanic S. S. Company leave San Francisco January 21, February 15 and March 10, and it will be observed, therefore, that those who join these excursions will be afforded ample time to view the many attractions of the principal city of the Pacific coast and its beautiful surroundings,

Excursion tickets, good for nine months, will be sold at rate of $225.00 for the round trip from Chicago to Honolulu and return, and this price includes state room and meals on steamers in both directions.

The entire trip from Chicago to Honolulu is made in only nine days, and these excursions, which are strictly first class in all respects, offer an exceptionally favorable opportunity for visiting these beautiful islands at very reasonable expense.

Detailed information will be furnished upon application to W. B. Kniskern, General Passenger and Ticket Agent Chicago & North-Western R'y, Chicago.

COURT

Thursday's Daily.

To day Judge Adair of Columbia City is hearing the argument of counsel in the injunction case against the city of Garrett in regard to water works and electric lights.

Arguments were in progress this afternoon, one for the city, by Judge Zollars of Ft. Wayne, and one for the other side, by Judge McClellan. We have no idea how long the case will hold, as it is a pretty knotty one.

ST. VITUS DANCE.

A Physician Prescribes Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.:

My daughter Mattie, aged 14, was afflicted last spring with St. Vitus dance and nervousness, her entire right side was numb and nearly paralyzed. We consulted a physician and he prescribed Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. She took three bottles before we saw any certain signs of improvement, but after that she began to improve very fast and I now think she is entirely cured. She has taken nine bottles of the Nervine, but no other medicine of any kind.

Mrs. Matilda Long.

Miss Matilda Eamich was born at Hanover, York County, Pennsylvania, January 4th 1811, and died at Auburn, Ind., Feb. 7th, 1896, at 8 p. m. aged eighty-five years, one month and three days.

She united with the Evangelical church, by the rite of Confirmation, at the age of eighteen. She was married to Mr. S. D. Long, January 28th 1838. To this union there were born two children, Mrs. Charles A. O. McClellan, of this place, and Mr. S. E. Long, of Richmond, Virginia.

Mr. and Mrs. Long moved to Columbiana Co., Ohio, in March 1838, and to DeKalb Co., Indiana, March 1845. They were among the best known and highly respected citizens of this county. In the Spring of 1865 they removed from Auburn to Waterloo, and their home was at that place, at the time of Mr. Long's death, which occurred March 17th 1883. Since that time Mrs. Long has been a member of the family of her son-in-law, Hon. C. A. O. McClellan.

By her kindness of heart, and the graces of a christian life, Mrs. Long has won the love and appreciation of all who were intimately acquainted with her She united with the Presbyterian church of Auburn, of which she remained a valued and consistent member.

The above obituary was prepared by Mrs. Long herself, some time ago, or at least under her direction, and its directness and simplicity are characteristic of her nature and her tastes. She was of modest and retiring nature, a lovable wife and mother, and an amiable and earnest friend.

The funeral services will be conducted by Rev. F. C. Colvin, at the residence of Judge McClellan, at 1 p m. to-morrow, Feb. 9. At about 1:30 p. m. the friends will accompany her remains to Waterloo, where she will be laid to rest beside her husband, in the beautiful cemetery there.

Rupture Cured

AUBURN, IND., Feb. 1, 1896.

As I have suffered severely from a large rupture in my right side for the past ten years being so large that an ordinary sized truss would pass through the opening. And hearing that Dr. Casebeer could cure ruptures, I concluded to let him try mine. To my surprise after a few treatments the break closed up and I can now go without my truss or any support, without any signs of rupture. The trouble in my stomach has subsided and my heart trouble improved and I feel much like myself again.

I take pleasure in recommending Dr. Casebeer and the Fidelity Rupture Cure to all thus affected as a success in this cure. As I know of a number he has cured beside myself.

TO THE SUFFERERS OF RHEUMATISM

After using Groff's Rheumatic Cure for some time in my practice I take great pleasure in saying that it is a most wonderful remedy for Rheumatism; in fact it is the only one I have found for the cure of this disease in all its various form. Dr. E. E. Tull, Chicago.

IDENTICAL TEXTS

It is not often that two ministers, pastors of different churches, select the same subject and the same text for the same hour of the same day and in the same town. But this happened in Auburn, yesterday forenoon. Rev. F. C. Colvin of the Presbyterian church, at the forenoon services, had for his text, Second Peter, 3d chapter and 18th verse, his subject being "Growth in Grace." At the same hour at the Lutheran church the pastor, Rev. J. D. Brosy, preached a discourse, "Our Spiritual Growth," having for his text, the same passage of Scripture.

But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Neither pastor knew what the other had selected, either as to subject or text. We heard Mr. Colvin's sermon and it was a good live one. We venture to say that Mr. Brosy's was a similar excellent one. Both are energetic ministers, zealously at work in the cause of the Master and both had evidently had their thoughts turned unconsciously to the same channel.

Little Heroine

A TWELVE YEAR-OLD GIRL SAVES TWO LADS FROM DROWNING.

The Hicksville News of Jan. 30 has this noteworthy item

A narrow escape from drowning and a heroic rescue by children occurred on Ladd's Lake in Milford township, Sunday of last week.

The recent cold weather had frozen the small lake to a thickness suitable for cutting and storing ice Men had been at work hauling and cutting during the week, but the water had again frozen over the spot.

On Sunday a large number of little folks were enjoying themselves skating on the pond, when a young son of Andy Eck skated over the thin ice and broke through. A cry was raised at once and it looked as if the little fellow was drowned. A young friend rushed to the rescue, but he too broke through and added to the peril of the occasion.

But at this moment a young sister (about twelve years old,) of the first boy in the water, showed heroic qualities.

By her directions the panic stricken children were formed in a line and with clasped hands, with the girl at the head they rapidly and carefully approached the drowning boys.

Two times the little fellows had disappeared under the surface of the twenty-five feet of cold water, when the brave girl grasped one of them, and pulled him up, at the same time extended her foot to the remaining boy who was likewise pulled on the edge of the strong ice. While this was being done the line of children had acted as an anchor and held the brave little heroine from falling in also.

All the children were of young years and showed remarkable pluck and bravery.

Breakman Killed.

Friday's Daily.

Joseph Seifer, a B. & O. brakeman, fell from his train at Alida yesterday and was killed. His neck was broken and otherwise horribly cut up. He was a resident of Garrett and leaves a young wife. His remains were brought to Garret yesterday They will be taken to Dayton, Ohio Saturday for interment. Mrs. Seifer has the deepest sympathy of the COURIER in her sad bereavement.

Base Ball Town

The Ligonier Banner, after speaking of Bert Inks, who will change from the Louisvilles to the Philadelphias the coming season, and of his brother, Will Inks who will play with the Springfield, Mass. club, adds:

Few towns in the country have furnished as many good ball players to the big cities as Ligonier "Cap" Keagy is an old Ligonier boy, having learned to play with Inks boys. Bert and Will Inks are away up in the balldom while Frank Scott will make his debut in the spring. We have several other boys who will doubtless develop into first class ball tossers.

ENGLISH DEAD

Saturday's Daily.

Hon. W. H. English has been lying at death's door for a week or two at his home in Indianapolis. There is no hope for his recovery. He was at one time a leading member in congress, and was the candidate for vice-president on the ticket with Gen. Hancock in 1880. Lately he has been writing a complete history of Indiana. LATER:—He died yesterday.

Our District

Replying to a question through our letter box, we have to say, that under the recent decision of the supreme court, we will elect a state senator for DeKalb and Noble, as we did four years ago. We have a voice in electing two representatives; one from from DeKalb, of course and help elect one for the joint district of DeKalb, Noble and Elkhart. All of these counties went republican two years ago, but before that DeKalb was democratic by about 250, Noble about even, while Elkhart went sometimes one way and sometimes another from 100 to 500.

Can't Agree.

For several days the state committees both democratic and republican have been holding conferences on the subject of the recent gerrymandering decision. The democratic state committee was called together and after consulting with various party leaders, issued an address to the people, in which they declared that if the republicans would not attack the apportionment of 1885 they would not question the right of the twenty-five hold-over senators to their seats. They denounced the idea of calling a special session of the legislature. The republicans held a conference last night attended by a number of lawyers and and party leaders As a result a committee of six was appointed, which will call on Gov. Matthews and demand a special session of the legislature under threat of overthrowing the act of 1885 if it is refused.

Stealing

There has been a good deal of stealing going on lately, but Sunday night seemed to have been especially dedicated to that purpose. Coop Ralston lost several articles from his stable, and is now on the lookout for the unlucky thief. Some time Sunday evening, D. S. Ober had a fine set of buggy harness stolen, and the same night, Dr. Adams lost two sacks of corn. It looks as if some one had started out with a horse and is picking up a full outfit. Some one will lose a buggy next.

Goods Taken.

Doubting Thomases have been telling the people, that the new, "popular loan" would fall flat, that people would not take it; that there was not enough gold in the country to get the bonds with; that if gold could be had, the patriotism of the people was not strong enough to induce them to take the bonds of our own country. Some said, that as "gold" alone could be used to buy the bonds, and the bond were not dead certain to be paid in gold, but would say "payable in coin," that people would not take many of them, nor give much for them, But the prophets were all mistaken. The call was for 100 millions, but more than 500 millions were bid for, and the bids, some of them were as high as 20 per cent premium. The Morgan syndicate alone, bid for the whole 100 million at over 110 But there were over 4000 bids, largely from private citizens and from banks and associations all over the country. We presume the highest bidders will get the bonds. If so, all who bid higher than the Morgan syndicate, will get their full bid, and then the Morgan folks will get such part of their 100 million bid as has not been already assigned. The First National Bank of Auburn was among the bidders, but we do not know whether it will succeed in getting any or not, It will take some days to study the bids over and see who will get them. Besides the 550 millions of real bids, there were bids amounting to 120 millions more, that seem to have been made by "cranks," or at least they did not appear to be such as the treasury department could consider. We have always believed our bonds could be taken by our own people.

Too Much Bug Juice.

Sheriff Stroh was called over to Garrett Thursday evening to get a young fellow by the name of Shields, who had taken too much bug juice and wanted all of the sidewalk. He will board at the hotel DeStroh for the next eighteen days. Mr. Stroh goes out every day after some fellow who is unable to care for himself They should be put to work instead of left sitting around in the parlors of the Stroh house. Those of us who are out of jail must work, and why not those who are in jail?

The World's Fair Tests showed no baking powder so pure or so great in leavening power as the Royal.

To the Afflicted.

This is to certify that I have been afflicted with rupture for over fifteen years. Also with what was supposed to be indigestion or dyspepsia from which I suffered so I was compelled to quit work and lie on couch or bed for days at a time, not thinking my stomach trouble was caused by my rupture. But on the 10th day of September, 1895, I commenced treatment with Dr. J. B. Casebeer for my rupture, and took five treatments, the last being on November 5, 1895, and on the 7th day of November I laid off all my supports and have not used any since, feeling that the cure is complete. My stomach trouble and the painful (supposed) ailments have subsided with the cure of my rupture. and I have materially improved in my general health. Therefore, I would recommend any one that is afflicted with rupture to consult Dr. J. B. Casebeer as a careful and effectual trester of the aforesaid affliction.

Plenty Left

The withdrawal of Harrison from the presidential race, leaves the chances with McKinley. But there are several other candidates still in the field, including Cullom of Illinois, Allison of Iowa, Morton of New York, Reed of Maine, Alger of Michigan and possibly others. There are always plenty of who would like to be president.

Only Six Log Houses Left

Indiana has 9,827 public school houses of which 88 are stone, 4,153 are brick 5,080 are frame and six are log. Total attendance for the year was 498,168, and 13,430 teachers are employed. The total revenue distributed during the year amounted to $6,517,555.92, and the sum of funds in trust is $10,146,688 95.

Dr. Chamberlain Dead

Friday's Daily.

Dr. James N. Chamberlain died at his home in Waterloo. He had been in failing health for a number of years, and for some time past the end was looked for at almost any time. To day a message came over the telephone to Dr. Swarts, with the sad news. Dr. Chamberlain was one of the best known men in the county and was considered one of its most successful physicians and surgeons. He was one of the chief originators of the fair at Waterloo, and for many years was its president, managing its affairs with marked ability. He was elected sheriff of the county Oct., 9, 1860, beating John N. Miller by 62. We believe he never held any other political office. He had for many years been a member of the Presbyterian church, and of the G. A. R, he having been in the service as a surgeon. The funeral will be held Sunday, Feb. 9 at 2 p. m, We understand that the physicians here, will likely attend.

The services were at the Presbyterian church and conducted by Rev. S. H Yager, assisted by Rev. F L. Erlougher. The pall bearers were chosen from among the physicians of the county, and included, A B, Darby, F. Broughton, and A. S. Farrington, of Waterloo; D. J. Swarts, of Auburn; J. F. Spooner, of Peru; F. W. Fanning and W. H. Madden of Butler.

Hendry Assigns.

Friday's Daily.

Lewis A. Hendry, one of the most prominent business men in Angola, assigned yesterday and had a receiver appointed to take charge of his affairs. It was brought about by a suit that Dr. H. D. Wood had brought against Hendry and on which he yesterday was given a judgment of $693 60. Hendry at once took measures to have a receiver appointed, and Judge S. A. Powers was chosen The Hendry Hotel and other large property interests were included in the receivership and Judge Powers asked for and obtained from the court an order to keep open and operate the hotel, and the feed and livery barns in connection therewith. From the best information obtainable this morning, Hendry's liabilities are between $70,000 and $80,000, and his assets are estimated at about the same amount. He has carried on an extensive business in Angola for upwards of a quarter of a century, and his failure will be a severe blow to the town and county.

Your Boy Wont Live a Month.

So Mr. Gilman Brown, of 34 Mill St South Gardner, Mass., was told by the doctors. His son had lung trouble, following Typhoid Malaria, and he spent three hundred and seventy-five dollars with doctors, who finally gave him up, saying: "Your boy wont live a month." He tried Dr. King's New Discovery and a few bottles restored him to health and enabled him to go to work a perfectly well man. He says he owes his present good health to use of Dr. King's New Discovery, and knows it to be the best in in the world for Lung trouble. Trial Bottles Free at Robbins & McCord's Drug Store. 4

GOOD EFFECT.

The Wonderful Success of the Popular Loan Alters the Face of Events.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: The wonderful success of the popular loan alters the face of events. January operations become ancient history, as the nation mounts above all doubts and fears to a solid certainty that the people can and will uphold their government. The influence of this event upon all manufacturing and all trade cannot be lightly estimated. It puts the treasury upon a safe basis for the time whether Congress does anything or not. It notifies foreign nations that the United States have power as well as purpose. It unlocked millions of gold which has been gathered in preparation, brings directly several millions of gold from Europe, and stimulates the anxiety of foreign investors to obtain American securities. With such a revolution in business, suddenly effected, the customary records of the past week and month are of less value than usual.

Fatal Explosion.

Morton Finell was instantly killed by an explosion of a dozen sticks of giant powder in the oven of a stove at Wm. Sebas' Sillica quarry, three miles west of Anaconda, Mont. Joseph McIntyre and George Bradley were injured and are now in St. Ann's hospital, in a critical condition. Finell was the cook and stood in front of the stove at his work. He had a hot fire, which is supposed to have been the cause of the disaster by overheating the powder. The cook was blow into an unrecognizable mass. McIntyre will lose both his hands and Bradley has a fractured skull. The cabin is a complete wreck.

English Is Dead.

William H. English died at his rooms in the Hotel English, Indianapolis. Mr. English had been ill with the grip for two weeks. Several days ago rheumatism set in and the heart action became bad. While his naturally strong constitution gave Mr. English's friends strong hopes of his recovery, his condition has throughout been considered grave. Mr. English was for a number of years prominent in State and National politics, being the Democratic candidate for Vice President in 1880. For several years he has been living a retired life, being engaged in writing "The History of the Northwest."

An Iowa Horror.

At Hedrick, Iowa, Joe Merrifield, the 12-year-old son of Frank Murrifield, shot his 6-year-old brother with a Winchester rifle and then killed himself, blowing the top of his head away. The father had left the boys together in the house and they became involved in a quarrel. When neighbors came in a horrible scene was presented. The two boys lay dead on the floor in filth and squalor, and the brains of the boys were scattered over the floor and ceiling. The father had neglected the family until they were almost starved.

Uprising in Madrid.

Madrid was the scene of a demonstration that would have required but very little to have turned it into a serious riot. Fully 12,000 people followed the body of the man killed for hooting at General Campos to the grave, defying the police, and shouting "down with the police," "down with Campos," and "long live the republic," "death to the king," "death to the queen regent," and "long live the republic."

Three Killed.

A three story brick building on Second avenue between Thirth-ninth and Fortieth streets, Brooklyn, N. Y., was blown down during a storm. Three persons are buried in the ruins. Their names are James Quigley, Michael Mulcahy, and John Simonds. The building was occupied by Bush & Dennison, chemical manufacturers.

Fatally Burned.

Mrs. M. J. Swinford, living nine miles from Hot Springs, Ark., was burned to death recently. She was sitting by a fireplace reading, when her dress caught fire, and she rushed madly out of the house. Before assistance could reach her every stitch of clothing was burned entirely off her.

Killed a Brakeman.

A westbound freight on the B. and O. S. W. broke in two one mile east of Spencer's Station, Ohio, the rear part running into the front, killing Brakeman S. C. Parsons and slightly injuring Stewart Goins.

Attacked by a Stallion.

A vicious thoroughbred stallion at Mr. August Belmont's Nursury Stud, near Lexington, Ky., attacked Richard Downing, one of the grooms, pawing, kicking, and biting him. Downing was removed to his home horribly mangled, his arm broken and suffering internal injuries.

Russia's Crop Short.

Bradstreet's has received the following official crop report from London: "Russian official crop reports for 1895 make wheat 80,000,000 bushels, and rye 115,000,000 bushels less than in 1895."

A Storm South.

A severe storm from the North struck the upper part of Mobile, Ala, the other morning, unroofing a part of the Mobile & Ohio railroad freight shed and the elevated railway of the same company. The iron chimneys of five saw and shingle mills were blown down. Several vessels in the harbor dragged their anchors, but the blow was over in less than ten minutes and no harm resulted.

Deed of a Demon.

An entire family of six, father, mother, wife, and three children were murdered at Chicago, by Richard Klattke, a Lake View carpenter, who then completed his work by killing himself.

TWO MILLION LOSS.

Furious Flames Destroy Big Buildings in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia special: Chestnut street, above Broad, was visited the other morning by one of the fiercest fires this city has known for years. The seven-story building of Charles H. Hazeltine 1416 and 1418 Chestnut st., and the adjoining five-story structure of the Baptist Publication society and the American Baptist Historical society were destroyed. The buildings damaged by fire and water and falling walls were the four-story dry goods house of Homer, Le Boutillier & Co. 1412 and 1414, the dwelling at 1422, owned by the Wistar estate, and the Hotel Lafayette, at Broad and Sansom street. On either side of the entrance to the Hazeltine building were the piano warerooms of Hallet & Davis at 1416 and of Steinway & Co., at 1418. The two Baptist societies lost large and valuable collections of paintings, books and curios. The detailed losses have not yet been made up, but a conservative estimate places the aggregate at close to $2,000,000. It is throught that this is covered by insurance.

Earthquake in Nebraska.

Earthquake shocks were felt generally over northeastern Nebraska recently. The shocks at Carroll, Bloomfield, and Wayne, Neb., and Yankton, S. D., were quite strong.

From Butte, Neb., a special comes saying that that vicinity was also visited by an earthquake shock. The vibration was from east to west and lasted for a period of fifteen or twenty seconds. The shock was much more severe along the Missouri River. About fifteen miles north of this place the ground is very warm, and in some places the smoke and heat is so intense that it is unendurable. A party has been organized at that place and will depart immediately for the burning hill.

Dashed to Death.

Peter Rosselot was instantly killed at Fort Wayne, Ind. For the past four years he has been in the service of the Jenney Electric Light company as lamp trimmer. In the pursuit of his duties he attempted to ascend an electric light tower to trim the lamps. The ascent is made in a weighed and balanced iron basket elevator. Rosselot stepped into the basket, as usual and started the automatic chain. The basket moved upward about twenty feet, when a terrible crash startled pedestrians in that vicinity. They saw the motionless man buried in the basket beneath an endless coil of chain. Rosselot was lifeless and the right side of his head was horribly crushed.

Fatal Explosion.

Lawrence (Mass.) special: A terrible explosion of dynamite, killing two men and damaging a large amount of property, took place at the compression house used in connection with the new South Lawrence sewer. Both men were in the compression house and their bodies were horribly mangled. The explosion could be heard as far away as Lowell. The building was blown into fragments, while other buildings within a quarter of a mile, were more or less damaged, windows being shattered without number and contents of houses disturbed. Ten men besides the two killed were at work, but were unhurt.

Murder Will Out.

The mystery of the murder of a young lady whose headless body was found at a lonely spot near Covington, Ky., has been cleared up. The victim was Pearl Bryant of Greencastle, Ind., and her confessed murderers are Scott Jackson and Alonzo Waling. Jackson formerly lived at Greencastle and lured the girl to Cincinnati for the purpose of hiding her shame. The victim was the daughter of Alex Bryant, a wealthy farmer near Greencastle. She was a blonde, age 21, and a graduate of Greencastle high school.

Burned at Sea.

The barkentine Modoc has arrived at Seattle, Wash., and reports having sighted a vessel burning at sea on January 28, about 11 miles west of Cape Flattery. The vessel is supposed to be the Ninevah, which sailed January 16 from Vancouver for the British South Colonies. It is supposed the crew deserted the vessel.

Fatally Burned.

Cincinnati special: Jacob Bruehl, a barber, his wife and 7-year-old boy were fatally burned at their residence, on Knowlton street, Cumminsville, from the effects of an explosion of a gasoline stove. The father received his injuries trying to save his sick child, after the bed had caught fire.

Burned to Death.

Allen Sharpless and his 15-year-old daughter were burned to death at Montpelier, Ohio. Their residence had taken fire and the father after rescuing his wife and two other children, went back for the girl and being overcome by smoke, perished with her. Sharpless was 47 years old.

A Michigan Farmer's Deed.

Wm. Deering, a farmer near Tompkins Centre, twenty miles north of Jackson, Mich., shot his wife and then turned the pistol on himself. The wife is believed to be fatally wounded, but the husband will recover. Deering was arrested. He accuses Mrs. Deering of infidelity and deserting her five children.

Town Marshall Killed

Will Smiley, Town Marshall of Providence, Ky., was shot and killed by a man named Hughes, whom Smiley was trying to arrest.

JUST OUTSIDE THE REPUBLICAN CIRCUS.

"Walk up, gentlemen, walk up, and find the pea!"—New York Journal.

M'KINLEY VS. ALLISON

HE MAKES INROADS ON THE IOWAN'S FENCES.

Strange that Western Agricultural Republicans Should Prefer the Notorious Apostle of High Tariff to Allison—Reflects on Their Intelligence.

Chicago Not a Statesman.

The distressing news comes from Des Moines that a pall of gloom overshadows the space so lately glowing in the prismatic splendors of the Allison presidential rockets. It was confidently expected two weeks ago that South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, and more occidental States which have been largely populated by emigrants from Iowa would spout up responsive showers from Allisonian fountains, which would wax more and more glorious until the fullness of time in June.

But it is not so. There were at first some answering spurts from one and another quarter, but it was painfully apparent that they were impelled by no high and permanent pressure. They have fallen away. Everywhere there is a discouraging lack of enthusiasm. Even South Dakota, which was regarded as an own daughter of Iowa, devotedly attached to her favorite son, is lukewarm and quiescent. Everywhere the McKinley star pales all other lights. McKinley clubs are planted far and wide, and bud like Aaron's rod and thrive like willow stumps upon the treeless plains.

In Iowa itself, the chronicler hath it, there is strange apathy. Every Republican politician talks Allison, indeed, and not one admits a preference for the Ohio Napoleon. All are mildly loyal to the home statesman, but they do not warm to him, and many of them are somewhat too ready to admit that after Allison McKinley is their first choice.

What means it? How comes it that McKinley is the favorite in all these Western States excepting Iowa, while he stands second there only because Allison is a favorite son? All there is to commend McKinley to anyone as a presidential candidate is his high-tariff record. Never in his life, either as a Congressman or as Governor of Ohio, has he given evidence of statesmanship. Even in the plain routine work of the committees, requiring no more than ordinary ability for its discharge, he has not developed either business capacity or watch-dog courage or extraordinary industry.

Even as chairman of the committee which brought forth the measure which bears his name he did not distinguish himself in any way unless it was by making himself a mere passive, nerveless instrument in the hands of those who sought to grasp a share of the taxing power. It is notorious that the protectees and their attorneys who swarmed about the capitol were the real framers of the tariff of 1890, and that McKinley had little to do with it except to assist in registering the schedules concocted by those worthies for the promotion of their own interests.

Allison is much more of a man. He is not a great statesman. He is not to be placed in the same category with Clay, Webster, Lincoln and Sumner of the Whig party and its Republican successor. He has not proved himself consistent or courageous in public life. But he is as far superior to McKinley as he is inferior to Lincoln. He has considerable ability, he has exercised some influence upon legislation and his long legislative experience has not been wholly lost upon him. He is in experience, ability, judgment and temper vastly better fitted than McKinley for the office of president.

It is strange, indeed, that the Republicans of States west of the Mississippi river, which are almost wholly agricultural, should prefer McKinley to Allison. It is strange that they should prefer a man who in public life is nothing more than the agent and tool of the protected classes in procuring the legislation enabling them to prey upon the agricultural class. The preference of Republicans of the distinctively agricultural States for such a man as William McKinley does not speak well for their intelligence or their appreciation of their own interests.—Chicago Chronicle.

Chicago Nominations Are Lucky.

Lincoln was nominated at Chicago and elected. Grant was nominated at Chicago and elected. Garfield was nominated at Chicago and elected. Harrison was nominated at Chicago and elected. Cleveland was nominated twice at Chicago and elected. Candidates nominated at St. Louis have not been as fortunate. If there is any advantage in the location of the convention it would seem to be with the Democrats this year.—Edwardsville Intelligencer.

The Consumer Pays the Tax.

In an editorial favoring the abolition of all taxes on alcohol, the New York Press makes an admission which is highly inconsistent with its usual protectionist teachings. During the eight years of its existence, the Press has been a prominent advocate of the theory that the tariff taxes are not paid by the people who buy and use imported goods, but by the foreign producer. It has always denied that the tariff is a tax on consumption, and has proved to its satisfaction that the more things are taxed the cheaper they become. As protectionists hate cheapness this alleged result of high tariffs has frequently caused trouble in the McKinley camp, some curious people wanting to know how the tax system could put prices up, and also make them fall. But the Press has always avoided the difficulty by declining to attempt an explanation.

Now, however, that paper has put its foot in it by affirming as a principle of taxation that the tax on alcohol, which it says is "the most oppressive and unjust burden of the kind imposed on any necessity," is "borne, not by the manufacturers merely, but by all the customers of all the products of which alcohol is a constituent." And, of course, when so eminent an authority on political economy makes a statement, it must be true.

It is now in order for the Press to explain how and why one kind of tax on raw materials is "unjust and oppressive," and is borne by the consumers of the substance of which the taxed substance is a part; while another tax, just as direct and certain, levied on raw materials produced outside of our boundary lines, is wise and just, and borne entirely by the foreigner. It is only a few weeks since the Press, then and now clamoring for a heavy tax on wool, the raw material for our great woolen industries, claimed that the restoration of the McKinley duties on wool and woolens would not increase the cost of clothing.

Yet it now directly contradicts its own arguments, by telling the truth in regard to the tax on alcohol. If a tax on the material used in drugs, varnishes, perfumes, etc., falls on the people who buy the articles into which it enters, why does not the wool duty fall on the consumers of clothing, blankets, etc., made out of taxed wool?

Voting Themselves Donations.

The convention of textile manufacturers which has been held in Chicago, and has had its resolutions telegraphed over the country, was evidently organized in the interest of the estimable gentlemen who attended it. The action of this convention should have just as much force in shaping public opinion as would have a convention made up of citizens of the United States who should meet together and vote that, as they were not as well off in this world's goods as they would like to be, it was resolved that the United States secretary of the treasury be directed to pay each of them, out of money not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $10,000 a year for the rest of their natural lives. In other words, if there was the least probability that the demand would be heeded, any number of persons could be found willing to resolve that their fellow-citizens should tax themselves for their (the resolvers') benefit. This proceeding needs what, in vulgar language, is called gall, but then such protectionists as gathered in the convention at Chicago have an unlimited amount of this species of mental and moral audacity.

Cannot Conceal the Truth.

The Republican Senators need not imagine for a moment that they can divert the attention of the country from their neglect of the country's business by firing off pyrotechnical remarks about Great Britain, Turkey and other foreign countries. The people know that the country is in a hole, and that it was put there by absurd Republican legislation. What they want to know is what the Republican Senate is going to do to get the country out of the hole. That is what it promised to do. That is what it was elected to do, and that is what it proposes not to do. And it cannot cover up its purpose by throwing dust.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

An Absurdity.

The Dingley revenue bill (so-called) now pending in the Senate, which was rushed through the House in four hours, raises the tariff duties on nearly all articles consumed in this country, and its effect would be to check or prohibit the very importations which yield revenue. No more flagrantly absurd proposition was ever made.

The Republican arithmetic, by which it is figured out that the proposed duties on raw wools would bring in $14,000,000 of revenue, is based upon the false assumption that if the bill becomes a law and its high duties on wool take effect the importations of wool will be as large as they now are under absolute freedom from duty. No sane person can believe that the imports of wool will not be greatly reduced if it should be taken off the free list and put on the dutiable list.

But, even if the restoration of the wool duties furnished some revenue the effect of the Dingley high "protectionist" duties on two or three thousand other articles now imported would necessarily check and cut down the volume of these imports and thus reduce the revenue much more than the proposed wool duties would enhance it.

The whole scheme of the Dingley tariff is "protectionist" in its nature. It is not a revenue bill. It cannot help the treasury, but if it should become a law its effect, for a year or more at least, would probably be to reduce the revenues of the Government and put the treasury "in a hole."—New York Herald.

Candidate Morton's Mediocre Record.

He has been Representative in Congress, Minister to France, Vice President of the United States and Governor of the Empire State of New York. In no position has he illustrated capacity for public service. The best that has ever been truthfully said of him or claimed for him is that he has been respectable, good tempered and dignified. Nothing that he has ever said or done is remembered as of public importance. Until he became Governor nobody ever suspected that he was so entirely subservient as he has proved to be to Platt.—Utica Observer.

Burlesque Devotion in the House.

There is enough of reverence and religious sentiment in the House at Washington to prompt a growing protest at the burlesque of devotion which distinguishes the prayers of the chaplain of that body. These prayers are nothing other than stump speeches on public matters, so phrased as to catch the popular drift, and in one or two instances apparently inviting and in one instance actually receiving applause. It is full time that these exhibitions of irreverence and bad taste be stopped.—Springfield Republican.

Need of an Educational Campaign.

The American public needs a new and deep campaign of education upon the great financial and commercial problems which it is now confronted with. A new order of things has arisen, which must be intelligently met by all classes of our voters. The old and wornout theories of fiat and inflated money, protectionism, paternalism and free silver coinage must be discarded if a return of prosperity is desired by the American people.—New York Herald.

Abusing Bayard and Neglecting Duty.

Congress occupies its time in a partisan effort to censure Mr. Bayard for expressing an opinion not shared by a majority of Congress and in instructing the nations of the earth as to their duty, meanwhile neglecting its own duty to afford the people of the United States the sadly needed relief which it is in the power of Congress alone to afford.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Carries a Dirk Up His Sleeve.

Senator Foraker is looked upon by his party associates as the man who carries a dirk in his sleeve. They never know who is to be his next victim, and they are very cautious about trusting him too far. This is not very complimentary to Foraker and he has not been receiving any compliments since his election.—Davenport Democrat.

Real Meaning of Morton's Candidacy.

The fact that Gov. Morton is a candidate for the Presidency really means that Tom Platt is a candidate for Secretary of the Treasury, and expects to use the New York delegation in the St. Louis convention to promote that ambition.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

NATIONAL SOLONS.

REVIEW OF THEIR WORK AT WASHINGTON.

Detailed Proceedings of Senate and House—Bills Passed or Introduced in Either Branch—Questions of Moment to the Country at Large.

The Legislative Grind.

The Senate Friday spent most of the time sparring over the free coinage measure. The House confined itself to routine business. Most of the session was devoted to the District of Columbia appropriation bill. The regular attempt was made to have all the expenses of the District government paid by the District, but the motion made by Mr. De Armond (Dem., Mo.) to effect this was ruled out on a point of order. The District bill carries $5,417,960, $353,423 less than the sum appropriated for the current fiscal year.

The Senate Saturday closed debate on the silver bond bill and passed the measure by a vote of 42 to 35. The House did nothing of importance.

The House spent the entire day Monday discussing a series of amendments to strike from the District of Columbia appropriation bill eight appropriations aggregating $34,000 for the maintenance of destitute women and children in various private and sectarian charitable institutions in the District. President Cleveland sent to Congress a request for an appropriation for some of the Italian victims of the Walsenburg riots in Colorado. The Senate did nothing of importance.

The belated House tariff bill emerged from the Finance Committee in the Senate Tuesday, and it had a free-silver substitute attached, by a majority report of one in committee. No definite action was taken. Minor business was transacted in the House, and the balance of the session was devoted to heated controversy over appropriations for private and sectarian charitable institutions in the District of Columbia.

The Senate spent Wednesday in fruitless debate upon the tariff-silver bill. In the House Delegate Catron (N. M.) introduced a bill to prevent the pugilistic festival from taking place near El Paso, and the measure was rushed through without division. The bill makes prize fighting a misdemeanor, punishable by imprisonment for not less than one year. Mr. Catron asked for unanimous consent for consideration, but Mr. Knox (Rep., Mass.) objected and the bill was referred, but subsequently was taken up and passed. The measure also prohibits bull fights. The House also began its debate on the Senate free-coinage bond bill.

The Catron anti-prize fight bill passed the Senate Thursday. The law becomes executive from the moment it is signed by the President, and all persons must at their peril take cognizance of its enactment. The Senate free-coinage substitute for the House bond bill was debated five hours in the House in the afternoon and for three hours at the night session. Nevertheless the pressure from members for time to present their views is so great that it seems possible now that the debate may continue indefinitely.

LAND DEFENSES MOST NEEDED.

Admiral Walker Gives His Views to the House Committee.

Admiral Walker appeared before the Committee on Coast Defenses in Washington and made an exhaustive statement on the subject of coast defenses from a naval point of view. The admiral stated that while of course he advocates the construction of a thoroughly effective naval force he fully recognizes the absolute necessity of land defenses. He considers one form of defense to be the complement of the other and both as necessary as cavalry and artillery are to an army. He deems the land defenses to be a necessity as a means of protection to the country by leaving the navy free to operate outside, and affording safe places of refuge in case of the naval forces being overmatched by a superior fleet of an enemy, also to afford the means of repairing damages, and obtaining supplies and coal under the shelter and protection of the forts. He stated that without the land defenses our dockyards could be destroyed and our ships pursued into port and annihilated by a superior fleet. He also advocates the building of battleships rather than harbor defense vessels as being better adapted for general purposes of attack and defense.

RATES FOR SLEEPING CARS.

Question Up Again Before a Sub-Committee of the House.

The question of taking steps toward reducing the rates charged by sleeping and palace car companies was thrashed over by a sub-committee of the national House Committee on Commerce. A bill introduced by Mr. Corliss of Michigan was before the committee, but after a long debate it was decided to strike out all after the first section of the bill and report that section to the full committee for consideration. The first section proposes to extend the interstate commerce law so as to include sleeping or palace cars operated by common carriers engaged in interstate commerce.

Notes of Current Events.

Judge Josiah W. Wright dropped dead at Princeton, N. J., while on his way to Trenton. He was 68 years of age.

Dr. James A. Beasley, aged 70 years, a wealthy planter of Huntsville, Ala., died at La Grange, Tenn., where he was visiting a son.

Col. David S. Turner, aged 92 years, veteran during the late war, and grandfather of Prof. N. L. Britton, of Columbia College, New York, died at New Dorp, Staten Island.

Harry Hayward's promised messages after death have not been received, and a Minnesota paper surmises that his wire has been grounded somewhere. We would rather bet that it is burned out.

The Italian warship Christopher Columbo, having on board the Duke of Arbuzzi, nephew of the King of Italy, arrived at San Francisco from the North. The warship will remain there several weeks.

Owing to a two years' drouth on the Pacific side of Nicaragua the coffee crop has been much reduced, and instead of the 200,000 quintals expected, it is not now believed that the crop will exceed 100,000.

One year ago Joe King, a farmer, was killed in John Smiser's saloon at Petersburg, Ind., by being thrown to the floor by some drunken toughs. Mrs. King sued Smiser and his bondsmen for damages. The jury returned a verdict for $1,000.

A large number of insurance men, representing the Western Underwriters' Union, the jurisdiction of which extends west of Pennsylvania to the Rocky Mountains, met at Buffalo. One of the objects of the meeting is to try to reduce the excessive commissions paid to agents.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Mackay and their son, Clarence Mackay, were among the passengers on board La Touraine, the French liner, which arrived at New York after a tempestuous volage. The Mackays brought with them the body of their son, John W., who was thrown from his horse and killed while hunting at his country seat near Paris. The remains will be taken to San Francisco, where they will be placed in the magnificent mausoleum recently erected by the elder Mackay.

BIDS FOR THE BONDS.

TOTAL AMOUNT OF ISSUE SUBSCRIBED MANY TIMES.

Five Hundred and Fifty Millions Are Offered in Exchange—Public Gets About a Third—Remainder Will Be Awarded to the Morgan Syndicate.

Bidders Number 4,640.

Four thousand six hundred and forty bids for $558,269,850 worth of bonds was the tremendous total of the subscriptions opened at the Treasury Department in accordance with the terms of the call issued a month ago inviting proposals for $100,000,000 of United States 4 per cent bonds to run for thirty years from Feb. 1, 1895. These figures do not include about $120,000,000 of bids rejected as bogus. The immense offerings astounded experts. The bids literally swamped the Treasury Department. At 6 o'clock it was impossible to tell with definiteness how many bids and for what aggregate had been received at figures in advance of the price of 110.6877, at which a syndicate composed of J. P. Morgan & Co., Harvey Fisk & Co. and the Deutsche Bank of Berlin offered to take the whole loan. The bids ranged from par up to a single $50 bid at 150. The public gets from $30,000,000 to $40,000,000 of the $100,000,000 popular loan, and the Pierpont Morgan syndicate secures the remainder on a bid of 110.6877 for $100,000,000.

Treasury officials regard the loan as a complete success, both as to the popular subscription feature and the prices obtained. Bids came from several thousand individuals and from hundreds of national banks and other banking institutions. Nearly all of the leading New York bankers and big insurance companies were represented in the list of bidders, but with a few exceptions they were outmaneuvered by the Morgan syndicate. The opening and scheduling of the bids was conducted under the direction of Assistant Secretary Curtis by a committee consisting of Mr. Morgan, United States treasurer; Mr. Eckels, Comptroller of the Currency, and Mr. Huntington, chief of the division of loans and currency.

Terms of the Circular.

The bonds are redeemable in coin, and will be issued in denominations of $50 or multiples of that sum as may be desired by the bidders. Only United States gold coin or gold certificates will be received in payment. Under the terms of the Secretary's circular the first payment of 20 per cent and accrued interest must be made upon receipt of notice of the acceptance of the bid. The remainder of the amounts bid may be paid in installments of 10 per cent each and accrued interest at the end of each fifteen days thereafter. Accepted bidders, however, are allowed to pay the whole amount of their bids at the time of the first installment, or at any time previous to the maturity of the last installment, provided that all previous installments have been paid. The bonds will be dated Feb. 1, 1895, to run thirty years from that time, and will therefore mature Feb. 1, 1925. According to the calculations of the actuary of the treasury a bidder, in order to realize 2½ per cent interest on his investment, should have offered $130.8749 for each $100 in bonds bid for.

Bids for Previous Loans.

For the 5 per cent loan of Feb. 1, 1894, there were in all 238 bids, representing $52,292,150. Of this amount $42,906,850 was bid for at the upset price of $117.223, and $9,295,300 at a price in excess of that figure. The amount awarded was $50,000,000, upon which the Government realized a premium of $8,633,295.

For the 5 per cent loan of Nov. 13, 1894, for which there was no upset price, the Government received 394 bids, amounting to $178,341,750. The amount of the bids received at $116.8898 was $50,000,000; amount below that rate, $61,776,100; at rates between $116.8898 and $117.077, $5,629,800; at $117.077, $50,000,000, made by the Morgan-Belmont syndicate. The amount bid at rates above $117.077 was $10,935,250. The syndicate bid was accepted, the Government realizing a premium of $8,538,500.

The gold purchase of Feb. 8, 1895, was for 3,500,000 ounces, payable in United States 4 per cent bonds. The bid of the Morgan syndicate to furnish the gold was accepted. The Government, under the terms of this agreement, issued bonds amounting to $62,315,400, for which the syndicate paid at the rate of $104.4946 per $100, the Government thus realizing a premium of $2,800,844.

HANG A JURY IN EFFIGY.

Indignant North Dakota Citizens Seek to Avenge a Murder Trial Verdict.

The people of Medora, N. D., who became indignant at the action of a Burleigh County jury in acquitting the alleged murderer of a ranchman who lived near Medora, in Billings County, hung the jury in effigy to a large cottonwood tree which grew close to the Billings County jail, and gave expression to their feelings in a large placard nailed to the side of the jail. The whole scene was in plain view from the passenger trains on the Northern Pacific Railroad, and excited much comment.

Medora is hemmed in by the fantastically shaped and desolate Bad Land scoria buttes, which added to the weird spectacle as the effigies swayed and turned in the breezes. After remaining hung there for a week some Bismarckians came down on the scene at night and cut down the effigies and tore off the banner.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

Mrs. Dene arrived two days later, and found everything in her house far more luxurious and home-like than she expected She had brought only a few of her goods and chattels with her, intending to rough it for a month or so, but the Commissioner, among whose faults inhospitality was not, had decreed otherwise, and had made the place so cosy in the limited time, that even Jane, who had been backward and forward many times, scarcely recognized it when she paid her last visit.

Alipore seemed very little altered. It struck Mrs. Dene that Jane, who was seated opposite to her in sympathetic silence, was the most changed of all. She thought of her as she remembered her at first, a shy, pretty child, slowly developing into the coquettish beauty, the acknowledged Simla belle. She was lovely still, lovelier than ever, she was fain to confess, but it was such a pale, weary face that owed nothing of its beauty to happiness or animation.

Among the first who called on Mrs. Dene was Major Larron, but, though his manner was very gentle and sympathizing to herself, she could not fail to see that the real object of his visit was Jane. His gaze rested on her all the while, eager to forestall every wish, to lose no movement of the white fingers which twined so restlessly one with the other, nor a glance of the sorrowful hazel eyes which roam as they would, never met his own.

His suit had not made much progress. It was very seldom that he could see her, and when he did happen by sheer perseverance to come in her presence, her thoughts were evidently so far away that he knew it would be of no avail to push his own cause. Mrs. Dene could not help feeling sorry for him, he seemed so terribly in earnest—besides, long ago, she had promised him her aid.

"Come and see my flowers," she said, presently, when the conversation began to languish. "I have such a capital garden. I suppose the Commissioner's mollies have kept it in good order. At Hattiabad I had nothing but a bare expanse of kunkur, and a well."

Major Larren rose to follow her, and artfully addressed a remark to Jane at the moment, so that the common civility obliged her to follow them; and once in the garden Mrs. Dene soon made an excuse to leave them.

"Mrs. Dene is not looking well," he began awkwardly, when that lady was out of hearing.

"She is not well. She came here for a change of air, you know."

"Ah, yes! I understood so, of course. And yourself, I wish I could see you looking better," he went on.

"There I think your kindness misleads you, Major Larron. I am in perfect health"—a little stiffly.

She walked away a few paces, less with the intention of avoiding him than to calm her own agitation. She did not love him; sometimes she even regarded him with an instinctive dislike, even fear; yet for a moment she was carried away by the passion in his tones.

"Am I so distasteful to you that you will not stay beside me?" he asked her sadly, standing still a little way apart.

"It is not that," she murmured.

"Then listen to me, Jane; yet what is it after all that I can say! I have so little to offer you—nothing except wealth and rank which seem such worthless things now that I have to stake my all upon them. I am too old for you; older than the Colonel by some years."

He stopped abruptly. Fool that he was to mention the very name that should have been avoided! He saw at once how Jane's face, which, touched by his self-depreciation and humility, grew softer and kindlier as he spoke, now suddenly hardened into stone.

"If you had every advantage it were possible for man to have, it would make no difference," she said, quickly. "I shall never marry!"

"Never marry me; but there is some other——"

"There is no other," she declared, with quiet sadness.

She had moved on and Major Larron was walking beside her. Now, she spoke, a sudden turn brought them face to face with Mrs. Dene, who was coming in their direction with Colonel Prinsep.

An impulse, of which she repented the next instant, caused Jane to turn round sharply and go down another path, and naturally Major Larron accompanied her.

"Oh, how stupid of me! What will they think? Let us go back," exclaimed the girl, excitedly.

"Not yet, Jane—not yet. I have something to say still. This is no time for make believe of any sort, and I will not pretend to be blind to the fact that there is another who is my rival, and that other—Colonel Prinsep. I also know that you will never marry him."

"Never, never!" ejaculated Jane.

"Yet you will pass most of your life in his near neighborhood, and the next two years at least will be lived where Jacob Lynn died."

He was playing his last card, and playing it knowing well that it was no legitimate game, yet his voice never faltered. He would have betrayed his dearest friend to have won that upon which his heart was set.

She shuddered. He knew his shaft had gone home, and hastily followed up his success.

"Be my wife, Jane, and leave the past behind you. I will take you where nothing shall remind you of it. I will surround you with a love that nothing harmful shall be able to penetrate. My whole life shall be spent in making yours happy. You do not love me now, but you will; such love as mine begets love. I worship you, I adore you—is it such a hard matter to consent to be adored?"

As she hesitated, meaning to say "yes," and so escape from all that had been troubling her of late, now half held back by the knowledge that all her future hung upon the word that she might utter—she heard Stephen Prinsep speaking as he walked with Mrs. Dene a little distance off.

At the sound of the low, musical tones her half-formed resolution faltered. How could she promise to let another love her, to be another's wife, in the close vicinity of the man to whom she had avowed all these things before, within hearing even of the voice by which she had been—ah, so willingly!—wooed?

"Do not press me. I cannot answer now," she said, hastily, a piteous expression coming over her upturned face.

Turning, she walked toward the house and overtook Mrs. Dene, who looked at her scrutinizingly as she came up. Had she or had she not accepted Major Larron?

Colonel Prinsep too looked keenly, wistfully into her face. Surely it was not possible that she had forgotten what had been between them. She loved him—him only—he could not doubt that, since he had surprised her in his bungalow kissing the words he had written. The reason of that stealthy visit he had failed to discover, nor could he guess what the barrier was that she had decided must divide them, but surely there was nothing that need drive her so into the arms of another.

Mrs. Dene had been addressing herself to Major Larron, and kept up a brisk conversation with him, under cover of which the silence of the other two remained unnoticed, and it happened that as they went into the house for a moment the Colonel and Jane were left alone.

Jane looked up quickly. In her eyes then Stephen Prinsep saw only doubt and distress—not love for one lover, nor regret for the other.

"Colonel Prinsep, they are making fresh inquiries about Jacob Lynn's death. They are going to send the case to the High Court; Mr. Knollys told me so!" she exclaimed in an excited undertone.

"And then?" he asked, with what she considered an almost shameless calmness.

"The murderer will be found out; they know so much already, and more will be discovered then."

"And you don't wish that the criminal—supposing it to be a criminal case—should be brought to justice"—with a curious look into her troubled face.

"Oh, no—no! How can you ask it?"—in an anguished whisper.

He was silent for a moment, pulling his fair mustache with a puzzled air as of one who finds himself in a difficulty and knows not how to extricate himself. Then he asked her in a voice as low as her own:

"Tell me, what is it you wish me to do?"

"Go away from here. Leave the place before it is too late. It is the only chance!"

And so saying she swept past him into the house. He stood looking after her until she had disapeared through a door at the other end of the hall; and then he too went in, and entering the drawing-room stayed some time talking to Mrs. Dene, perhaps in the hope that Jane might return.

But she did not.

CHAPTER XXXV.

Mr. Graeme had always been a favorite of Mrs. Dene, so it happened that, coming often to the house, his former friendly relations with Jane were insensibly renewed. She forgot that once she had been so hurt at his having made her the subject of a bet, and he that unexplained meeting at the gates of Colonel Prinsep's house. Mrs. Dene encouraged his visits, not only for her own sake, but because she thought that perhaps something might come of this friendship with Jane. The girl was looking so unhappy now, so unlike what she had always been before; and, woman-like, Mrs. Dene had a vague idea that matrimony was a remedy for all ills. Although she had promised her support to Major Larron, she would have been infinitely better pleased to see her protege engaged to Valentine Graeme.

"I wonder you never fell in love with Jenny," Mrs. Dene said to Graeme, after they had been sitting some time together.

"How do you know I never did?" he retorted quickly. "I am not sure myself. I know I like her better than any girl I ever met."

"Then why have you never tried to win her?"

"A foolish bet I made about her with Larron. Then—it has been a whole chapter of accidents—something occurred which put me off again."

"What was it?" asked Mrs. Dene.

"Something which made her appear less simple; not—not so perfect as I had always thought her."

"She is as good as gold!" ejaculated the young widow, warmly.

"I used to think so; but then no one is faultless, and in this case she may not have been so much to blame as it appeared. Only I was disappointed and chilled. You see we like our wives to be as Caesar's wife was—above suspicion."

"As she is—take my word for that, Valentine. She is in some secret trouble now, and it may be something in connection with that which gave you cause to doubt."

"I wish I could tell you all and let you judge, but I promised I would not."

"And nothing you could say would shake my faith. Hers is one of the sweetest, and at the same time noblest, characters I have ever known. If you love her, really love her, Valentine, don't let any suspicion of her come between you. Take my advice, tell her about your bet with Major Larron, and for the rest trust implicitly that whatever she did was done for the best."

"You are a very loyal friend"—smiling.

"And you are a very cold lover. I believe you would as soon marry Diana as Jane!"

"Why do you always bring up Miss Knollys' name?" exclaimed Val, petulantly, rising from his seat to poke the fire vigorously.

"And why do you always resent it so, if indeed she is no more to you than any one else?" asked Mrs. Dene, maliciously. "Make up your mind which you prefer, and——"

She stopped short, and in her embarrassment knocked down a small vase that stood on a table at her elbow. Both girls had come in from the veranda and stood side by side, as though purposely affording an opportunity for choice—Diana, her head as usual held daintily high, her lovely figure almost defiantly erect; and Jane, eyes cast down, blushing violently at the words they had both overheard and suspected might have reference to themselves.

So he had made his choice, thought Miss Knollys. Ah, well, it was best so; for even if he had loved her, as she without doubt loved him, she could never have overcome her pride sufficiently to have married him! She whose family was one of the oldest in England, to stoop to bear a name which was only celebrated in the particular line of business his relations had selected! Yet why did she feel such a dull aching pain in her heart, if indeed she would not have it otherwise than it was?

"Do not go, Miss Knox, I have something to say to you," Valentine began, and she looked up in such evident dismay, that he added hastily, "It is only a confession I have to make.

"Confession always obtains absolution. Say on. I am sure it is nothing very dreadful."

"It was a foolish bet that I made about you some weeks ago, that you would marry Mr. Blount. Don't look so hurt, Miss Knox; indeed, I hardly thought it possible. I only made the bet in the hope that I might lose it. I am such an unlucky fellow that I always lose my bets—and, indeed, I should not have accepted the proposition, only I was feeling wretched, so—so——"

"Who proposed it?" asked Jane.

"Ah, that of course I cannot tell you! I only want to win your forgiveness for myself, not to shift the blame upon another. Tell me, are you very, very angry?"

"I knew it before"—quietly.

"And that is why you spoke so coldly to me for some time afterward. I wish I had made a clean breast of it before. I wanted to, but—who told you, Miss Knox?"

"That is my secret. Tell me with whom the bet was made."

"I cannot—you know I cannot," said Valentine, distressed.

"Well, I will be less punctilious. It was Major Larron who told me on the night of the —th Hussars' dance."

"Major Larron! Why, it was he—I mean——"

"I can guess what you mean, Mr. Graeme. It was Major Larron who suggested the bet, and it was he who hastened to inform me of what you had done without mentioning his own share in the transaction."

"He shall answer for it to me!" cried Valentine.

"No, to me. Please let me tax him with his treachery to you, and his implied untruthfulness to me."

Such a determined expression made firm her mobile lips that Mr. Graeme said no more. Perhaps, too, he was glad to be relieved from the awkwardness of such an explanation with his senior officer. Yet his indignation in nowise abated, and he was resolved never to meet Barry Larron in friendship again.

"Let us go in," said Jane, presently. "Mrs. Dene will be wondering where we are."

Diana and Mr. Graeme left early in the evening; and just as Mrs. Dene and Jane were speculating as to whether it would be too late to go out themselves, Mrs. Knox drove up.

(To be continued.)

Agassiz's Test.

It is said that however widely Professor Agassiz, the famous zoologist, might differ in his opinions from another scientist, he never undervalued any contribution which a scientific opponent made to zoology.

He extended the fame of Owen, the eminent English zoologist, in this country, by enthusiastically pointing out to all questioners his grounds for a sincere admiration of that scientist, and it was only by chance that his auditors learned how widely Agassiz's opinions differed from Owen's on certain much disputed questions.

But for amateurs who took facts at second-hand, and built up systems by combining the discoveries of various specialists in science, he had a somewhat contemptuous indifference. One of his friends asked him on one occasion how he felt about the attack which had been made on his scientific position by a certain accomplished scholar who had studied the different theories advanced by eminent zoologists, and had decided that Agassiz must be ranked in the second class.

To the amazement of his friend, who regarded the attack as a matter of considerable seriousness, Agassiz burst forth into a roar of laughter.

"Why, just think of it!" he cried. "The man undertakes to fix my place among zoologists, and he is not himself a zoologist!" And then seeing that his friend did not apparently appreciate the joke of the affair, he added, with evident enjoyment, "Why, don't you know that he has never been an observer?"

With him "observation" meant not only the training of the eye itself, but the cultivation and exertion of all the faculties behind the eye. He once said in reply to a friend who asked him, after he had been fifteen years in this country, what he considered the best result of his teaching.

"I have educated five observers. One of them, to be sure, has turned out to be my deadliest personal enemy; but I still affirm that he is a good observer, and that is the best compliment I could pay him were he my dearest friend."

Before Austerlitz.

The evening and night were not ones of repose for Napoleon—nicely poised combinations need careful watching. For a time the uneasy but confident Emperor passed from watch fire to watch fire, encouraging and observing his own men. With noisy enthusiasm they besought him not to expose his life on the morrow, and promised to bring him a suitable bouquet for the anniversary of his coronation. For a time the whole camp was illuminated with extemporized torches of hay. But though excited, the troops, as well as their general, were confident; they understood his casually uttered but carefully considered words, which passed from mouth to mouth: "While they are marching to surround my right, they will offer me their flank." For a time also, he rode in the darkness to reconnoiter the enemy's position, and being convinced that no movement was to be made before morning, he returned to his tent about 3 and slept until dawn.

He has been charged with having for the first time shown cowardice at Austerlitz. This is because in a proclamation he promised not to risk his life, as his men had requested, but only in case they did their duty, and kept his word because they kept theirs. Bonaparte, the division general, and even Bonaparte, the First Consul, had led his soldiers where danger was greatest, but Napoleon the Emperor, having won his stake, had no need to take such risks, having more to lose, he now for the first time used the ordinary caution of a man whose life is worth that of many common men. It was only what every great royal and imperial general is accustomed to do.—Century.

E. GENERAL BOOTH AND HIS CHIEF OFFICERS IN THE SALVATION ARMY.

TO "MAKE MEN."

Salvation Army Will Start a "Farm Colony" in New Jersey.

The "farm colony" which the Salvation Army has long contemplated starting in America will probably soon be established in Mahwah, N. J. The plan is based on the colonies suggested by Gen. Booth in his "Darkest England," one of which was established in Hadleigh, Essex, Eng., several years ago. The object of the farm is not to support aged members of the Salvation Army, but to carry out Gen. Booth's "man making" plan, as his scheme for giving unfortunate mortals a new start in life has been called. The plan in brief is to take men out of the gutters, give them a chance to work if they are willing to do so, and finally render them self-supporting and decent members of the community.

It is calculated by officers of the Salvation Army that there are in New York City, for instance, 100,000 men and women in the streets out of work, out of money, down at the heel, ragged, wretched, bankrupt in pocket and courage. The farm is intended to give these persons a new start in life. It is not intended that they shall be given money until they have earned it, because, say the Salvation soldiers, to give money to a man who has not earned it is to lessen his self-respect and make it easier for him to accept charity again, perhaps to seek it, when he might earn money by honest toil.

England, when Gen. Booth touched its big heart with his stories of "Darkest England," contributed $500,000 for the work which he outlined, and it is not thought that this country will be less generous if an appeal is made for funds with which to attempt the banishment of idleness and poverty.

MRS. U. S. GRANT.

The Wife of the Great General Is a Young Old Lady.

Mrs. Ulysses S. Grant is leading a retired life at Washington. Her home is the mansion of ex-Senator Edmunds, for which she paid $50,000 some months ago. It is a comfortable brick house of fifteen rooms, located in one of the most fashionable parts of the city.

Mrs. Grant in her 70th year is one of the youngest old ladies in Washington, said Frank G. Carpenter after a recent visit with her. You would not take her to be more than 60. Her face is full and almost free from wrinkles. Her hair is iron gray, and she has quite a lot of it. Her eyesight has never been very good, and it has failed now so that she cannot read a great deal. She does not wear glasses, however, and to outward appearance her eyes are not weak. She walks easily and firmly, and she tells me she is in good health. She is a good talker. Her voice is low and pleasant, and she grows vivacious as she reviews some of the wonderful events of her career. She is thoroughly wrapped up in her family, her children and her grandchildren, and in her love for Gen. Grant. In speaking of him she refers to him as "The General." She has a good memory, and tells many interesting stories concerning him. No married couple ever lived closer to each other than did the general and Mrs. Grant. She was perhaps his only real confidante. The two were one in almost everything, and their life was a most beautiful one. For several years Mrs. Grant has been engaged in writing a book of her reminiscences. This will cover more than fifty years, and it will be full of unwritten history. Gen. Grant left a large number of papers and valuable letters. He also left a diary which contains a great many interesting entries. Mrs. Grant has about 300 of his love letters, and there are other valuable manuscripts. His state papers, however, will probably be issued in a separate volume by Col. Fred Grant. Mrs. Grant's book will be made up chiefly of her own reminiscences, and they will be interesting in the extreme.

A FAMOUS ARTIST.

Lord Leighton Was One of the World's Great Painters.

In the death of Sir Frederick Leighton, recently created Lord Leighton by the Queen, president of the Royal Academy, which occurred in London, there has passed away not only one of the great painters of England, but of the world. Deceased was born in 1830 and when still young displayed a remarkable talent for art, literature and music. He studied art in Italy, France and Germany. His first important picture, Cimabau's Triumph, was finished in

LORD LEIGHTON.

Rome and was sent to the Royal Academy in London in 1855. Queen Victoria was attracted by it and purchased it and thereafter the climb of Sir Frederick to fame was easy and rapid.

PRINCE HENRY OF BATTENBURG.

Among his greatest productions in art were "The Madonna," "The Odalisque," "Syracusan Brides," "A Summer Moon," "The Music Lesson," "Wedded," "Hercules Wrestling With Death," "The Athlete and Python," "Garden of the Hesperides," "The Daphnephona," which constituted a classification of studio gems. Some of his paintings were exhibited and admired at the World's Fair. Of these "The Garden of the Hesperides" was the masterpiece which excited popular interest. Sir Frederick regarded the study of the nude as essential to artistic education. Sir Frederick was more than a painter and his superiority in modeling and carving was frequently tested, one of the noted works of his chisel being the statue of Hercules and the Python. He was also a musician. In 1878 he became president of the Royal Academy and was knighted in that year. In 1885 he was made a baronet. A month ago the Queen made him a peer.

Tall Buildings.

A year or two ago a lecturer describing the royal palace at Madrid, which is 470 feet square and 100 feet high, jokingly remarked that a modern New York architect would probably have made it 100 feet square and 470 feet high. This was not such a very great exaggeration, for the new building just completed at the corner of Pine street and Broadway is nearly four times as high as it is broad. From the sidewalk to the coping it rises 314 feet, but it is only about 85 feet square on the ground. Its steel skeleton is clothed with thick brick walls. From the roof one looks down to see the cross on Trinity steeple.

Don't wish you had a thousand dollars; you are making a big enough fool of yourself already on the dollar you have.

PRINCE HENRY OF BATTENBURG

He Dies on the Expedition Against the Ashantees.

The death of Prince Henry Maurice of Battenberg, son-in-law of Queen Victoria, which occurred recently, as the result of swamp fever contracted while on the military expedition of the British into Ashantee, West Africa, is a severe blow to the Queen, who was deeply attached to him, and the Princess Beatrice, his wife. The prince was a fine-looking man and joined the expedition in search of fame, being military secretary to Sir Francis Scott, the general in charge. Soon after entering Ashantee he was stricken with swamp fever and was sent back to the coast to be conveyed to the healthful island of Madeira. He died on the steamer that was conveying him there.

Prince Henry was born in 1858 in Hesse Darmstadt, and was the issue of a morganatic marriage. In 1885, he married the Princess Beatrice, youngest daughter of the Queen and her favorite child. The rest of the royal family and the nation at large opposed the union, but the Queen had her way and furthermore expressly stipulated that the princess should never leave her side. Accordingly Prince Henry became one of the Queen's household, and attended her majesty on almost all occasions. At the time of his marriage he was only drawing $500 a year as a lieutenant in the Prussian army, but the Queen had parliament confer a dowry of $150,000 on Beatrice and an annuity of $30,000. On this the prince and his wife were able to get along. The prince was further ennobled and had offices conferred on him. Nevertheless the English people never took kindly to him, though he was really a good and considerate man. It was to change the feeling toward him that he joined the Ashantee expedition. He sought fame and found death. The prince leaves four children, the oldest of whom is 9 years. Princess Beatrice is 39 years old and has been always popular. She is a musician of note.

Education Pays.

Farmer Hayrix—My boy wants me to send him to college, but I don't believe the results is wuth the money, do you?

Farmer Konschock—Yaas. My cousin Jake's boy he went to college and growed sich a head of hair and sich a lot of muscle that he's makin' $25 a week as the "Wild Giant of Madagascar," an' only has to show twicet a day."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

$85,000 FIRE!

At Waterloo last night

FIVE LARGE BUSINESS HOUSES IN ASHES

LOSS ABOUT $85,000 WITH $31,000 INSURANCE.

The Waterloo Press, A Total Loss.

Though A Paper Will Be Issued This Week.

Wednesday's Daily.

Waterloo was visited by one of the most disastrous fires in her history last night. At about 1 o'clock or a little later. Dr. Welch, a dentist whose office is located on the west side of Main street noticed the fire in Jackman's shoe store. He at once gave the alarm in a short time the fire department was on hand and every effort was put forth to save the stock of boots and shoes. But the flame were angry and soon spread to the adjoining buildings. The fire destroyed the entire block on the east side of the street north of VanVleck street, except one frame structure which stood on the north corner. This was occupied by Swarts Bros. and Co. as a meat market and dwelling. This was owned by H. K. and Ida Leas. They carried $800 insurance on the building. The Jackman shoe store where the fire originated was next to this and the interior was all burned out the walls fell against the frame building and knocked it more than a foot north off the foundation but the building did not fall down, and by heroic work of the fire department it was saved, though the front and cellar walls are ruined. Mrs. J. W. Jackman owned the building in which the fire orignated. She had no insurance on the building, and Mr. Jackman had none on his stock. The second story was occupied by the K. of P. lodge. They had $300 insurance on their furniture and other paraphenalia. South of this building was E. T. Rathfields general store. He had $3000 insurance on his stock of goods. The building was owned by I. O. O. F. lodge and they occupied the second story. They had $500 insurance on furniture and paraphenalia, and $1600 on the building. Next come Willis & Co's. store. They owned the building, and occupied the first floor for a book store. On the second floor, the front room was occupied by Peter Fisher, Merchant Tailor. In ther rear was the Waterloo Press printing office. Everything in the building was a total loss, Willis & Co. carried $4.100 insurance on building and contents, including the printing office, and Mr. Fisher carried $300 on his stock. Next came the large general store of Boyer & Leas. This was a three story building, and was occupied exclusively by this firm. They carried $2,000 insurance on building and $15.000 on stock. The building on the corner was owned by Dr. A. B. Darby. In the basement of this building Ed. Wareham had a barber shop. His goods were a total loss with no insurance. On the first floor was J. D. Campbell's drug store His stock was also a total loss with $1.500 insurance. Just east of this John W. Hoover had a barber shop. His goods were a total loss with no insurance. And at the extreme east end of the Darby building on the first floor was the postoffice. They succeeded in getting all the mail out of the office, but the cases and etc, burned. They had no insurance. On the second floor of the Darby building the rear end was used for a photograph gallery by Chas Hartwick. He had no insurance. The front room was occupied by the doctor. He had no insurance on his office fixtures but carried $3.500 on the building.

This covers the different firms who suffered from the flames, though considerable damage was done to buildings across the street. Among those who received damages by the heat, breaking the glass and cracking the paint, were: John F. Maxson and Bassett Estate, Ed Leas, Grueter Bros., Geo. Shoner and the Lock Hotel. How the fire originated is not known. Some say it started in the Odd Fellows hall, but the more reliable information is, that it started in the Jackman shoe store. Heroic work was done by the fire department, and in fact, we can hardly see how the flames were kept from spreading to the other frame buildings. The total loss was estimated this morning at about $85,000 with insurance, divided as before stated, amounting to about $31,000.

NOTES.

The safe of Willis & Co. was opened this morning and its contents found in good condition.

The safe of Boyer & Leas was also being opened as the COURIER representative left the scene.

The watch dog of Boyer & Leas, generally known as "Bob," was shut in the basement of their store and was burned

The COURIER reporter visited the scene at about 9 o'clock. We are indebted to Attorney W. H. Leas for our information concerning the losses and insurance.

We were informed that the Waterloo Press would be issued as usual this week though it may be a day late. We extend to Bro. Willis the use of our presses and material.

The postoffice was moved into the Citizens Bank building, and by ten o'clock mail was being delivered.

More than twenty-five Auburn people went to Waterloo on the noon train today to view the scene.

FROM CUBA.

By request of some of my friends I will write a few notes for publication of my trip to Cuba. I will endeavor to avoid any thing personal and only mention some things that will be of general interest. As some of my letters have been previously published, I will commence with my trip from Tampa, Florida. Two steamships make the trip from Tampa to Havana, Cuba, via. Key West usually but as the war is now on, only one is required and it makes two trips a week. The Olivette is a very beautiful steamer belonging to the Plant R. R system Any one desiring to go to Cuba must first procure a passport by going before a notary public and making affidavit that they are American citizens. After procuring this you take the train for Port Tampa, which is eight miles from Tampa. The boat leaves at 9 p. m and nothing of interest is seen until you reach the island of Key West at 3 p m. The boat lands until 9 p. m. giving passengers 6 hours to look over the island The people are mostly Cubans and Negroes, but some Americans can be found. The principal industry is the manufacture of sugar, and sponge gathering. I can not say Key West is a beautiful place, but the opposite. The most pleasant place on the island is where the U. S. barracks are located, and two companies of artillery are stationed. The language spoken is Spanish principally. Nothing of interest is to be seen unless it is the mules propelling the street cars. Cocoa nut trees are plenty and some orange trees and buzzards in abundance. At 9 p. m we sailed again and nothing of interest except several schools of porpoises which were interesting to me, but not to the sailors, until we were awakened by the salute of heavy guns. On looking out we saw Morro Castle standing out well into the sea, protecting the harbor of Havana. We saw a boat coming to meet us, which a sailor told me was the pilot to guide our boat safely into the harbor. He boarded the boat and did so. Next we saw another boat coming to meet us which contained the physician to inspect us. He did so. Next was the police boat, and after a critical examination of passports, and ourselves, they left. And then came the hotel men, only nine of them, and myself the only passenger. I got ashore all right, but was compelled to leave my grip behind to be tumbled around and contents inspected. After landing you feel a sensation that is very strange, for looking around you see many inquiring faces among the hundreds of fishermen and spectators, and if you speak to one they simply shake their heads, shrug their shoulders and turn away. You are first surprised at the streets because you are compelled to go through the old part of town when leaving the docks and you think you have got into an alley until you look at the windows where you see the goods displayed. The streets are not more than twelve feet wide and sidewalk only fifteen inches, so people in passing are compelled to step into the streets at the risk of their lives from the vehicles After traveling for a half mile or more you enter what is konwn as the new part of Havana. The streets here are very wide and pleasant, with sidewalks about twelve feet wide.

Meet at Auburn.

The republican chairmen of the several counties met at Fort Wayne Monday evening and decided to hold their convention to select a delegate to the national convention March 19th at Auburn.

Sudden Death.

Death seems to be reaping a harvest now. While the family and friends of Mrs. Long were laying her to rest at Waterloo Sunday, Mrs. Tefft, Judge McClellan's sister, was suddenly taken worse, and by the time he had reached home, and could call on her she was too low to speak, and probably did not recognize him. She sank away and died soon after, at about 5:30 p. m. Friday she was present at the bedside of Mrs Long, at Judge McClellan's, though suffering some from a cold. Saturday morning she was taken worse, and the grip set in. Mrs. Swarts was sent for and prescribed for her, but it was not thought she was in danger, till Sunday afternoon, when the disease seems to have attacked her heart. We believe she had had some heart trouble before, and it was this turn that proved fatal.

Jane McClellan Tefft was born in Ashland county, Ohio, Nov, 16, 1845, and departed this life Feb. 9, 1896, at the age of 50 years, 2 months and 24 days.

She came to this county with her parents, thirty-one years ago, and resided at Waterloo till 1874, since which date, her home has been in Auburn. She was married to R. D. Tefft in 1871, and to them two daughters were born, Ina McDowell and Rowena, both of whom survive her. She united with the M. E. church at Waterloo over twenty five years ago. Mrs. Tefft, was a woman of great intelligence, of kind and womanly impulses, devoted to the care of her children, and her early death will be to them a severe blow. The funeral was at the home to day, Feb. 12, at 2 p. m., the services being by Rev. F. C. Colvin, and the interment in Woodlawn.

The deceased leaves, beside the immediate family a brother and three sisters to mourn her loss, Judge McClellan, Mrs. Joseph Myles of Detroit, and two sisters in Ohio. The two last named were not able to attend, owing to poor health.

Obituary.

Wm. McKinley was born in Mifflin Co. Pa., January 22, 1820 and died at his home in Butler township, Feb 6, 1896 at the age of 76 years and 14 days. At an early age he came to Ohio. He came to DeKalb county, Indiana, about thirty-three years ago, and located first in Jackson township and sixteen years ago moved to Butler township. He was first married in Ashland Co., Ohio, to Mary Shinneman and to this union were born four children. Sometime after she died and later he married Sarah Romine, and to them were born twelve children three of whom preceded him to the grave Mr. McKinley was a hardworking man, good neighbor and kind and considerate in his family. In the early years of the county he was a willing helper on all occasions. His funeral was largely attended and his sons were present, which would include Samuel and James from Hayesville, Ohio, and Ben of Lagrange county.

CORUNNA.

Trumbull and family visited in Fairfield last week.

Harvey Franks is down with hemorrhage of the lungs.

Mrs. Murphy and daughter returned home last week from a two weeks visit in Findlay Ohio.

William Shoup is down with lung fever. Dr. Snyder is bringing him around all right.

The hearts of many of the old veterans were made glad this week by receiving their pension checks.

Charley Cutter, of Churubusco is visiting his brother Homer and family.

Frank Moody made a sale last Saturday, and is moving onto a large farm south of Kendallville.

There is no ice as yet put up in Corunna, and the prospect is not very flattering for any first class ice any more this winter.

Gus Traas, who has been lying near the point of death for several days, we are glad to say has made a change for the better

BUTLER.

The M. E. friends very abruptly closed the revival effort just as an interest began to be manifested. Some half a dozen or more accessions were secured.

The U. B. friends continue with varied success. They have secured some valuable accessions and our good people are much rejoiced over it.

Oak Hill school is prospering under the labor of its third teacher for this term.

Haverstock & Shield meat market has closed, so we only have two meat markets, and they are side by side.

Charles H. Rickley, Wolf's most accommodating clerk, married recently, and now purchased the Fanny Davidson property on the corner of North and East Avenue streets. Charley is a deserving and industrious young man.

Charles W. Campbell is now one among the seventy hustling bicycle makers at our factory.

Lizzie Champion of Angola continues her visit with her sister, Mrs. J. A. Campbell.

Dr. Shumaker's little daughter Zura is still under treatment at Hope Hospital, in Ft. Wayne where she is being treated for a severe attack of inflamation of the eyes. Her sight was despaired of, when she was taken there, but we understand she is improving now.

Cal. Chambers has shaken the unfriendly Hamilton dust from his feet and has come back to Butler to try his fortunes again.

J. A. Campbell and a few other Butler people attended the delinquent tax sale at Auburn last Monday.

Isaac Stiefel, Max Myers and one or two other Butler young men are on the eve of starting to Cripple Creek to try their fortunes in that gold field.

We are glad to hear that Dr. Hines had succeeded in freeing the Cubans and had returned to his native home with a whole anatomy.

Farmers' Institute

There will be a joint Farmers' Institute for Steuben and DeKalb counties held in Clark's Hall at Ashley on Thursday, Feb. 27, 1896, commencing at 10 a. m. A Battle Scarred Veteran.

Nearly everyone in Medina Co., Ohio, knows Stephen Rolph, of River Styx, the one legged veteran, who lost his leg at Winchester, Va., March 23, '62 In all probability the exposure and privations of army service, the effects of which are felt as they grow older by nearly all old soldiers, were the cause of the serious nervous prostration and sleeplessness of which Comrade Rolph complained. He says.

"People hereabout know me pretty well, but you can tell others that I was down for about six months with nervous prostration and sleeplessness for which I tried various doctors and medicines, but Dr. Wheeler's Nerve vitalizer has done me more good than all the doctoring I had done. The first bottle gave me such great relief that I have used several and feel almost restored to my former good health."

Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer can be relied upon by any who are suffering from nervous troubles, sleeplessness, etc. If all tired out and run down, you need a reliable nerve and system tonic and health restorer as this remedy is. Sold in Auburn by F. E. Davenport, and by all dealers everywhere. 1-f

J. W. Pierce, Republic, Ia., says: "I have used One Minute Cough Cure in my family and for myself, with results so entirely satisfactory that I can hardly find words to express myself as to its merit I will never fail to recommend it to others on every occasion that presents itself." Davenport the Druggist. See book.

Wednesday evening, Feb. 5, a few of Miss Anna E. Master's young friends gave her a very pleasant surprise, it being her twenty-first birthday. A number of nice presents were received. At eleven a lunch was served and all went home after enjoying a very pleasant evening.

The COURIER's pig story has been largely copied into our neighboring exchanges. It is in fact, a strange story We now learn that some of the neighbors are inclined to think that some irresponsible boys or young men may have shot the pig and then managed to get him up and into the tree in order to conceal him But even if this should prove true, the affair is still a queer one.

Samuel E. Long, brother to Mrs. Judge McClellan is in town being called here by the critical illness of his mother Mrs. Long. He is now a resident of Richmond, Va., where he has a responsible position with the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad. He is looking well and seems but little older than when we first knew him more than twenty-five years ago. He finds many old friends, who call out the old familiar name of "Sam," as soon as they set eyes on him.

We saw Judge McClellan, president of the First National Bank, the other day with a pile of exceedingly attractive sheets of pictured paper before him They were bran new ten and twenty dollar bills, that he had just finished signing. After they are cut apart they are ready for business. New bills are issued to the banks, whenever old bills are for any cause taken up and destroyed or when a bank is reorganized with a larger capital so as to hold more U. S. bond and issue against them a greater volume of bills.

Cal Husselman's milk wagon team took a notion to run away this forenoon. But after running through the tough, half-frozen mud from near the Farmers Bank to the Glazier House, they were easily stopped. About the same time a team with a load of wood took the same foolish notion. In spite of the heavy roads they made the wood fly along north and then east of the public square, but were stopped before much damage had been done.

The COURIER reporter talked to-day with one of the gentlemen who helped to cut the tree and capture the dead pig the COURIER has been writing about He says they got several of the neighbors to watch with their guns and shoot the animal when the tree fell. But they were all surprised to find the dead pig. He says the pig weighed over 100 pounds.

G. H. Yeabera is experimenting with a Kodak. He has fine views of most all of the principal points of interest in Auburn. Cuts of many of them will soon appear in the DAILY COURIER. In passing Mr. Yeabera you should look pretty for he is liable to "get you" at any time.

Saturday's Daily.

Old Mr. Steckley of Sedan died yesterday noon rather suddenly.

Mr. Phillips, father of Mrs. R. Sawvel and Mrs. Whetsel, is here the guest in the home of the former.

Mr. D. Y. Husselman is greatly improved. He now is able to go out of doors and walk about by support of his son.

Mrs. Charles Reesch, of Garrett, was in town to-day. She is settling up the estate of her husband and finds it adds greatly to her cares and work.

Uncle George Wagner was a caller at the COURIER sanctum to-day. He has fully recovered from the hard siege he had with his hand last year and is looking better than ever.

WANTED—A reliable lady or gentleman to distribute samples and make a house-to-house canvass for our Vegetable Toilet Soaps. $10 to $75 a month easily made. Address Crotts & Reed, 842 to 850 Austin Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Lafayette Buss of Fairfield called on the COURIER to day. He has been having quite a success in raising apples, his crop last year being over 500 bushels all of which he found a good market for. He is also engaged in handling stock for the market.

John S. Potts of Sedan was here to day, and brought the usual $1.50 of his uncle, John Potts. The latter was 83 Tuesday, but is still in pretty good shape. Mrs. Potts fell last fall and was considerably hurt, and rheumatism set in later, which has troubled her a good deal.

Seuben Republican:—Hon. "Foghorn" Kelley, of DeKalb county, several years ago jumped off the democratic platform and took a chair in the "bald-eagle" row on the populist slab, but since he saw his picture in a recent issue of the Auburn COURIER he has been tempted to migrate west and grow up with the illustrious cowboy fraternity.

Steuben Republican: John Kratz says: During my recent visit to the south I saw many amusing things, and one especially that I will not soon forget. The negroes do not buy flour in paper sacks as we do here, but insist on having it in cotton sacks, and after the flour is used the sack comes in good play for clothing for the little darkey children. One little fellow I saw playing about the depot had on a suit made from cloth procured in this way, and to make the already comical suit appear more ridiculous it had been made in such a way that across the seat of his pants appeared in plain letters, the following familiar words: "Full Roller Process."

Arthur Carr, of Angola, has written the Hicksville, Ohio News as follows: "On the north bank of Crooked lake, on my father's farm, is a stone wall some ten or fifteen rods in length, running parallel with the shore. At one place it crosses a small hollow at which place it is six or eight feet in height. It is formed of common hard-head stones found in that vicinity, and earth. On the top of the wall large trees are growing, showing it was built many years ago Of course it has more or less fallen into ruin, but is still perfect enough in its construction to show it to have been the work of man. Of its origin nothing is known, it outdating the earliest recollections of white men or red. That it was built as a means of defense there can be no doubt The question is who were the builders and what became of them?"

Arthur Grube came up from Fort Wayne Saturday to visit friends and relatives in Auburn and vicinity.

J. A. Gushwa, of Corunna, made a business trip to Auburn to-day and called up to see us while here.

Oru Knisely and Flora Jones of Butler were guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Hartman and the editor's family.

Ira Brandon leaves at 6:15 to-morrow morning for St. Paul, where he expects to work. He will help to erect creameries.

O. P. Raber, the wideawake Corunna druggist was in town this forenoon. He says business is good up there, which we are glad to hear.

M. Berenstein of Marion, Ind., was in the city to-day and rented the Gandy room and will put in a stock of Bankrupt Clothing, Boots & Shoes.

Chas. Stafford came up from Fort Wayne Saturday evening, being called home by the death of Mrs. Essig, of Jackson township, who was a relative of his.

There never was a congress of the United States that did absolutely nothing till the present one. It is needless to say this congress is strongly republican.

Read the call of Chairman J. F. Shuman in to day's COURIER. The committeemen from each precinct in the county should respond to the call, as a new county chairman and other officers are to be elected.

We publish to day, the first installment of some notes on Cuba and Cuban matters, from the pen of Dr. L. A. Hines. It will be read with interest, as he speaks of what he saw personally, and the people and conditions as he found them.

For the first time this winter, wheat is in some danger of freezing. But we hope a change of weather will relieve it. There has been an unusual amount of wheat sown, and we hope to see it bring us a good crop, even if prices are low.

J. A. Slaybaugh of Fairfield Center was a welcome caller to-day. Mr. S. is one of our old teachers, and has been trustee of his township several terms.

George Craig had a runaway at the north end this morning. We did not learn how the team got started. The wagon tongue was broken but no other damage done.

Our people are growing more and more in the habit of looking to Davenport for the latest and best of everything in the drug line. They sell Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of bad colds, croup and whooping cough. When in need of such a medicine give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. 9.

Mrs. F. J. Yeabera received a dispatch Saturday evening from Dr. Johnson at South Bend, saying that her mother, Mrs. Hare was seriously ill, and telling her to come at once. She and Mr. Yeabera went over the Wabash via Logansport and the Vandalia road to South Bend. Mr. Yeabera came home this afternoon and says Mrs. Hare is much better, and will likely soon be out again.

J. J. VanAuken showed us this morning a map of the new summer resort he is laying out at Cedar Lake, about seven miles from Columbia City. The park will contain about 65 acres, all lying between the lakes. It will when completed, make a beautiful summer resort. The new electric railroad will run to the lake. Mr. VanAuken left this morning to resume his work at that place.

The papers are publishing full lists of the successful bidders on the recent U. S bond issue, and we notice among the successful bidders the name of W. B. Hibbs of Washington, D. C. He is a brother-in-law of Charles McClellan of this city, and is a banker in Washington. His bid was for $500,000 worth, and being slightly above that of the Morgan syndicate, his offer was accepted. As these new bonds have rapidly risen in value several points, it will be seen that Mr. Hibbs has made a nice thing of it.

Politics makes strange bedfellows. It is only a few years since A. D. Moore of Wilmington was a strong democrat—so strong that he wanted an office. He sought early and late to get the nomination for sheriff. Failing in this, he helped to elect the republican nominee for the place. But only two years later, he again asked a favor on the democratic county ticket,—this time for commissioner. He did not get it. Then he went over to the republicans, because he believed that his sheep would do better under a high tariff. And thus wags the world.

The funeral of Mrs. Long was held at 1 p. m. yesterday as noted and the remains taken to Waterloo. After the interment, many of those from Auburn went to the Presbyterian church to attend Dr. Chamberlain's funeral services Quite a number also remained till after the interment. The attendance was quite large. Among the mourners we noticed Judge McBride and wife of Indianapolis, and John W. Baxter and wife of Auburn, the ladies being daughters of Dr. Chamberlain. Mrs Levi Jackson of New Era, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. DeLong and Mrs. Bronson of Newville, the three ladies being sisters to Mrs. Chamberlain. There were many other familiar faces present.

Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Siver returned to Ft. Wayne yesterday afternoon. They were here over Sunday, to attend the funeral of Mrs. Long, who was Mrs. Siver's grandmother.

The joke is on one of our enterprising citizens who started out the other morning to do his chores at the barn, with his lighted lantern in his hand, though it was broad daylight.

James Lewis and wife left to-day for Hamilton where they will visit friends a few days. From there they will go to Pleasant Lake before returning home.

The Auburn Improvement Association will publish a monthly statement of the receipts and expenditure of the association hereafter. This is a good idea.

He didn't know it was loaded, but when a COURIER reporter heard the "bang thereof" and went to the laundry to see what had happened there, he found a hole in the ceiling where the bullet had escaped.

Mr Eckhart writes from the south that he will not be home till about the opening of spring. He is spending the winter at Jacksonville and Kissimee in Florida and finds the conditions so favorable that he will stay.

George Dancer and sister Mrs. Dr Nunnum of South Milford were in the city yesterday having been called here by the death of Mrs. Essig of Jackson township. While in the city they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Kinsey.

Marriage licenses were issued yesterday to J. T. Hayden and Mrs. O. A. Putnam. Mr. Hayden is traveling Auditor of the Lake Shore railroad company and has his headquarters at Cleveland. Mrs. Putnam is a resident of Auburn.

Quite a number of people listened to Cyclone Bennett at the opera house last evening. We are told he would be quite a fair success if he would learn a few jokes that had not that ancient flavor about them. The singing was excellent.

The Columbia City Post says there are no better looking soldiers than their militia boys. Look out there! Don't forget that Co. K. 3d Reg't, Auburn is the best looking and most soldiery company to be found in Indiana. And they are the best drilled. When your boys have worked for several years, as hard as our boys have, and under as able officers, we'll compare notes.

W. H Webster in company with R. C. Baxter of this place, called on us this forenoon. Mr. Webster is an old DeKalb boy, a son of William Webster who died at Fairfield Center many years ago. He has been absent in various parts of the west for eleven years and is now back for a few months visit in the old neighborhood. After being in Kansas awhile when he first went west, his business took him to various other points. He is now located at Cripple Creek, the great mining country of the mountains and we believe is interested in some of the gold mines there. He says that John C. Sommers is also at Cripple Creek now, and is in the mining business Mr. Webster has a high opinion of various parts of the great west, but concedes that as a purely farming country, old Fairfield would be the place. We believe he will remain in the county till sometime in the summer.

The European powers seem to be taking turns in seeing how close to the airhole they can skate without going through the ice.

The absence of the Lillian Russell matrimonial rumor is inexplicable. Doesn't the diva understand that this year is divisible by four?

Those South African Boers are a very economical, frugal people. They didn't waste any ammunition on Jameson's men—130 killed, 27 wounded.

In view of his success in preventing that Jacksonville prize fight we have no doubt that Governor Mitchell of Florida could easily nip in the bud a war with England.

Corbett says he is "again ready to fight." Well, if he can find a phonograph that isn't in use we don't see anything to prevent him from fighting as well as usual.

Martinus Sieveking, the pianist who mysteriously disappeared from his room in New York recently, was accustomed to practice on the piano ten hours a day. Perhaps that explains the mystery of his disappearance.

A timorous Gotham paper wants to know how the sea coast inhabitants can protect themselves when English men-of-war begin throwing shells ten miles inland. That's easy. Blow up the Welland canal and come West.

The London News remarks that "whatever may be thought of Dr. Jameson's judgment it must be acknowledged that his aim was praiseworthy." Well, not so blamed praiseworthy, either; the Boer sharpshooters aimed much better.

Rev. John Hammond, of Tamworth, N. H., has been arrested and lodged in jail for having four wives simultaneously. Serves him right. In these hard times no minister on a small salary ought to undertake to support more than two or three wives.

China is unfortunate. It can neither fight nor make the European powers jealous of each other. The result is that England, France and Russia are carving it up without the slightest ceremony. If China kills a single Christian, indemnity is promptly exacted. The Sultan, on the other hand, murders Christians by the thousand, and yet feels perfectly secure as the pampered pet of Europe.

That an Arctic explorer should pass unscathed through the perils of ice and snow and then be frozen to death in the mountains of his native Norway, is one of the astounding mysteries of fate. Elvind Astrup was a young Norwegian, who semed to have a great future before him. He was a volunteer in Peary's first Arctic expedition and in the famous inland ice journey did manful service. He had explored the glacier region of Melville Bay, and named one of the greatest glaciers after King Oscar of Norway. He intended to adapt ballooning to the work of Arctic exploration.

New World: The condition of the people of St. John's, N. F., furnishes a test of the sincerity of the efforts made in Great Britain and in this country to raise funds for the relief of the distress in Armenia. As a result of bad times and of bad loans it is stated officially that one thousand families in St. John's are without food, fuel and clothing and have nothing with which to face the rigors of the four coming months. There is no work by which they could earn an honest living. Any one who feels philanthropically inclined, especially any Englishman or Canadian who is yearning for an opportunity to display his philanthropy, can undoubtedly find a fine field nearer home than Armenia. The distress in Newfoundland is genuine and heartrending.

There is no element of real tragedy in Prince Henry of Battenberg's death from fever on the African coast. The Prince's position at the English court was an uncomfortable, in some respects perhaps a painful, one. Like the late Prince Consort, whose popularity in England was wholly posthumous, he was regarded with little favor on account of his nationality, his relatively inferior rank and his lack of wealth. His personal qualities, which are said to have been admirable, weighed little against the dense prejudices of race and station, while the domestic conditions imposed upon him at his marriage with Princess Beatrice served only to increase the difficulties that surrounded him. To these difficulties the Ashantee expedition appeared to offer a solution. Prowess in the field is a sure passport to English hearts, and Prince Henry doubtless aspired to win with his sword a higher place in the estimation of his adopted country. These hopes were doomed to a cruel disappointment. He has not even had the good fortune to be slain in battle. He was struck down with fever before the enemy were so much as in sight. Sympathy will everywhere be felt for Queen Victoria and Princess Beatrice, by whom the ill-fated Prince appears to have been sincerely loved.

Those who know just where the shoe pinches will be interested in the information which comes from Union Hill, N. J., that Charles Heinzmann of that place has discovered a new and sure "one night corn cure" that may be relied upon to work every time. Mr. Heinzmann of late has been much worried by the presence of a hot, insistent and self-assertive corn on the littlest toe of his left foot. He confided to his young wife the source of his woe and was jocularly advised by her to "cut the toe off." He did. The job was done with a butcher's cleaver and Mr. Heinzmann has not been troubled by the corn since then. It should also be added that Mr. Heinzmann died of blood poisoning.

Recently a fire broke out in one of the public school buildings of Omaha. The children had been accustomed to a fire drill and had been thoroughly instructed what they must do in case of an alarm. A little fellow named Ollie Downs was the drummer, and it was his duty whenever the alarm sounded to take his position at the foot of the stairs with his drum and start the procession with his ratapan. The teacher who discovered the fire marshaled her pupils in their accustomed order, then notified the principal, who also placed the other children in the ranks. By this time both principal and teachers began to lose their heads, and as the smoke filled the building the children were thrown into a panic, which was intensified by the beating of the gong. Little Ollie, however, did not lose his head. He rushed for his drum, put himself in his customary place at the foot of the stairs, though it was close to the fire and in the midst of blinding smoke, and began his drum beat. At the familiar sound the children fell into the ranks and the march began. The procession filed quietly out and all were saved, when but a moment before it seemed likely that many of them would be killed in a mad scramble to get out of the building. Ollie was the hero of the occasion by his courage and presence of mind, and he has received the due meed of praise as his reward. The incident shows the value of military discipline and the habit of unquestioning obedience. And there is a useful lesson in Ollie's leadership, though every boy might not have had his thoughtfulness and bravery.

A NEW PLAGUE.

A Bird that May Destroy Sheep-Raising in Australia.

The rabbit is not the only pest of Australia. A new one has sprun up and it bids fair to destroy sheep-raising in the colonies. The kea is the name of the new pest and it is a bird. Formerly its food consisted of insects, berries and roots of various kinds, but the advent of settlers led to the burning over of vast tracts of territory, thereby destroying the natural food of the bird. The kea in an evil hour experimented on kidney fat in the killing-yard of some sheep station and discovering a good thing told its fellows. The birds promptly began to prey on living sheep, sinking their beaks into the kidneys of the animals and causing death. A writer thus treats of the kea: "So rapacious has it become that it has been known to attack a sheep when directly under the charge of a shepherd, and in broad daylight; indeed there are not wanting cases where it has been known to attack foals, and one instance is reported of a horse becoming its victim." In a single twelve months in a corner of one run these birds destroyed over 1,000 sheep. They have been known to kill as many as 200 healthy sheep in a single night.

His Idea of It.

What the wisest man knows is only as a drop in the bucket. It is nothing to be astonished at, therefore, that a young fellow of ordinary intellectual gifts should be ignorant of so complicated a matter as the structure of a lady's gown; but no doubt some feminine readers will be amused by a bit of a story related in the Philadelphia Press:

While dancing at a summer resort a young man was so unfortunate as to tread upon a lady's gown and tear it. He made an earnest apology.

"I hope it isn't ruined hopelessly," he said.

"Oh, no," was the owner's kind response; "I shall only have to put another breadth in it."

The expression of the young man's face changed from distress to bewilderment.

"Another breadth?" he murmured.

The girl smiled, and entered into a detailed explanation of the way a gown was made—the cutting, goring, stitching and what not.

"Well, well," said the young man, drawing a long breath, "I have learned something. I always supposed women just gathered the stuff up round their waists whole. I never dreamed that it was all cut up and then put together again."

RELICS OF LINCOLN.

INTERESTING COLLECTION OF THEM IN CHICAGO.

They Bring Back to the Memory Events in the History of the Martyr President—From Boyhood Days to the Ill-Fated Night in the Theater.

Reminders of a Great Man.

Had Abraham Lincoln lived until now he would have been 87 years of age. But his destiny was not such. In the full prime of the greatness that he had achieved he was struck down by the assassin's hand without the warning of a moment. The long war that had marked his administration and the terrible circumstances attending his death made it deeply impressive. A general gloom pervaded the whole country. Flags hung at half-mast and public buildings and private residences everywhere were draped in black.

Lincoln was the third President to die while occupying the official chair. William Henry Harrison died April 4, 1841, one month after inauguration, and Zachary Taylor July 9, 1850. The death of Lincoln occurred April 15, 1865, and the fourth and last President to die in office was James A. Garfield, who met a fate similar to Lincoln's in 1881.

Lincoln was President during the most difficult period of the history of this country, during the greatest civil war the world has ever known. His noble character, portrayed during the whole of that memorable struggle, impressed upon the people a reverence that never will be forgotten, and his birthday will always be fittingly remembered everywhere in the United States.

But, says the Chicago Tribune, while these memorial services impress upon the minds of the people the memories of that illustrious martyr, there is no fear that Chicagoans will ever forget him, for right among them are more mementos of the war President than can be found in any other city of the Union. The largest of these collections is at the Libby Prison War Museum, and Manager Macloon believes it to be the most authentic collection of Lincoln material extant.

In connection with his early life there are original photographs of the house in which Lincoln's father lived and died in Coles County, Ill., and also an original photograph of the house that Abe Lincoln and Dennis Hanks built and occupied in Mercer County, in 1830, where Lincoln made fame as a rail splitter. This house was on exhibition at the Sanitary Fair held in this city in 1865, and Mr. and Mrs. Hanks lived in it during its exhibition in Chicago. It will be remembered that Dennis Hanks taught Lincoln his first lesson in reading and writing, and this collection contains a good photograph of the old gentleman. There is also an original copy of the Sangamon Journal of Springfield, Ill., of Nov. 11, 1842, which contains the notice of his marriage. The collection contains many interesting manuscripts of Lincoln, of which, perhaps, the most noted is his famous last dispatch to Gen. Grant.

In this collection of Lincoln mementos at Libby Prison there are many things worthy of extended notice, but to make it brief the following are a few of them: the key, a piece of the curtain, and wall paper of the box in which he was shot at Ford's Theater; six of the chairs used in the box on the ill-fated night and an original program of the play; Lincoln's library chair, a sofa from his residence, and the bed upon which the body lay while the physicians were holding the autopsy; his old bootjack made by himself, and all of the portraits of himself ever published. Among the original photographs is one that shows what an unusually tall man he was. It is a picture of Allen Pinkerton, Gen. McClernand and himself at the headquarters of the Army of the Potomac. The three men are standing before an open tent, Lincoln, in the center, towering head and shoulders above his two companions. There are also portraits of Lincoln's wife and family, J. Wilkes Booth, and photographs of the conspirators; photographs of the interior of the theater in which he was shot, photographs of the execution, the original temporary headboards placed over the graves of the conspirators, and the beam from which they were hanged. The collection also includes a life mask and casts of Lincoln's hands taken in 1860 by Leonard Volk, the well-known sculptor of this city. It is interesting to note in the hand casts that there is such a vast difference in the size of them that one would hardly believe they belonged to the same person.

The left hand is of normal proportions, the veins standing out in them very distinctly, but the right hand seems unusually fat and chubby, not a vein being discernible. This is accounted for by the fact that the night before Lincoln had been given a reception and such a multitude of people had grasped his hand that it was greatly swollen the following morning when Volk made the casts. In the museum there are two life-size oil portraits of Lincoln, one of which is by Lambkin, the celebrated Philadelphia artist, and an oil portrait of Major R. C. Todd, a brother of Mrs. Lincoln. This is notable for the fact that Todd was in the Confederate army and had charge of Castle Thunder prison, Richmond, during the war.

Besides this collection there are many other interesting Lincoln mementos in Chicago, the largest private collection being owned by Charles F. Gunther. The most important of the many mementos that he possesses is a duplicate copy of the Emancipation Proclamation. This is not one of the published fac-simile copies, of which there are many, but is an exact duplicate, bearing the original signatures of Lincoln and his cabinet. Among the other original manuscripts in this collection is a poem in Lincoln's handwriting written in 1853, an address on thirteen pages of foolscap, delivered before the Springfield Library Association, a letter to a committee regarding the Boston, Mass., Thomas Jefferson celebration in April, 1859; the original record leaves from Lincoln's father's family Bible in Abe's handwriting; several of the transfer deeds to the different lands owned by Lincoln's father and mother; a piece of his copy-book, used when he was 16 years of age; the chain of the watch that he carried in boyhood days, a number of interesting war documents, locks of his hair, and many personal effects, including a number of pieces of clothing worn by him.

Mr. Gunther also owns the carriage used by Lincoln in Washington, and later by Mrs. Lincoln in Chicago. This is at the Libby Prison Museum. The watch that Lincoln wore on the night of the assassination is now owned by Robert Todd Lincoln, and was changed from a key to a stem winder fifteen years ago. John Neterstrom, of Lake View, owns a cane that was sent to the White House in 1862 by some unknown admirer. It was carved out of a piece of apple wood, and is a marvelous piece of artistic work. It was so unique and so different from the many other canes sent to Lincoln that he prized this particular walking stick above all others of the many that he had received.

Charles Rector is a son-in-law of Mr. Peterson, who owned the house in Washington in which Lincoln died, and he keeps as a valuable and interesting memento the picture that hung over the bed upon which the President died. The picture is not a valuable one except for this fact. A son of Mr. Peterson, now living in Baltimore, Md., owns the quilt that was on the bed at the death, and Mrs. Magruder of Washington, D. C., owns the original bed. The house still stands in Washington.

LINCOLN, PINKERTON, AND M'CLERNAND.

14TH OF FEBRUARY.

Interesting Facts Concerning the History of St. Valentine.

Hundreds of thousands of valentines pass through the postoffice Feb. 14. That the postman of long ago was burdened with similar tokens to the letter carrier of our day is shown in an old English rhyme which says:

Where can the postman be, I say?
He ought to fly on such a day!
Of all days in the year, you know,
It's monstrous rude to be so slow.
The fellow's so exceeding stupid!
Hark! there he is. Ah, the dear Cupid!

The original St. Valentine had nothing to do with our present celebration of the day which bears his name. According to history he was a Roman priest who suffered martyrdom, being beaten with clubs and afterward beheaded by direction of Emperor Claudius in the year 270 A. D. Feb. 14 was appointed by the church to be observed in his honor.

Isaac Disraeli has pointed out many of our children's games, the tumblers and street acrobats, the carnivals and speaking pantomimes of Italy, were all once common in ancient Rome. And so the custom connected with St. Valentine's day may also be traced to a rite that was practiced in the same city. During the month of February festivals were held in honor of Februata-Juno. These feasts were called the Lupercalia. One of the ceremonies taking place at this time consisted of placing in a box, with great pomp and solemnity, slips of paper bearing the names of young girls. After the box had been shaken up the young men each drew out a slip, and this obtained what we should call a valentine.

The leaders of the early Christian church, wishing to do away with heathen rites, changed this. The young men, instead of drawing the names of young girls, drew those of early saints, and each was supposed to imitate the example of the saint whose name he drew. As the heathen rite took place about Feb. 14, that day was fixed on for the new ceremony. So, that day being St. Valentine's, his name has come down to us linked with the custom.

Valentine day celebrations have been kept up in England and Scotland for many years. Shakspeare and Chaucer both allude to them, also the poet Lydgate, who died in 1440. A learned traveler named Meison wrote in the seventeenth century of an old English valentine party:

"On the eve of Feb. 14 the young folks gather together, an equal number of maids and bachelors forming the party. Each one writes his or her name on a separate billet, and these are rolled up and cast into a pile. Then the names are drawn, the maids drawing the bachelors' named and the bachelors the maids'. The names drawn are valentines to those who draw them. The young men were expected to entertain their valentines with dances and treats, and often to make them costly presents. They also wore the billets containing their valentine's names on their sleeves or their hearts for many days."

In London and some other places the lad's valentine was the first lass he met after leaving the house on Valentine's day, and the maid's was the first lad she met under the same circumstances. Being drawn as a valentine obliged the chosen one to bring a present to his lady, hence the custom was sometimes called "relieving." At some valentine parties the young man had a right to kiss the girl whose name he drew, and drawing the same name three times was thought a very fortunate omen.

One old writer says: "St. Valentine was chosen to be the guardian of lovers, not because lovers are more superstitious than other people, but because they have more imagination."

There are slight differences in the customs of different countries, but the same ideas run through all the ceremonies. St. Valentine's day is the day of choosing one's mate. The old country tradition has it that all birds of the air choose their mates for the year on St. Valentine's day.

Comic valentines are a modern invention. About 25,000,000 of these are printed yearly, comprising about 1,000 different kinds.

AUNT MARTHA'S VALENTINE.

A Pretty and Delicately Tinted Missive that Came Too Late.

"MISS Martha Whitney, was the address on the large, heavily embroidered, white envelope, I knew, when I took it from the postman, that it was a valentine, and I fancied that there were words inside that would have brought joy to the patient heart, could she have been given the power to read them.

But there was crape on the door that 14th of February and the tender message had come too late.

"If any letters come for me after I'm gone you may read them and answer them for me," she had said, so I opened the envelope, and looked at the dainty offering.

It was a pretty, delicately tinted missive, containing a pathetic little verse, below which was written in an unsteady hand, the one word, "John."

Upstairs in her trunk, the contents of which had also been given to me, there was another valentine, a memento that had been guarded so sacredly that none but myself knew of its existence.

'Once, when but a child, I had been standing near while she was searching for something and had caught one fleeting glimpse of it. "What is that pretty letter, Aunt Martha?" I had asked. "Is it a valentine?"

"Yes," she had answered, in such a tone that, young as I was, I instantly perceived that no further questioning would be allowed. But how thankful I had been for that one slight bit of knowledge of her past when a few days later I was at a neighbor's house where there were a number of women who, not noticing me, commenced talking about my beloved aunt. "Yes, she's a good enough woman," one of them said, "but so queer. Why, I've heard it said, on good authority, that she never had a beau in her life."

Instantly I darted out from my place in the corner, and, standing in the midst of the astonished women, I indignantly refuted the statement, for, to my immature mind, it seemed that a woman who had never had a beau was disgraced forever.

"'Tisn't so," I cried. "She's had beaux, lots of 'em. And she's got valentines that they gave her. I saw 'em just the other day."

"Oh, pshaw, child," one of them remarked, regaining her self-possession, "any one can get valentines." And then, as I flounted angrily out of the room, they exclaimed in a chorus: "Oh, dear! Who'd have thought that little snip was in here? She'll go home and tell." But I did not tell, for I knew how sensitive Aunt Martha was, and I would not wound her by repeating the foolish words.

That happened a long time ago, and after I had looked at her second valentine I resurrected the old one from beneath the other treasures and compared the two.

They were something alike in design, but the verse on the first one was hopeful and gay and the "John" accompanying it was written in a bold, manly hand that contrasted strangely with the trembling signature of the second. But, then, one was written in 1840 and the other in 1891, and fifty-one years produce wonderful changes.

Then I fell to wondering about Aunt Martha and "John." Who was he? What had separated them? Where had he been all those years? Why had he never written? Had her whole life been one great waiting and longing for the token that had come at last?

I dropped a tear on the two valentines, and slipping into the parlor I placed them in the casket beside her, and so her love secrets were buried with her.

Valentine of Common Sense.

Your eyes are not stars, they're too near to me, quite,
And surely not fixed with their distance the same;
Besides, as to twinkling and winking at night,
The very idea would fill you with shame.

Your hair is not gold, nor a peach is your cheek,
For the former is finer and lighter than silk,
Of the hue of the nut—nor would breezes dare seek
To encarmine with blushes a face white as milk.

Your teeth are not pearls; they're more useful by far,
And are good for a square meal three times every day.
Your throat is no lily, whose frailness would mar
The volume of voice that comes gushing that way.

Your form's not like Venus; I'm thankful 'tis not,
For your arms are complete, and your virtues as well.
Perfection of contour may well be forgot
In remembering the graces within you that dwell.

In short, my dear sweetheart, no similes fit
The charms that have set my poor heart in a whirl;
And even St. Val., at whose feet I now sit,
Teaches me that you're simply a most charming GIRL!

RUIN IN ITS WAKE.

ATLANTIC COAST SWEPT BY WIND AND RAIN.

Raging Elements Nearly Wipe Out Many Villages—Eleven Bridge Repairers Die Near Bristol, Conn.—Peril in the Bursting of a Dam.

Fire Adds to Horrors.

Cyclonic winds and drenching rain swept the entire North Atlantic coast Thursday. Ruin and death were left in the wake of the storm. Frequently a velocity of seventy-five miles an hour was reached by the wind. Shipping suffered severely, though the warnings to sailing masters, given in ample time, kept nearly all the vessels in port. To the horrors of cyclone and flood that of fire was added at the village of Bound Brook, N. J., which was almost wiped out. It is said that fully forty houses were destroyed by fire. Many of them, as they blazed, were swept from their foundations into the rushing waters of the flood, communicating the conflagration to others, and in this way the fire spread more rapidly than it otherwise would.

The dam at Pocahontas Lake, N. J., broke and all the lower part of the city was inundated. All day the melting snow swelled the streams and poured into the lake, which is a mile and a half long by three-fourths of a mile wide. It was covered by eight inches of ice, and the whole was held in check by the frailest and flimsiest of wooden dams. The water rose to the top. Meanwhile the water rushing through the flume and from all the sewers had filled the Whippany river, which flows through Morristown, to the brim, and the water ran over. Crowds of people flocked down to view the spreading waters. Suddenly with a great crash a section of the dam eighteen feet wide went down and a wall of water six feet high swept into the valley, quickly followed by thousands of tons of ice. In ten minutes the water rose ten feet in the streams. The embankment of the Delaware and Lackawanna Railroad runs through the town. The Whippany river flows under this embankment through a sixteen-foot culvert. The immense volume of water rushed against the embankment and, not being able to escape, backed up through the town, rising in the houses and flooding all the first floors. People fled in terror to the second stories. Many heroic rescues were made.

Barns were carried away and a large number of horses and cows were drowned. A large part of the Whippany Railroad was washed away. Thousands of tons of ice in large cakes were carried down the stream, and these did most of the damage to buildings, carrying them away.

Nearly the whole State of New Jersey is under water. From all sections came reports of impeded traffic, damaged houses and barns and washed out railways. Along the Delaware river the damage was extensive, the water rising within a few hours to the point marked as dangerous. Three culverts and a half mile of track were washed away at Mahunkachunk, where the Pennsylvania and Lackawanna Railroads meet. The Lehigh and Hudson River Railroad was washed out and all passenger and freight traffic stopped. The railroads' losses will be many thousands of dollars.

Death in Icy Waters.

Eleven of a gang of forty bridge repairers, working on the railroad span over the Pequobuck river, a mile east of Bristol, Conn., met a terrible death by drowning at 9 o'clock Thursday night, when the structure collapsed because of the flood.

The old New Haven bridge was to have been replaced by a stone structure. Trains have had orders to run slow over it since work was commenced, and in the afternoon it sagged dangerously, when the 4 o'clock train passed over it. A work train with forty bridge repairers was sent to repair it, and while engaged in this work the structure collapsed, precipitating the workmen into the icy water below. The unfortunate men in the water attempted to seize sticks and portions of the abutments which had broken loose, but they were carried down stream and were quickly lost to sight in the darkness. Eleven were drowned.

W. H. ENGLISH DEAD.

Indiana Politician and Statesman Passes Away at Indianapolis.

Wm. H. English, Indiana politician and statesman and former candidate for Vice President on the Democratic ticket with Gen. Hancock, is dead. Mr. English had been ill for two weeks, at his home in Indianapolis, and all hope of his recovery was given up two days before death, when his heart began to trouble him. From that time he sank rapidly until the end.

Mr. English was born in Lexington, Scott County, Ind., Aug. 27, 1822. His father, Elisha G. English, was a pioneer of the Hoosier State, and, like his son, was also honored with public trusts for almost half a century. When the Indiana Legislature met in 1843-4 Mr. English was elected chief clerk of the House of Representatives, and in that way he came to make Indianapolis his home. He was active in the convention of 1850, which met to frame a State Constitution, and in the following Legislature, under the new Constitution, Mr. English was elected Speaker of the lower house. He afterward secured a clerkship in the United States Senate, a position which he gave up to take a clerkship in the Treasury Department, offered by President Polk.

He was an ardent Democrat, even that long ago, and the people of his district sent him to represent them in Congress. He served nine years. He was the author of a compromise measure in relation to the admission of Kansas as a State. The measure became a law known as "the English bill," and it was the theme of many a controversy in that day of heated political contests.

At Cincinnati in 1880 he was nominated for Vice President on the Democratic ticket. When victory was admitted to the Republican nominees, James A. Garfield and Chester A. Arthur, Mr. English philosophically accepted defeat. In spite of their political variances of opinion, Mr. English and ex-President Harrison were always warm friends.

New Use of Aluminum.

Although aluminum has disappointed some of the brilliant expectations aroused by the discovery of cheaper methods of producing the metal, yet many new and important uses are being found for it. One of the most recent is the employment of this exceedingly light metal for the powder chamber of cartridges, thus enabling a soldier to carry 25 per cent. more ammunition without increase of weight. Another comparatively new use for aluminum is in making oil-cups for the crank pins of high-speed locomotives. Formerly these oil-cups, made of copper, were frequently broken by the tremendous centrifugal force developed as they were whirled around. The aluminum cups weigh two-thirds less than those of copper, and consequently, having less momentum, can stand the strain. Baggage checks, shoe pegs, cooking utensils and other articles in which lightness is desirable, are now made in large numbers of aluminum. Since aluminum gives off no sparks when struck, its employment for the metal work in powder mills has proved source of greater safety.

THE TURN OF LIFE.

WOMAN'S CRITICAL PERIOD

Contemplated with Less Fear than of Old.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

There is no period in woman's earthly career which she approaches with so much anxiety as the "change of life." Yet during the past twenty years women have learned much from a woman.

It is safe to say that women who prepare themselves for the eventful period pass through it much easier than in the past.

There is but one course to pursue. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be used in time to subdue the nervous complications, and prepare the system for the change.

It is well for those approaching the time to write Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., and get her free advice.

Such testimony as the following should be convincing:—

"Your Vegetable Compound has been a God-send to me: it saved my life when all else failed. I would have been in my grave ten years ago but for it. My womb had fallen and rested on the bladder. The doctor could not relieve me; my mind was deranged. Your Compound cured me. It helped me through the change of life all right: am now in good health. It has also cured my husband of kidney trouble: made him like a new man. Please state my words in the strongest terms. I am glad to send you my picture. I travelled twelve miles to have it taken for you. MRS. W. L. DAY, Bettsville, O.

The Greatest Medical Discovery of the Age.

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, OF ROXBURY, MASS.,

Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston. Send postal card for book.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the right quantity is taken.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it. Read the label.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Sold by all Druggists.

NOTES ON EDUCATION.

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO PUPIL AND TEACHER.

Essential Requisites of a Good Teacher—Music Usually Poorly Taught—Cigarettes in Schools—Propitiate Desk Work—Unsuitable Desks.

What a Teacher Needs.

I. Character.—No one should assume to teach who does not possess genuine goodness. The aspirations of the teacher must be noble, his purposes pure, his daily life a model. So much depends on what the teacher is, that what she does is of secondary importance. The spirit of the teacher pervades the school. Character in action—attending to the multifarious duties of the school room, is a very powerful educational force. The teacher must be the man or woman. They must be synonymous. It is not enough to assume goodness. The article must be there. It must inhere in the nature of the teacher. The human soul exerts its greatest influence through character. This, then, is the first great need of the teacher.

II. Scholarship.—While we emphasize character, yet this alone is not sufficient for the teacher's office. One may be thoroughly good and upright, and yet be a very stupid individual. Goodness should be coupled with intelligence. The soul must energize as intellect. Scholarship lies at the foundation of one's success as a leader in the school-room. One cannot teach what she does not know.

Her knowledge should be clear, positive, and fresh. Through scholarship more than through any other channel the teacher secures the confidence of her pupils and wins their support in the execution of her plans. It pays to make daily preparation. Fresh knowledge serves a two-fold purpose in class instruction; it arouses interest and stimulates mental vigor. Some one has aptly said, "Thorough preparation is the foundation of all genius." My teacher friend, if your school work does not go to suit you, and you have been laying the blame upon your pupils, it might be that your trouble would disappear if you should improve your scholarship. A strong teacher may become stronger—a good one may become better. An investment in knowledge pays big dividends in satisfaction when applied to the matter of leadership in a school. Scholarship is also an important element in the government of the school. It puts the teacher in a position to do her best. It gives freedom. It multiplies eyes and ears. It doubles the value of an hour. It shortens the distance between a difficulty and its solution. The teacher needs scholarship.

III. Animation.—Nothing is so dispiriting as a slow, sluggish, inert teacher. Put such an individual in charge of a room full of bright, active boys and girls, and the result can easily be guessed. Human nature can stand a great deal, but childhood should not be deprived of the inspiration that comes from an active mind. The keen eye, the quick movement, the apt word, the ready sympathy, reveal the spirit of the teacher. Fussiness is not animation. It is not even a poor substitute. Animation is intellect in action. It is self asserting its best being. It is enthusiasm without egotism. "The teacher needs animation."

IV. Cheerfulness.—Life after all is what we make it. Long faces, sour dispositions and bad tempers can usually be traced back to selfishness. If we should spend half the time in trying to make other people happy that we now spend in fault-finding and complaining, we would no doubt double our own enjoyment. Good cheer in the schoolroom is wholesome. The teacher should not forget to smile. She should modulate that careworn countenance, look up into the heaven's blue and thank God that she has been called to be a teacher. Who can compute the value of the cheerful, sunny nature that presides at the teacher's desk day after day? We cannot afford to be gloomy. It costs too much. It results in loss of influence. It drives our pupils from us. On the other hand, cheerfulness is an inspiration.

"Laugh, and the world laughs with you."

Smile, and you get a return message of the same kind. Our pupils reflect those things that are most prominent in our own daily lives. "We need cheerfulness."

V. Ready Speech.—Words are powerful things. The right word, at the right time and in the right place, with a soul behind it, has a wonderful potency for good. A teacher may talk too much. She should guard against this. But when talk is necessary the tones of the voice should be pure, the articulation should be distinct, the modulation should indicate interest and feeling, and there should be the proper animation. Too few teachers appreciate the good that flows from a cultivated voice. The expression of thought either orally or in written form, with clearness and precision, is one element of the good teacher. Select words with nice discrimination. The sharp, keen statement—the thought that is barbed—is the one that sticks. Many of the running remarks of teachers in the school room are valueless because they are thoughtless. "We need readiness in thoughtful speech." We also need to remember that "silence is golden."

VI. Heart Power.—The love element must be strong in the teacher. Her affections must set strongly toward those whom she would benefit. The power of making friends is heart power. You cannot do your best work for a pupil until you have his confidence and good will—until you have gained his friendship. Time spent in forming friendships is time put to good use. Sympathy springs from the affections. Through this channel the teacher enters the strongholds of the shut-in lives of her pupils. By degrees they yield themselves to be molded and guided by her superior skill, through the love manifested in kindly acts. The element of love is a big factor in the primary teacher's success.

VII. There are various other needs that might be emphasized, such as patience, self-forgetfulness, gentleness, daily preparation, freedom from worry; and the list might be extended indefinitely, but to treat each separately would prolong this paper beyond its proper length. I will only add that the growing teacher must recognize her needs and reach out after that which will supply.—Iowa Schools.

Music in the School.

To be able to govern a school, a teacher must first be able to govern himself, and then to succeed in teaching he must first know what to teach and then how to teach it.

Perhaps of the many branches of learning that are taught in our schools there is none more poorly taught than vocal music. It is not on account of the parents, however, as nearly all parents like to have their children sing, and there is nothing that places a teacher higher in the estimation of both parents and pupils than devoting a few well spent minutes each day in singing.

After the school has learned to sing well they may be taught to march to appropriate songs, and thus the two hand in hand form one of the most useful and developing exercises taught in a school.

Religious instruction is not tolerated in our schools; therefore you must reach the finer sensibilities of man in some other way. This way is singing. By it you may enable men to elevate their thoughts to higher and better planes in life.

Men in the earlier ages were first reclaimed from ferocity and brutality by the beautiful melodies which aroused the feelings of love for their fellow beings.

In these times of labor troubles and the diversity of interests of different parts of the country, it becomes a matter of importance to unite these conflicting elements.

The boy of to-day becomes the citizen of to-morrow; therefore inculcate these principles in his mind by means of patriotic songs, that teach him to be loyal to his God, and to his country.

Shakspeare says:

"The man that hath no music in himself
Is fit for treasons, stratagems and spoils,"

And Carlyle says:

"The meaning of the song goes deep," which means that it purifies the heart, refines and ennobles the feelings.

There is no better cultivation for the human voice than singing. It teaches the children to become independent in the use of voice, and thus lays the foundation for good readers. The rudiments and principles of music need to be firmly fixed in the mind. Much of this the children learn by imitation, such as beating time. They can readily see that A, B, C, are called pitch names; that 1, 2, 3, are called numeral names; and do, ra, mi, are called syllable names. This can be shown quite nicely by the teacher's drawing the musical staff upon the blackboard, locating the letters and other signatures. Of course, where charts are available both labor and time may be economized. Careful attention needs to be paid to time and expression in music. They go together, and music becomes eloquent only when the executant sees farther than the notes and interprets the idea, just as the gifted orator goes back of mere words and gives us thought.

Every school room has its dull days, when the pupils become dull and restless. Let us then lay aside the books and sing, and see how how soon it will arouse the benumbed faculties of both teacher and scholars, and bring back the heavenly sunshine.

"There's music in the sighing of a reed;
There's music in the gushing of a rill;
There's music in all things, if men had ears;
Their earth is but an echo of the spheres."

—Educational News.

Self-Reliance.

Insist on yourself; never imitate. Your own gift you can present every moment with the cumulative force of a whole life's cultivation; but of the adopted talent of another you have only an extemporaneous, half-possession. That which each can do best, none but his Maker can teach him. No man yet knows what it is, nor can, till the person has exhibited it.

Where is the master who could have taught Shakspeare? Where is the master who could have instructed Franklin, or Washington, or Bacon, or Newton? Every great man is unique. The Scipionism of Scipio is precisely that part he could not borrow. If anybody will tell whom the great man imitates in the original crisis, when he performs a great act, I will tell him who else than himself can teach him. Shakspeare will never be made by the study of Shakspeare. Do that which is assigned thee, and thou canst not hope too much.

There is at this moment, there is for me an utterance bare and grand as the colossal chisel of Phidias, or trowel of Egyptians, or the pen of Moses, or Dante, but different from all these. Not possibly will the soul all rich, all eloquent, with thousand cloven tongue, deign to repeat itself; but if I can hear what these patriarchs say, surely I can reply to them in the same pitch of voice, for the ear and the tongue are two organs of one nature. Dwell up there in the simple and noble regions of thy life, obey thy heart, and thou shalt reproduce the Foreworld again.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Profitable Seat Work.

Each day the demand for educational seat work, that which supplements the work in hand, is becoming greater. I think it is agreed that each recitation should be followed by some occupation which is a direct outgrowth of that lesson, an opportunity to give expression to the thought gained in the class. The child, like the adult, needs to objectify this thought, the different occupations given should be a means for his so doing. The teacher finds before her each morning from fifty to sixty bright, restless little ones, living examples of perpetual motion, each one anxiously waiting for something to do. She may feel that anything, yes anything, to get them at work, will do. When we consider the question in this light, the inferior useless and detrimental seat work done in so many schools is easily accounted for. But isn't it a wrong done the children? and is work without a definite purpose, at any time, excusable?—Exchange.

Danger in Desks.

The practice of placing a roomful of pupils at desks of the same size has conduced to near-sightedness to an alarming extent, and to spinal disorders as well. This is the discovery of physical training in the public schools of Boston.

A triangular blue union, having a single star and five stripes, three of red and two of white, is the flag of the republic

The Consequences of Overwork and Exposure.

From the News, Wanatah, Ind.

At Wanatah, La Porte County, Ind., lives Samuel Atwater, who for many years lived a life of such suffering as seemed well nigh impossible for man to bear.

To a reporter who called upon him Mr. Atwater willingly told the story of his deliverance, which is here given in his own language.

"For many years I have been a sufferer from the most excruciating pains in the back of my head and neck, and also in the small of my back. These pains were caused by overwork and exposure, and were so intense at times as to be almost unbearable. I would toss upon my bed at night suffering untold agony. I tried every remedy which I or my friends thought would give even temporary relief, but all to no purpose. I was able to attend to my work at times, but suffered greatly while doing so. Last spring I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and now after six months' trial can say that they have done more for me than all the medicine I have ever taken. The pain is all gone and I feel like a new man. I have worked at the hardest kind of farm work all summer and have gained in weight and feel better than I have before for many years.

I have also been troubled with scrofulous sores, but through the wonderful cleansing properties of the Pink Pills I have been partially freed from this ailment also.

As a blood purifier and nerve builder they cannot be equaled. I feel it a duty to recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to everyone suffering from any of the various forms of disease for which they are prepared, for they have certainly done wonders for me."

(Signed) SAMUEL ATWATER.

Sworn and subscribed to before me this 30th day of September, 1895.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose bulk) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Gen. Gomez.

Gen. Gomez, the leader of the Cuban insurgents, is a study in repose and action. He is slender in build, not over 140 pounds in weight, about five feet seven in height, and straight as an arrow, although he is 60 years old. His face is tanned, his hair and mustache are iron gray, his cheek bones are prominent and his chin is firm. His cool, calculating eyes seem at first to absolutely measure you, and then the face breaks into a reassuring smile. His knee is stiff from a wound received in the last war, but in the saddle he is simply a part of the horse, or, rather, the horse is a part of him, for he never seems to guide it.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Specimen of Practical Christianity

Rescue hall is the name of a charitable institution in Omaha which deserves the commendation and assistance of the citizens of that city to a marked degree. The old People's theater has been converted into a home for unfortunate men, women, and children and its management is on the right basis. People are furnished with food and lodging, allowed to pay a small sum for it if they desire, and then work is found for them. If unable to work medical assistance is given until they are capable of working, when they are expected to repay the institution as soon as circumstances permit. Gospel services are held each evening. When the unfortunates are converted under the ministrations of the leaders and desire to lead a different life they are given work and in every way possible aided to leave the old life behind. This is practical Christianity.—Rapid City (S. D.) Journal.

Responsibility of Guides.

A Tyrolese mountain guide was recently tried at Batzen for manslaughter in taking a man who was physically unfit for the climb over a dangerous mountain pass, where he was killed. RIPANS TABULES

Because he had palpitation of the heart, Mr. A. J. Allen determined to quit smoking. He thought the tobacco habit was the cause of his trouble, but when he ceased smoking the pulsations of the heart were more violent than ever. Mr. Allen is a registered chemist of Lynn, Mass., and at second thought he concluded that, if tobacco wasn't the cause, it must be acute dyspepsia. His knowledge of chemistry naturally prompted him to take Ripans Tabules, well knowing their efficacy in disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels. Quick relief followed, and now there is no more distress in the region of his heart. But the remarkable part of Mr. Allen's experience follows: He decided to forego smoking anyhow, and discovered that Ripans Tabules not only satisfied the longing for tobacco, which all smokers are familiar with, but at first he actually looked forward with pleasure to the three periods each day when he took the Tabules. Mr. Allen no longer smokes, and has no desire to, nor does he take the Tabules. He is a well man, and does not need medicine of any kind. Mr. Allen believes Ripans Tabules will prove a powerful aid to any man who desires to abandon the tobacco habit.

Ripans Tabules are sold by druggists, or by mail if the price (50 cents a box) is sent to The Ripans Chemical Company, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York. Sample vial, 10 cents.

Grant and Lincoln.

For upwards of two years the publishers of McClure's Magazine have been quietly gathering material and pictures for a new life of General Grant. They believe that they have made a larger collection of portraits of Grant (many of them rare) and other pictures relating to his life than has ever been made before. The biography will bring out the real Grant in the same vivid, thorough, and interesting manner as Lincoln is presented in the "Life" now running in McClure's. They have been fortunate in securing the co-operation of Col. F. D. Grant, who has most of his father's papers. McClure's Life of Lincoln, which has been running for a few months, will soon be published in book form with a good deal of new matter. It will contain many articles never before published, fac-similes of documents that are new to the public, and sixty or seventy portraits of Lincoln, taken from photos and daguerreotypes at different ages. The most of these have never been published before, some of these were not even in the new collection recently printed in McClure's Magazine. The publishers are doing a grand work in putting out such valuable histories of these two eminent men.

Sudden Death

Monday's Daily.

Death seems to be reaping a harvest now. While the family and friends of Mrs. Long, were laying her to rest at Waterloo yesterday, Mrs. Teft, Judge McClellan's sister was suddenly taken worse, and by the time he had reached home, and could call on her she was too low to speak, and probably did not recognize him She sank away and died soon after, at about 5:30 p. m. Friday she was present at the bedside of Mrs. Long, at Judge McClellan's, though suffering some from a cold. Saturday morning she was taken worse, and the grip set in. Mrs. Swarts was sent for and prescribed for her, but it was not thought she was in danger, till Sunday afternoon, when the disease seems to have attacked her heart. We believe she had had some heart trouble before, and it was this turn that proved fatal The funeral will be held on Wednesday and interment will be in Woodlawn.

100 YEARS OLD

Talma Rummel, who resides in Troy township, tells us that old Mrs. Aldrich who is a member of his family and we believe a relative, will complete her 100 years, March 17. Just think of it! A century old! In means she was born in 1796 on that date, during the second term of Washington's administration, whose term closed March, 4th, 1797. So she has lived in the term of every president the United States has had. Think of the wonderful changes she has seen since the date of her childhood, since the age at which she could notice, remember and understand. It would take more time and space than we have, to even name the great changes that have taken place—mostly improvements—since March, 17, 1796. No century in the world's history approaches it in this regard.

THE DEAD SEA

No other part of our earth, uncovered by water, sinks 300 feet below the level of the ocean. But here we have a rift more than one hundred and sixty miles long, and from two to fifteen broad, which falls from the sea-level to as deep as 1,292 feet below it at the coast of the Dead Sea, while the bottom of the latter 1,300 feet deeper still

ONE DOSE GAVE RELIEF.

Simon S Hartman, of Tunnelton, West Va, has been subject to attacks of colic about once a year, and would have to call a doctor and then suffer for about twelve hours as much as some do when they die. He was taken recently just the same as at other times, and concluded to try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says: "I took one dose of it and it gave me relief in five minutes. That is more than any thing else has ever done for me. For sale by F. E. Davenport. 9.

Winter Is Here

Bringing With It Catarrhal Diseases Of All Kinds.

Winter is half over. People are continuing to catch colds, and not a house but hears the winter cough. People are trying to get something to cure these troubles, which are almost inevitable at this time of the year. It can safely be said that nine-tenths of the people in the United States have a cold some time during the winter. There is one remedy which will prevent colds and coughs and cure them with certainty when they are contracted. This remedy is Pe-ru-na. Taken with regularity during the winter months, it will entirely prevent coughs, colds, la grippe, consumption, bronchitis or pneumonia. It will also cure without failure, catarrh and recent cases of consumption, and often in advanced stages.

Everybody should have the 64 page book on catarrh and winter diseases which is being sent free by The Pe ru na Drug Manufacturing Company of Columbus, Ohio.

Rioting

News from Whiting, Indiana near Chicago, tells of a bloody fight there yesterday between Polanders and Hungarians, in which two were killed outright and others will die. It began in a saloon, and was the result of a long standing trouble between the two races of foreigners named. The rioters were employes of the Standard Oil Company which has extensive refineries there. The Rifles remember with no feeling of good will, the town of Whiting and its rough foreigners, for it was there they had to spend a part of the time watching the great riots of 1894.

A Quickly Prepared Dessert

Although the Bellamy system of housekeeping has not yet been fully developed, the women of the day are to be congratulated upon the vast strides that are being made toward convenience and economy in housekeeping, and especially as regards the home bill of fare.

In this connection, the Merrell Soule company, of Syracuse, has come conspicuously to the front with their None Such Mince Meat, a material for dessert the prominent features of which are its wholesomeness, richness of flavor, and the remarkable short time in which it can be prepared for the table.

The ingredients of this Mince Meat are prepared by exact rule, and with the greatest care. In no kitchen in the land is there more scrupulous cleanliness. The choicest apples and the selected meat are chopped by steam power; the currants are washed and re-washed by the same method. The raisins are seeded, the sugar ground, the spices mixed, and every operation performed with the skill that would meet the approval of the most particular housewife. The proprietors recognize that the immense sales of their product rest entirely on its being maintained at the highest possible standard, and it is their experience that those who try it once are unwilling to go back to the old laborious way of making mince pies, but accept the new order of things as thankfully as they do the sewing machine or the electric light.

The Merrell-Soule Company have issued a charming booklet entitled "Mrs. Popkin's Thanksgiving," written by one of our most popular humorous writers, which they are sending free to all who send name and address.

Indiana Coat Of Arms.

An exchange says: Where a state or a city for which a war ship is named already possesses a coat-of-arms, it is customary for the war ship to make use of that. But as the state of Indiana has no coat of arms, one had to be secured for the battle ship Indiana, and after considerable labor a satisfactory design has been found. The design consists of an heraldic shield, divided into two fields, the upper azure the lower vert. In the upper field is an heraldic sun in glory of gold; this being suggested by the setting sun of the seal. In the lower field the familiar buffalo is fleeing away to the left, while the woodman is felling the forest tree at the right. Above the shield rises an arm in burnished mail, with a scroll grasped in the hand. Underneath the shield is a graceful scroll of azure, edged with gold on which in letters of gold is the word "Indiana." The whole effect is pleasing and highly artistic. Captain Evans and other officers of the great war ship are said to be greatly pleased with the design. It will be used on the letter paper of the ship, and in all other connections where a coat of arms is appropriate.

The Art Amateur.

The Art Amateur for February has for one of its color plates a charming American landscape, "On the Mohawk: Noon," by Edward Gay, A. N. A. The other color plate is "Sprays of Violets," by Patty Thum. While simple in execution both are very attractive, and the student will find the suggestions given in the magazine for copying them in oil, water colors, and pastel, thoroughly practical Throat and Lung Diseases.

The little daughter of Mr. Fred Webber, Holland, Mass, had a very bad cold and cough which he had not been able to cure with any thing. I gave him a 25 cent bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, says W. P. Holden, merchant and postmaster at West Brimfield, and the next time I saw him he said it worked like a charm. This remedy is intended especially for acute throat and lung diseases such as colds, croup and whooping cough, and it is famous for its cures. There is no danger in giving it to children for it contains nothing injurious. For sale by F E Davenport. 9.

Colgrove-Jones Nupitals.

A Very Pretty Wedding Took Place on the Avenue last night.

The elegant home of E S. Jones, who lives on the Avenue, was the scene of a very happy wedding last night. The occasion was the joining in the holy bonds of matrimony of his daughter, Stella to Charles Edwin Colgrove of Garrett. Long before the appointed hour many guests had assembled to witness the ceremony. At nine o'clock, marching to the organ music by Miss Clara Stafford, the bridal couple appeared, Rev. G. B. Work of the M E church at Garrett, took his stand in front of a lovely bank of flowers and the bride and groom, underneath a large evergreen bell, which hung from the ceiling. At either side of the couple were the bridesmaid and groomsman, Miss Anna McLaughlin and Wilber Colgrove, brother of the groom, both of Garrett. At the right of the groomsman were Mr. E. S, Jones and daughter Miss Nettie, father and sister of the bride, and at the left of the bridesmaid were Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Colgrove of Garrett, parents of the groom. Rev. Work in a very brief but impressive ceremony then pronounced them man and wife, and then followed the congratulations. Mrs. Colgrove, mother of the groom, in a very pretty speech of congratulations, asked the happy couple to be faithful to the vows they had just taken, and to rely on the promises of God, and here she presented them with a lovely bible. Then the friends and neighbors who were present extended congratulations. Mr. and Mrs. Colgrove and their friends werethen invited to the dining room where an elaborate supper was served in six courses. This was of the best that money would buy. And the style in which it was served was a surprise to all the guests. All say they have never seen anything to equal it.

The costumes were lovely. The bride wore a beautiful white gown of brocaded china silk and carried a bouquet of white bridal roses. The groom wore the regulation black dress suit. The bridesmaid, Miss Anna McLaughlin wore lansdowne brocaded silk of an old rose color, and Miss Nettie Jones, sister of the bride also wore white silk.

Mrs. Colgrove is a model young lady who has a wide circle of friends in both Auburn and Garrett. We have reason to believe that he will make an affectionate wife. Mr. Colgrove is comparatively a stranger in this city, but is an excellent young man of the city of Garret, and holds a responsible position with the B. & O. railroad company as machinist We believe he is one of their best workmen. Mr. and Mrs. Colgrove left at 2:55 this morning for Chicago where they will spend a week with a sister of the bride, Miss Dora. After which they will return to Garrett and live until fall with the groom's parents. They have the best wishes of the COURIER for their future happiness. They were the recipients of a large number of valuable presents, most of which were left at Garrett. Those present, whom the reporter noticed were:

Garrett:—Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Colgrove Wilber Colgrove, Roll Hollopeter, Misses Anna McLaughlin, Anna West, Mary Paul, Edith and Queen Frederick, Clara and Julia Wagoner, Grace Cribbe and Rilla Hollopeter. Fort Wayne:—Miss Nellie Brockaway, cousin of the groom. Auburn:—Mr. and Mrs J. E Ensley, Mr. and Mrs Jos. Stafford, Dr Casebeer, E. T. Cochran, Teet Ashleman, and Misses Clara and Flora Stafford.

The COURIER acknowledges the receipt of a fine box of wedding cake, fruit, etc, which we can testify to as being excellent.

Searching for Gold.

Goshen News: A singular hallucination, according to reports, possesses Cornelius Punches, a resident of Baugo township, near Jimtown. He has had a vision which disclosed gold buried in the earth near his house, and for three or four weeks he has been excavating the soil to release the yellow metal which this vision, a headless gnome, tells him is hidden beneath.

So firm is his belief in the recital of this gnome that he has made an excavation sufficiently large to take in an ordinary dwelling and he is persuaded that beneath two stones is hidden the yellow lump which when he has found and lifted will be disclosed to his view.

Out Of Politics

(Warsaw Times.)

When a man who has held office, or has been an aspirant for one nearly all of his natural life, declares he is "out of politics," we sometimes wonder if he knows how silly such an expression sounds. Such a man has never been in politics. He is nothing else but a selfish grasper after an office, plain and simple ready to do anything to secure one. It is the plain, straightforward voter that that stands by his party, votes the ticket of his choice and never thinks of any reward for doing his duty who is "in politics," and it is such straightforward, honest voters who give to the politics of the country all the respectability there is in it. The man who uses the expression: "I am out of politics," causes a smile to pass over the face of his listeners every time—the joke is so broad!

Suit on Bond.

The trouble about a settlement of the trustee's accounts in Jackson township, has come into court. Deputy Clerk Blanche Shilling informs us that a suit has been filed in court, to come up at next term, to recover from ex-trustee Walters and his bondsmen, a sum of money that was not admitted in the settlement with his successor, Mr. Dancer The bondsmen are E. E. Walter and S. J. Tarney and the sum in dispute is claimed to be in the neighborhood of $2000 It promises to be quite a hard fight, especially if the trustee's accounts should prove to be in any way tangled up, as sometimes happens. A trustee cannot be too careful in keeping accounts straight and the various funds by themselves. But in most cases, the trouble has not arisen so much from carelessness in keeping accounts as in carelessness in a business way. Needless purchases are sometimes made of things the township does not need. At other times articles are bought that are needed but two high a price is paid All this should be watched. A trustee should buy as he would for himself, only the things that are needed and then at a reasonable price. There has been a good deal of carelessness in this matter in several places, and we have looked for trouble of this sort to get into court for some years. We learn, now, that another suit of a similar character will come up from Smithfield, where a similar complaint is made against ex trustee Blake. Whether Mr. Blake or Mr Walter shall have to pay damages for mistakes, there will some good come if these suits, for it will show future officers that their work must be carefully done. We do not believe either of the men named would do what is dishonest. But an act of carelessness that costs the taxpayers a useless expense, is a thing to be scrupulously avoided.

CUBAN LETTER

Dr. Hines Has His Eyes Open, And Tells The Courier Readers Some Very Interesting Things.

The city contains many very beautiful park and plazas; some of them are covered with marble all containing fountains [illegible], and all contain beautiful fish. Some of the parks contain beautiful flowers which are perpetual bloomers Some of the parks are used by tradesmen to display their goods The streets are all paved with stone Now the hotels in Havanna, are very fine; prices ranging from $2 to $5 per day. All the best hotels have an interpreter who can murder the English language to perfection. I will say for the benefit of any American, who contemplates taking a trip to Cuba if he can procure an interpreter in Tampa to accompany him, I would advise him to do so because interpreters in Cuba are scarce and when you find one he imagines he has struck a gold mine. The cooking at the hotels is superb and in many ways better than our style. The bread is baked in loaves 18 inches long and only 3 or 4 inches thick which makes it nearly all crust and avoids the doughy substance which is often undigested. They eat no pie or cake of any kind. Wine is served with every meal and they think, no wine no dinner. They drink a cup of coffee eat an orange and eat a roll after rising in the morning breakfast 10 a. m. to 12 m., dinner 5 to 8 p. m. The beds are all covered with very beautiful lace curtains to protect you from the mosquitoes and to decorate also. Coffee houses are abundant, and wines, soda and all kind of drinks are served in them. Ladies may be seen any time in them sitting at the table chatting and drinking wine. I remarked to an interpreter that it was strange no one was seen drunk when they drank so much wine. He said if I saw any one drunk I could speak to him for he would answer me in English. Americans was scarce over there so I did not see any one drunk Hack fares are comparatively cheap; 20c carries you to any part of the city and I forgot to say there was 300 000 people in Havanna. I think these people are collected from all parts of the world for every nationality can be found there. I think I met fewer Americans than any other which looks to me a little strange when America is nearest. There are Chinamen in abundance. About one-third of the population of Cuba is negroes. The omnibuses all have 8 horses also the street cars are drawn by 3 except a short line that runs from the city to the country which is propelled by steam 8 miles. The trucking, draying and farm wagons are not wagons but carts, the wheels being from 6 to 8 feet high and very heavy. Some have a pole in and are pushed by oxen, others are drawn by donkeys from one to ten hitched in tandem fashion with no bit in their mouths or no lines to them The Spanish never put a bit into a mule's mouth. The oxen are compelled to push their loads because the yoke is laid on their heads just back of their horns and a piece of raw hide fastens around their forehead. Horses are mere ponies and are used on the street cars, omnibus lines and hack lines and are used as beasts of burden principally, sometimes a mule is used. The fruit venders, milk carriers, and anything that can be, is carried on horses backs. Two large baskets, one on either side filled with milk cans or oranges and the owner up between the baskets crying his wares at the top of his voice continually. Flower boys are seen every evening with beautiful bouquets for 25c.

The trees are principally live oak and royal palms in the city. No building is more than four stories high, and principally two. The buildings are absolutely fire proof. The walls are stone, the floor and stairs marble, doors iron and roof tile. The buildings come to the sidewalk, no lawn, but a garden on the roof and a court in the back part where the horses are kept. I must say a word in regard to the money exchanges This may be of interest to the silver question but not in its favor.

A U. S. greenback commands 9 per cent premium for it is equal to gold and gold commands the same. If you request silver for $5 in gold or greenback they will give you $6 20 but in gold only 9 per cent premium. If you price any thing they always have two prices one in gold and the other in silver. I remember asking a man the price of a beautiful parrot that spoke Spanish and a little English and I wanted it very bad but he said $50 gold Then I thought I didn't care much for it anyway.

The bird was very much surprised when it was not brought to America. I must tell you of the canines; when I would call them they would stop for an instance, try to make out what I was saying, then think I was crazy and run away The country in the province of Mantanzas and Pino Del Rio is very mountainous but the mountains are fertile from top to bottom. The roads are very crooked but are in fine condition for driving. The roads are all macadamized. The timber is principally live oak and royal palms. There is underbrush covering the mountains where they are not under cultivation. Some places stone quarries extend into the mountain. The principal products of the country are sugar and tobacco. There is not much sugar at present or will not be for several years because of the destruction of the plantation by insurgents. The insurgents are destroying everything except the tobacco and this is bought by traders in Tampa and Key West where it is manufactured into cigar by Cubans who keep only enough of their wages to pay their board and the balance is sent to General Maximo Gomez to carry on the war, against the Spanish. It is said they furnish $10,000 every week to the Rebels The farm houses are built of stone and the tenant's houses are built of grass and flags. No barns are in the province, and only one farm house every mile or more. The royal palms and live oak are along the road principally. The Rebel army has destroyed many towns entirely. Many people are homeless and sleep along the road at night or any where they can find shelter. The Rebels are divided into three divisions one under General Maximo Gomez who is commander-in-chief, and another, Maceo, who is a Negro. The eastern one is divided and has had several commanders, Gomez is said to be an Englishman who assisted the Spanish in 1868 to subdue the Cubans, and after failing to get a position he turned on Spain for revenge. Maceo, it is said, is fighting for the elevation of his race, and one-half of his army are negroes. The insurgent army varies in number. They are principally mounted, or can be if they choose, as many native horses are running at large on the island. Maceo had about 1,500 men before he invaded the province of Pino Del Rio but after that he recruited until he had about 4 000. The rebels are not lacking men but need arms for they are poorly armed They claim 47,000 men but the Spanish say 20,000 A good plan is to average and give them 30,000 men. The Spanish have 110,000 soldiers and Gen. Weyler is bringing with him 25,000 recruits. Gen. Gomez is said to have only two small field guns which is the only artillery the Cubans have. Gen. Gomez said at the first of the campaign that in order to free Cuba he must first destroy it, and he has followed this plan fully. After the insurgents take a town they do not try to hold it only until the Spanish start for that place. The Spanish soldiers are very young and they only quarter in town, having no tents but take possession of houses in a town, barricade the town and wait for the Cubans to run around. The Cubans very seldom attack a town where the Spanish are located. It was my good fortune to witness one small engagement in which five Spanish were killed and four wounded, and three Insurgents killed and thirteen wounded, the Cubans withdrew after burning 120 houses. The Cubans are destroying any. and everything they can except the tobacco. They go in bands from ten to fifty and scour the country, and keep an eye on the movement of the Spanish troops. The Red Cross society are doing very good work and are having plenty to do since the yellow fever has commenced. They also have leprosy in Cuba and through the kindness of Dr. Burgess I was permitted to visit the Hospital. There was about sixty patients in it at this time, the most miserable looking objects I ever saw. The better class of Spanish are a very nice class of people and the property owners of Cuba are not in favor of the war because of the negroes in the army. They say that following the success of the Insurgents, would come a race war which would be more bloody than the present war.

In getting started home you are compelled to leave your passport with the Spanish officers and have it viseed. Then you are obliged to be inspected by Dr. Burgess, the U. S. Inspector, after that you are searched both personally and baggage. After you arrive at Key West a physician comes on board and you are obliged to be examined again. This is to prevent any yellow fever being brought to the U. S. After the first of June no passengers are allowed to come via Tampa but are compelled to go via New York and be quarantined. The steerage passengers' baggage is all left six miles from Port Tampa to be disinfected at the disinfecting station. Nothing of note occurred on the way from Havana except at Key West, a Military prisoner was brought on board bound for Leavenworth for four years, for stabbing an officer. I will just say a word in regard to the railroads of Cuba. The roads are in a very good condition except where the insurgents have destroyed them. The cars and engines are miserable old traps and when a train leaves for the country it is escorted by cavalry. The switching is done by oxen Some people wonder why the insurgents do not attack Havanna. If they would see how the city is protected by forts and heavy guns they would know at once. Every road is protected by guns for 3 miles out beside 15,000 volunteers who are stationed near the city, and at night guard all the roads. The impression that the Spanish treat their prisoners cruelly is a mistake except those that are placed in the Castle of Morro who die very soon. The principal complaint against Gen. Campos by the Spanish of Cuba was that he was too humane, but enough is expected of Gen. Weyler to make up for all. 150 Cubans came to Key West on the boat I came over on, and many more would like to come because they are afraid of negroes. The police came down and took twelve passengers from the boat.

The commerce in the city is not interfered in any way except the country trade is not brought into the city. Society of Havana is very peculiar but I will not attempt to describe it in this article It is true that Gen. Gomez has been within seven miles of Havana, but as soon as the troops go after him he retreats. Any American visiting Havana should not fail to visit the cemetery because its equal is hard to find. The Cathedral is also a place of interest and the tomb can be seen that is said to contain Columbus' ashes. In Cuba I met perhaps 12 people who could speak English. The idea that Americans are there in abundance is a myth. The New York Herald has a reporter there who is compelled to submit all his reports to the Spanish officers before mailing them.

Morro Castle is situated on a peninsula which extends out into the sea about one-half mile and distant from the city of Havana one-half mile The castle is nearly 500 feet long and 300 feet wide. It contains 30 or 40 mounted guns; with these the bay and also the city of Havana are guarded. A wall nearly 20 feet high surrounds the whole peninsula. In the castle are a great number of cells or dungeons which have little or no ventilation and so dark that one is obliged to carry a lantern when passing through them. The captured insurgents who are placed in these dungeons, if only for a brief period, scarcely ever come out alive, for being continually exposed to the darkness and foulness of these cells, generally die with a fever of some sort.

The Spanish government learned that a fillibustering party was trying to land on the eastern part of the Island and ordered out a Spanish gunboat to capture the same. The gunboat was struck about midship by a merchantman just opposite Morro Castle where the channel is narrowest. The gunboat sank in 58 seconds and 49 of the crew were lost; eaten by sharks, including the captain who had a valuable diamond ring on his hand at the time. Hundreds of fishermen hearing of this, came from the city for the purpose of capturing the shark in which was hidden so valuable a treasure. They succeeded in capturing many, some containing the arms and limbs of the unfortunate men. Not succeeding in capturing the guilty shark which contained the ring, the fishermen sent to New York for a diver, who on making one dive declared the place to be infested by sharks and would not make the second attempt. The gunboat which was said to have on board $11,000 in money lies under 90 feet of water, and without any attempt on the part of the Cubans to recover the lost treasure.

Yours Truly,
L. A. HINES.

Kansas Losing.

The state census of Kansas which the state has just completed on its own account shows that the population of Kansas has decreased 97,000 as compared with the United States census of 1890, only five years before. Taking into account the natural increase of its population, it is evident that at least 170,000 people have moved out of Kansas since 1890, and more are going. This migration is attributed to the long-continued drought and bad crops. Efforts are being made to attract some of the people of the large cities to Kansas, but the movement does not seem to succeed very well. It looks as if Kansas would have to be able to point to several good crops before it can hope to add any considerable number of desirable settlers to its population.

The Passion Play

Joseph Maier who has since 1870, played the leading part, "Christ," in the celebrated "Passion Play" at Oberammergau Germany, has met with an accident that will prevent his taking the part again. The actors are all laborers and he was helping to handle logs, when he had a leg crushed, necessitating an amputation. It is thought his part will now have to be taken Peter Pendl, a young man who played "St. John." in 1890. The play is brought on, once in ten years, a vow to that effect having been made some years ago, as a token of gratitude for relief from a scourge of sickness. So they had the first Passion Play in 1870 but it was interrupted by the drafting of the men into the Prussian army for the war with France. The next year it was taken up again, and the time it should have run was completed. It has been brought on every ten years since and thousands of the people as well as passing travelers and tourists have taken pains to go to the little country place and see it. It became the most famous dramatic performance in the world, especially as the play represented the life and sufferings of the Savior, and was made up and played by common country people. And it was so well played as to astonish all who saw and heard it. Various parties tried to start the same play in other countries but objections were raised to having so sacred a subject shown as a drama that in every case it was stopped, But the pious peasants of Oberammergau have been permitted to carry out their vow without molestation and to the wonder and admiration of all who have witnessed their wonderful performance.

McKinley Ahead

As a candidate for the republican nomination for president at the coming election, McKinley seems to be certainly in the lead. It is generally conceded that out of the full number, 911 delegates, he has now secured 239; Reed, 182; Allison, 139; Morton, 121. There are about a dozen other possible candidates, lead however, and there is notelling what changes may occur before next June.

Truck For Cuba.

Among the many queer things that arise over the Cuban troubles, nothing seems so utterly ridiculous as the burning desire of a western Yankee to sell his garden truck to the Cubans. No one but a born Yankee would think of such a thing, especially at such a season when we are bringing the garden truck we are eating from the extreme south, the parts of the United States nearest to Cuba. It would reverse all the natural order to be sending vegetables from the extreme north of the United States over a thousand miles to the south—several hundred miles south of Florida. But to the case in point. Some Chicago papers got hold of the letters Dr. Hines is publishing in the COURIER, and a truck dealer, with an eye to business happened to see it, as he sat in his hotel studying up where he could extend his business. So he sits down at one once and writes to Dr. Hines at this place, the following business letter, inclosing a stamp for an answer:

GORE'S HOTEL, CHICAGO,
Feb. 11, 1896,

Dear Sir:—While glancing over the papers this a. m. I see you have just returned from Cuba. Will you please give me, a general idea as to the price of vegetables there, such as potatoes, beans, cabbage, turnips, carrots and such stuff. I see that provisions are very high there now. We can load ten cars of potatoes and garden truck and have it at seaboard at Jacksonville in ten days, if the figures are so we can live at it. And how about duty? Is there a duty on such vegetables? Can we get the most out of the insurgents or to ship direct to Havana? Advise me at what part is open to the insurgents, if any. Is there any danger of having our stuff confiscated by landing in Cuba? Awaiting an early reply from you I am

Yours, respectfully

Hendry Again.

Monday's Daily.

There is trouble ahead in the Hendry matters. Will Carr, Frank Beals and Chas. Hammond have for some time been running a store for Hendry, at Edon. But since the Hendry failure claim to own the stock, and no longer give Hendry a share of the proceeds. This morning on going to the store they found new locks on the door, and could not get in. They went to the rear end and broke down the door, and found the Sheriff from Bryon on the inside. He arrested them and still holds Beals and Hammond. Carr went to-day to Angola to secure bonds.

The Art Amateur.

The Art Amateur for February has for one of its color plates a charming American landscape, "On the Mohawk: Noon," by Edward Gay, A. N. A. The other color plate is "Sprays of Violets," by Patty Thum. While simple in execution both are very attractive, and the student will find the suggestions given in the magazine for copying them in oil, water colors, and pastel, thoroughly practical.

Old People.

Old people who require medicine to regulate the bowels and kidneys will find the true remedy in Electric Bitters. This medicine does not stimulate and contains no whiskey nor other intoxicant but acts as a tonic and alterative. It acts mild on the stomach and bowels, adding strength and giving tone to the organs, thereby aiding Nature in the performance of the functions. Electric Bitters is an excellent appetizer and aids digestion. Old People find it just exactly what they need. Price fifty cents per bottle at Robbins & McCord's Drug Store. 5

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

FOUR KILLED

In a Mine Disaster at Republic, Mich.—Several Others Injured.

A special from Republic Mich., says: Eleven men were riding from the bottom of No. 1 shaft of the Republic mine in a skip. In some way unknown the skip overturned, precipitating the men to the bottom of the shaft. James Dridge, B. Pogeleber, Andrew Bailed, and Wm. McGrath were killed, and Andrew Peterson so badly injured that he cannot recover. Erick Martin had a leg broken, and all the others with one exception, were more or less injured. The shaft is an inclined one and very deep so that the men were raised and lowered in the skip, it being too far to climb the ladders. The skip began turning soon after starting from the bottom of the shaft and all the men had been thrown out before a heighth of sixty feet had been attained. All the men killed, excepting McGrath, were married and leave families. Peterson, who cannot live, is also married. All were old hands at the mine.

The Missing Link.

George H. Jackson (colored) was arrested at Cincinnati, by detectives who have been on his trail for supposed connection with the Pearl Bryan tragedy. When taken before the officers Jackson confessed to having driven Scott Jackson, Alonzo Walling and Pearl Bryan across the river to Fort Thomas on the night of the murder. Jackson says the girl was crying all the way and he did not want to go with them, but they compelled him to drive. He says that when he got over the river he jumped from the vehicle and ran away.

He Was Murdered.

The mystery surrounding the case of Robert White, who was found dead near Coalton, Ohio, recently, badly cut about the head and shoulders, has not yet been solved. The officers are satisfied that the man was murdered and laid upon the railroad. It was the evening of payday, and White is known to have had considerable money. He was leaving for home with two men about 11 o'clock, and he was never after seen alive. The men, whose names are Ray and Thacker, disappeared the same night, and have not yet been located.

Masked Men Hold Up a Street Car.

At Evansville, Ind., the other night, a Garvin Park car was held up at the park by two masked men, one of whom entered the car from each end with drawn pistols. They robbed Conductor Charles Sheedy of $7 in cash and seventy car tickets and his watch, and robbed Motorman Adam Ritzel of his watch. The men wore masks, and there is no clue to their identity. The park is half a mile beyond the populous part of the city.

Her Baby Burned.

The 3-months-old baby of Mrs. Anna Freshour, living near Chillicothe, Ohio, was placed in a chair in front of a grate fire. The mother, at work in the next room, heard the child scream, and running in found that it had fallen in the fire. She was alone, and taking the child in her arms ran half a mile through the fields to the nearest neighbors. The child was so badly burned that it will die.

Baby's Terrible Plaything.

The 4-year-old son of Charles Smith of Middlebranch, Ohio, was instantly killed at their home. In the absence of the family he took the shotgun from a corner and went out on the back porch to play with it. Some time later he was found dead by playmates. The gun had been accidentally discharged and a hole torn through the body of the boy.

The Kellers Acquitted.

The jury in the case of Dan Keller and wife, charged with murdering Clara Shanks at Terre Haute, Ind., after being out twenty four hours, returned a verdict of acquittal. Keller and his wife were charged with killing the Shanks girl because she demanded a retraction of Keller's statement that he had been intimate with her.

Nine Cars Smashed.

Failure of section men to properly replace ballasting that had been removed to repair the track, caused another bad smash-up on the K. and M. near Leon, W. Va., at 4:30 the other morning. Nine freight cars were demolished and traffic delayed for several hours. The crew escaped without injury.

A Noted Artist Dead.

Thomas Hewes Hinckley, an artist of wide fame, died at his home in Milton Mass., aged 83 years.

Settled the Dispute.

George Palmer, of Wakarusa, Ind., disagreed with his wife as to whether a gun which was lying on a cupboard was loaded. Mrs. Palmer declared that it was not, and in attempting to take it down, the gun was discharged, and instantly killed Palmer, tearing his head from his body.

Shot His Arm Off.

Lesta Simon, of LaOtto, Ind., while out hunting slipped and fell and in some way the gun was discharged, the load of shot taking effect in the right arm, which had to be amputated. He may die.

The Porte Grants Amnesty.

Constantinople special: The porte has notified the foreign diplomats that the Turkish Government agrees to grant amnesty to the Armenians who are in possession of Zeitoun but demands that those among them who are members of the Armenian revolutionary committee shall be expelled.

Reward for the Head of Pearl Bryan.

Greencastle (Ind.) special: The County Commissioners met and considered the Bryan murder. They will probably offer a reward of $500 for the recovery of the head of the murdered girl. The Grand Jury will investigate the case of Will Wood as an accomplice of the Bryan murderer.

HORRIBLE SUFFERING.

Six Starving Fishermen Drift Helplessly About in the Gulf with Five Dead Companions.

Carabelle (Fla.) special: After days of drifting in the gulf with corpses for companions, six fishermen reached Dog Island. They were so weak they could not walk and the mental condition of four of them was not far from idiocy. In the boat with the men when it drifted ashore were the bodies of five companions who had succumbed to hunger and thirst. The men who reached the island alive are Jose Rodriguez, Sam Williams, Henry Johnson, Jonas Blackburn, Arthur Moore, and Gilbert Holmes. Holmes is the only one able to give an intelligible story of their sufferings. He says the party, consisting of eleven men, left Key West ten days ago on a smack bound for the snapper banks on the west coast. When two days out the smack was caught in the gale of last week which sent her to the bottom, the men escaping without food or clothing in a boat. For eight days they were at the mercy of the waves, daily growing weaker from hunger and thirst. Three days after the wreck Frank Mason died, and soon after Max Thornton, Alfred Stafford, Joe West, and Nathan Adams succumbed. The survivors were too weak to throw the bodies overboard, and they remained in the boat, gastly reminders of the fate that awaited the living.

The negroes who found them say the bodies seemed to be gnawed in places, and they suspect that the survivors in trying to sustain life fed on their own dead companions.

Gen. Weyler Disgusted.

A dispatch to the Madrid Imparcial from Havana gives a report of an interview with Captain General Weyler in which he expresses with great emphasis his disgust at the condition of affairs which he found upon his arrival in Cuba. With the enemy only nine miles from the capitol, the courage of the Spanish troops drooping, the army uselessly split up into small sections and the powerful force of cavalry into minute detachments, things, he said, could not have been much worse. Gen. Weyler declared that while he might meet with momentary difficulty he would nevertheless conquer by constant work and ceaseless activity. It was his intention, he said, to close up the infantry corps with reinforcements from Spain, and to suppress all the existing small detachments.

Niagara Falls Almost Dry.

Niagara Falls special: A remarkable condition exists here. The American falls is practically dry, and the water that is going over it could almost be calculated by the gallon. Instead of the ordinary depth of from three and one-half to four feet, less than five inches of water in the deepest part is going over, while in some parts notably near the Cave of the winds, it is simply tickling over. The explanation for all this is that the water has been diverted to the Canadian falls by reason of an immense dam of ice on the Schlosser reef about two miles up the river. It is possible to walk from the main shore to Goat island, and for that matter, between all the islands without getting more than the soles of the boots wet.

Washed Into the River.

Cleveland special: A water main on Franklin avenue hill burst, and with the the volume of water that poured out, several hundred feet of the hill was washed into the river. A small, one-story frame house, occupied by Mrs. Mary Ravey, 60 years old, was inundated, and with its contents was hurled into the river. Mrs. Ravey was drowned. A New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio freight train was passing at the foot of the hill at the time, and the force of the water carried four cars into the river.

Firemen Hurt.

Fire destroyed the Queen City Oil Company's works, at No. 5 East Front street, Cincinnati. Driver Beckman, of hook No. 1, and Pipeman Henry Schafer, of the Gifts engine company, were badly hurt while on their way to the fire. Beckman was thrown from his seat to the ground and for a while was unconscious. Schafer in trying to prevent a collision caught Assistant Chief Bunker's horse and the animal closed his teeth on the fireman's left wrist.

Killed on the Wabash.

William Davis, an employe of one of the mills of Columbia City, Ind., while walking on the Wabash railroad track was run down by a train and almost instantly killed. The body was terribly crushed and mangled. He leaves a wife and two children.

From Corea.

Advices from Corea say that the Corean rebels have overpowered and killed a small party of Japanese soldiers who were guarding the telegraph lines. A force of 100 Russians with one heavy gun has landed at Chemulpo.

Aeronaut Injured.

Aeronaut J. J. Coughlin fell 125 feet and was seriously injured while attempting to make a balloon assension and parachute jump at Williamsport, Ohio. The balloon split from end to end, at a height of nearly 200 feet.

Grain Elevator Burned.

The grain elevator of Smith, Crawford & Co., at Youngstown Ohio, was entirely destroyed by fire. The elevator was filled with grain and flour. The origin is unknown. The loss is $20 000, with $14,000 insurance.

DISGRACED AND DEAD

TRAGIC FATE OF A YOUNG INDIANA GIRL.

Three Men Are Held for the Murder of Pearl Bryan—Mass of Contradictory Confessions—Her Headless Corpse Found and Identified.

Story of a Dark Crime.

The funeral of Pearl Bryan was held at Greencastle, Ind., and the services were spoken over a headless corpse. While the relatives were in the vault there was a meeting of the young and middle-aged men of the city, and it was said later that some twenty-five or thirty of these pledged themselves to each other to avenge the girl's death if the murderers were not hanged by the law. The organization thus formed is said to be regarded simply as the nucleus of a larger one which will take the law into its own hands if Scott Jackson, Alonzo Walling and Wm. Wood escape the extreme penalty in the Cincinnati courts.

WILL WOOD.

The morning of Saturday, Feb. 1, there was found at Fort Thomas, Ky., the headless corpse of a young woman. For a time, identification was impossible. But inquiry was being made for Pearl Bryan, a Greencastle girl, who had left her home with the avowed purpose of visiting a friend at Indianapolis. She was accompanied to the train by Wm. Wood, son of a Methodist minister, and went to Indianapolis, stopping there only between trains. She then went on to Cincinnati. Nothing was thought of her temporary absence from home; but when the time came for her return, and she came not, the family began to wonder. Then came the account of finding the headless body of a woman near Cincinnati, and the announcement that the corpse wore shoes that had been purchased from Louis & Hays, of Greencastle. After that identification was quick and certain, and investigation led to the arrest of the three men named. Jackson and Walling were students at the Ohio Dental College at Cincinnati. They and Wood are said to have been intimate with the girl. But a maze of contradictory confessions by all of them has made impossible the fixing of direct responsibility; and this confusion is complicated by the assertion of Lulu May Hollingsworth, of Indianapolis, a friend of Pearl's.

In the series of confessions Jackson says Walling carried the woman's head in a valise to the Covington suspension bridge, and he believes Walling threw it into the river, or he may have taken it to his home at Hamilton and thrown it from the Miami bridge at that place. Jackson says he did not go with Walling on the trips. On the contrary Walling says Jackson buried the head in a sandbar in the Ohio river opposite Dayton, Ky., or dropped it in the sewer on Richmond street, Cincinnati. Each affirms the belief that the other administered a fatal drug to produce a criminal operation, and neither confesses knowledge of time or place of decapitation of the corpse. Each charges young Wood, of Greencastle, with responsibility for the girl's condition, and Jackson says he was the medium through whom Wood was to remit $50 to Walling for performing the operation. On the other hand, young Wood denies his responsibility, but admits knowledge of the girl's predicament, because Jackson, who was responsible for it, told him of it. He says the only part he took in the matter was to advise Pearl to undergo an operation.

To make the matter more unintelligible, Lulu May Hollingsworth, of Indianapolis, who was arrested, suspected of complicity in the murder, said:

"I shall be able to clear Jackson. He is responsible for Miss Bryan's condition,

SCOTT JACKSON. ALONZO WALLING.

but he was not responsible for her death. I don't think, either, that Wood had anything to do with this case. I became interested in the girl because I had once known her and chanced to meet her at the Union station. She told me what had happened, and said Jackson was to blame. When I told her what drugs to get she said she would take them in Jackson's presence and die there and then so as to throw suspicion upon Jackson and get him into difficulty."

Miss Hollingsworth afterward said she administered the fatal drugs at the request of Miss Bryan. The police discredit this. Miss Hollingsworth is regarded as a notoriety seeker. She once figured in an elopement from Terre Haute.

Cincinnati police found Jackson's bloody coat in a sewer. Jackson claims that Walling wore his clothing on the night of the murder.

Israel Cohen & Co., wholesale clothiers of Boston, have failed. Their liabilities will be large; assets, $132,000.

HONOR FOR UHL.

He Succeeds Runyon as Ambassador to the German Capital.

The President sent to the Senate Monday the nomination of Edwin F. Uhl, of Michigan, now assistant Secretary of State, to be ambassador extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to Germany. The Senate in executive session confirmed the nomination. Mr. Uhl was appointed assistant Secretary of State Nov. 1, 1893. He is best known as the author of the dispatch to Spain calling upon that country in a peremptory manner to account for the firing on the Alliance by the gunboat Conde de Venadito off Cape Mayst, on the coast of Cuba.

The new ambassador is a man of considerable wealth, and was once Mayor of Grand Rapids, his former home.

The Grand Rapids Common Council adopted a resolution congratulating Edwin F. Uhl upon his appointment and prompt confirmation as ambassador to EDWIN F. UHL.

Germany. Mr. Uhl will return home before going abroad, and numerous banquets and receptions are already planned for him.

Mr. Uhl is a prominent Democrat of Michigan. He is widely known as an able lawyer, a brilliant orator, and a keen politician of the stalwart type. He was very active in the last presidential campaign, giving not only his time to speech-making for Cleveland and Stevenson, but he gave largely of his private purse to the campaign fund. His appointment to an assistant secretaryship gave great satisfaction to Michigan Democracy. Mr. Uhl was born in New York State fifty-five years ago, but has lived in Michigan since 1846, when his parents moved West. He was "brought up" on a farm near Ypsilanti, in which city he attended school. He also was a student in the State University, and in 1866 he entered upon the practice of law. Two years later he made Grand Rapids his home, and his ability soon made him a leader at the bar of that city. It is estimated that now his law practice is worth from $20,000 to $30,000 a year. He has twice been Mayor of Grand Rapids, and the Democratic congressional nomination from his district was a standing offer on a silver plate to him for ten years before Mr. Cleveland called him to Washington. It was an offer, however, which he never accepted.

WEYLER IN COMMAND.

At Once Reviews Troops and Issues a Proclamation.

Valeriano Weyler, new captain genera. of Cuba, arrived at Havana Monday, and was tendered an ovation by the loyal Spanish. After taking the oath of office, he reviewed the troops, and issued a proclamation declaring that, backed as he was by all Spain's resources, he should never give up Cuba to the insurgents. He appealed to the gallantry of the army and navy, and especially to the loyal inhabitants, native or Spanish born. He announced his purpose to be generous to the subdued, and to all who render service to the Spanish cause.

The plan of campaign of Gen. Weyler is not known. He is likely to call in all the small detachments of troops which have from the first had such a weakening effect upon the Spanish operations, and he will try to drive the insurgents into a position from which they cannot escape without a pitched battle. He will endeavor to protect property to the utmost, but in so doing he anticipates being able to call in several thousand men who are doing small garrison duty in places where apparently there is no necessity for their presence now. Gen. Weyler will also do everything possible to muster as strong a force of cavalry as he can. Considerable re-enforcements of this branch of the service have already arrived, and more are expected. In short, his first efforts will be directed to concentrating his forces and restoring public confidence. Later he will try to engage the insurgents, who are understood to be concentrating their forces in anticipation of having a much more difficult task before them than they have had up to the present. In fact, some reports credit the insurgents with desiring to concentrate all their scattered detachments and columns into one body, and so bring the insurrection to a direct issue. If so, there seems to be no doubt that the Spanish generals will not put any obstacles in the way of the insurgent commanders. But Spaniards who are well posted on the situation say that there is no truth in the report that the insurgents will make any effort to risk a pitched battle.

Venezuela Advised to Settle.

A dispatch from Washington to the London Times says: "The United States Government has strongly and repeatedly advised the Venezuelan Government to settle England's demand for an indemnity for the Yuruan affair. Further, although America insists upon the arbitration of the boundary question, she has no interest whatever in the result of the arbitration and would be quite satisfied if all England's claims were confirmed." The Times has an editorial which aims to justify England's refusal to assent to the arbitration of the whole of the disputed territory between Venezuela and Guiana on the ground of her previous unfortunate experiences in arbitration.

Pine Ridge Pow-Wow Opened.

The great Pine Ridge powwow convened at Pine Ridge, Neb., Monday. For some months a private subscription has been circulated soliciting aid among the Indians to send delegates to Washington to confer with the authorities in reference to matters pertaining to the Pine Ridge agency. It was said 7,000 Indians would be present at the powwow, but there is no probability that so large a number will attend. Not 700 got in Monday. At this season zero weather is probable any day, and the Indians for this reason will not travel much. The scene of the meeting is Wounded Knee, twenty miles distant.

The Roman Catholic Church in the province of Quebec has always been against the Liberal party and so emphatically has its strength been thrown into recent political contests in that province in favor of conservative members of Parliament that steps are now being taken to lay the matter before the vatican in the hope that his holiness will send a papal delegate to Canada to bring the bishops into line and forbid the pulpit being made the hustings for favorite political candidates.

TRUTH TRIUMPHANT.

CLAIMS OF DEMOCRACY FORCIBLY VINDICATED.

Republican Leaders and Press Obliged to Admit the Returning Prosperity of the Country—Further Testimony from the Organ of the Iron Trade.

A Sure Sign of Prosperity.

Republican papers are now publishing returns of the Bureau of Statistics, which, if rightly construed, show that the country has prospered remarkably under the Wilson tariff law of August, 1894.

These official returns show, say the "protectionist" papers, that in 1895 we imported from England alone nearly $48,000,000 more than in 1894.

No sign on the commercial horizon of the United States in many years has been so auspicious and promising as this increase of our imports. It shows beyond all doubt that the people are not impoverished; that they have a solid backing of wealth, and that they are making an earnest effort to extend their foreign trade without which no people can thrive.

But the papers that are so much distressed by the "unfavorable balance of trade" spectre might do well to note what the Philadelphia Record says. After pointing to the fact that in the period from 1791 to 1861 the foreign commerce (including the import trade) and home industries of the United States flourished apace and "a population of 5,000,000 had rapidly grown to over 31,000,000," it adds:

"This tremedous development should cause some misgivings in the breasts of those who are constantly distressing themselves about what they call the 'unfavorable balance' of imports. If their alleged theories of trade had been anything else than vain chimeras the American people would have been so completely impoverished and exhausted from 1791 to 1861 that neither section would have had the means and the credit to raise, equip and maintain great armies in the field for four years."

The pending Dingley tariff bill would check and in many cases prohibit importations. It is a blow aimed at our foreign commerce, which is indispensable if we are ever to have foreign markets for the extensive sale of our domestic manufactured goods. It is, therefore, to that extent a blow at the entire labor and capital of the United States engaged in the mills and factories which produce these goods.—New York Herald.

A Fraudulent Protectionist.

Mayor W. L. Strong, of New York City, is the latest example of the demoralizing effect of protection on its advocates. At a recent dinner of the Merchant Tailors' Association Mayor Strong, who is a director of the American Protective Tariff League, urged the tailors to use American cloth instead of English gods. He claimed that the domestic cloth was just as good as the imported, and to prove his assertion declared that not long ago he had sold a prominent New York tailor a piece of American cloth at double its real value, by representing it as being a foreign manufacture. The tailor did not knew the difference, and sold the cloth to customers as genuine imported goods.

Tariff reformers have always contended that the injury to public and private morals was the worst effect of the high tariff system, and Mayor Strong's frank confession of business dishonesty is another proof that they are right. Mr. Strong is a millionaire dry goods merchant, who probably considers himself an honorable upright citizen. Yet on his own admission he deliberately cheated an unfortunate tailor who accepted his statements as true, by selling him domestic cloth under the pretense that it was made in England. Not only that, but he says he charged twice as much for the cloth on account of his fraudulent representation that it was imported.

This is a business transaction of which most men would be ashamed, even if they did not fear prosecution for getting money under false pretenses. But so accustomed have protectionists become to the idea of dishonestly using the power of the Government to put money in their own pockets that they think it is all right to deceive customers by misrepresenting the character or quality of their goods. Instead of regretting that an eminent Republican should have been guilty of such wilful fraud, the protectionist papers in New York and other cities have been republishing his story as a good joke, and claiming that it is a reason why English cloths should be shut out of our markets. What do fair-minded people think of such business methods, or of the press which defends them?

Logical Candidate of His Party.

Ex-Governor McKinley is now free to push his claim as the logical choice of his party as its candidate for the Presidency. There is no denying he is the logical nominee. To desert him would be tantamount to a desertion of the principle of which the McKinley law was the clearest assertion ever ventured upon. It covered "Protection for the sake of Protection" by the establishment of prohibitive duties. This was done under the constitutional cloak of taxation for revenue. But in the provision for the payment of bounties out of the Federal Treasury to favored industries all pretense of constitutional warrant was abandoned.

The right of the government to take the property of one citizen and pay it over to another citizen as a gratuity, under cover of the taxing power, was for the first time asserted in its naked atrocity. This is the essence of the doctrine of protection; and McKinley is entitled to whatsoever precedence the champion of such a principle may carry with it. As long as he was Governor of Ohio his legs were tied. Now there is no one to say him nay; and he has the best wishes of the Record for his success in getting the nomination of his party.—Philadelphia Record.

Our Greatest Iron Year.

The bulletin issued by the American Iron and Steel Association shows that 1895 was the greatest year for iron production in the history of the country. Instead of shutting down because of the reduction of duty from $4 a ton to the "free trade rate" of 20 per cent. ad valorem, the furnaces of the country increased their output to 9,446,000 tons for the year.

This is an increase of a quarter of a million tons over the output of 1890, which had been the year of maximum production. Compared with 1894 the increase for the year was more than 40 per cent.

The Iron and Steel Association attributes the increase, as the World has done, to the increasing demand for structural iron, and as this demand will grow with the increasing vogue of iron-framed buildings, the output of pig-iron is likely to increase from year to year with the same entire disregard of tariff rates, high or low, which was shown in 1895.

On the figures of 1895, the United States increase their lead as the world's greatest producer of pig-iron. We had already passed Great Britain in 1893, when out of a total production for all countries of 24,684,000 tons the United States produced 7,124,000 tons, against 6,776,000 tons for Great Britain.

Large as are the figures of total production for 1895 they are only a prophecy of development. As yet we have hardly done more than enough to show the possibilities of our vast mineral resources. In another ten years our iron output ought to double that of Great Britain, and it is entirely possible that it may do so.—New York World.

When Does Protection Protect?

Some defenders of McKinleyism explain the disastrous panic of 1893 by saying that although the high tariff law of 1890 was then in full operation its ability to promote prosperity was suspended by the fact that a Democratic administration was in power. Other Republicans blame our unsettled financial system for the panic, and say that protection could not prevent the results of unwise currency legislation being shown in general business depression.

Both these explanations confirm the main objection made by tariff reformers against the McKinley law, which is, that it did not, and could not, do anything to save the trade and industry of the country from ruin and bankruptcy. If it be true that high duties utterly failed to maintain prosperity because the Democrats were running the post-offices and collecting and expending the public revenues, then it must follow that it is not the tariff, but the politics of the party in office, which makes business good. In that case the Republicans will have to show how it happens that the year 1895, with the Democrats still in power, business of all kinds was vastly more prosperous than in 1893.

Again, if protection can only make good times when the currency system and all other conditions are favorable, is it not reasonable to suppose that it is these various conditions which really make prosperity, and that McKinley and his tariff are only flies on the wheel, unable either to help or hinder? Is not the high taxation superstition like the heathen idols, which can only give their worshippers good crops in seasons when there is abundant rain, and can do nothing in years of drought? An idol to be of any use should bring rain in dry seasons; and protection, if it is what its credulous worshippers believe, should prove its power by making good times in spite of adverse conditions. That it cannot do this is an admission that it is a very weak and inefficient policy. Its apologists only weaken their case when they try to excuse its failures. They would do better to stick to their old-fashioned plan of plain, ordinary lying, and either assert that there was no panic in 1893, or that there was no protection. The American people know that we had both, and for fear that we shall have more panics they are determined to not return to high protection.

Whoever comes face to face with unselfish love has to stop and think.

SENATE AND HOUSE.

WORK OF OUR NATIONAL LAWMAKERS.

A Week's Proceedings in the Halls of Congress—Important Measures Discussed and Acted Upon—An Important Resume of the Business.

The National Solons.

The House Friday was in an uproar most of the time because of a tilt between Talbert of South Carolina and Barrett of Massachusetts, over the former's defense of secession. A resolution of censure failed of adoption, 200 to 71. The bond bill debate consumed the evening session. The Senate chose Mr. Frye president pro tem. and passed a bill opening the forest reservations of Colorado for the location of mining claims. A resolution offered by Mr. Stewart was agreed to calling on the Secretary of the Treasury for information as to the estimated increase in revenue if the pending tariff bill becomes a law, and what the duty on wool per pound would be under the law based on the present market price of wool. The resolution contemplating a reform in handling appropriation bills by distributing them among the several committees was referred, for report next December. Senate adjourned until Monday.

The House debate Saturday upon the Senate's free coinage substitute for the bond bill was very spirited. Mr. Towne, a Minnesota Republican, claimed the attention of the House and galleries for over an hour with an eloquent effort on behalf of free coinage. Mr. Hall, a Democrat from Missouri, on the other hand, announced his conversion to "sound money" in a rather sensational speech, in which he charged that eight Senators who voted for free coinage, according to "credible information," had privately said that they believed free coinage would bring upon this country national and individual bankruptcy and ruin. He charged them with trying to "feather their nests at home" and declared that the greatest sin of the present age was the cowardice of statesmen. He also declared that a high officer of the administration had said that the silver agitation had already cost the Government $262,000,000 in bond issues, and in the course of the next twelve months the bond issues would increase to $1,000,000,000. Mr. Hall voted for free coinage in the last Congress. The National Game, Bird and Fish Protective Association has prepared a bill, which will soon be introduced in both houses of Congress.

Except to appoint definite time for the hearing of several important matters, the Senate did nothing Monday except wrangle over resolutions and amendments concerning the Monroe doctrine. The House continued debate of the bond bill.

The Senate did absolutely nothing of importance Tuesday. The President sent the following nominations: William Woodville Rockhill, of Maryland, to be Assistant Secretary of State; Matthias A. Smalley, of Ohio, to be Marshal of the United States for the Northern District of Ohio; Casper N. Morrison, of Missouri, to be Judge Advocate, with the rank of Major. The day in the House was devoted to the consideration of business reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia. At 4 o'clock the debate on the bond bill was resumed. Concurrence was opposed by Messrs. Hill (Rep.) of Connecticut, Lacy (Rep.) of Iowa, and Burton (Rep.) of Missouri, and Ogden (Dem.) of Louisiana, spoke in its favor. There were only thirteen members present at the night session of the House.

The House Thursday, by a vote of 80 to 190, in committee of the whole rejected the Senate free coinage amendment to the bond bill and reported the bill to the House with a recommendation to non-concur and insist on the House bill. Propositions were offered during the day to concur with amendments as follows: To coin the American silver product, for the retention of the seigniorage by the Government, and to open the mints to the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 15½ to 1, when Germany and France should have agreed on similar action. All were defeated by large majorities. By a vote of 21 yeas to 29 nays, the Senate defeated the motion of Mr. Morrill, chairman of the Finance Committee, to take up the tariff bill. The negative vote which defeated the motion was given by Democrats, Populists and four Republican Senators, viz., Teller, Mantle, Dubois and Carter. The affirmative vote was entirely Republican, but its total of 21 is less than half of the aggregate Republican strength. A resolution was adopted directing the Pacific Railroad committee to make full inquiry into the status of the Pacific railroads. Later in the day Mr. Pettigrew made a savage speech against the "highwaymen and conspirators" connected with the Pacific railroads and urged the foreclosure of Government liens. Consideration of the urgency deficiency bill was then resumed, and soon thereafter was passed substantially as reported. It carries about $6,000,000, a large increase over the amount passed by the House.

Shaved Hypnotize the Shavers.

"Did you ever know," said a Ninth street barber, yesterday, "that certain men who come into this shop to be shaved exert a queer hypnotic influence over one or more of the barbers? It is a fact. Now, there's a man over there at the next chair but one. He doesn't look like a nervous fellow, does he? No! Well, he isn't nervous, as a rule, but there's a certain man-about-town whose very appearance in the doorway sets that man shivering like a man in a fit. He could no more shave that particular customer than fly. Another man who used to work in this shop a couple of years ago was similarly affected, but to a greater degree, by a prominent business man, a Mr. B——. Whenever Mr. B—— came into the shop the barber would grow deathly pale and quiver spasmodically. It frequently compelled him to knock off work for a whole day, and finally the boss had to discharge him. Fact! Here's another funny thing. Did you ever know that the average barber hates nothing so much as to have to shave a man's upper lip? I don't know why it is, but I feel that way myself. I'd rather lose a day's pay than shave off a man's mustache, and when a smooth-faced man comes into this shop you ought to see the way each of us 'soldiers' and 'monkeys' around, so as to keep him from getting in our chairs."—Philadelphia Record.

A Woman Janitor.

Miss Ella Wilcox is the highly efficient janitor and sexton of the church of the United Brethren in Marcellus, Mich. She has full care of the church, keeps it in order, rings the bell on Sundays, and attends to all the other duties of sexton "in every way better than any male janitor ever has," the churchgoers say. She is good-looking as well as accomplished; doubtless another point of superiority over the male janitor.

Bicycles Used in Armies.

Nearly every army has now a bicycle corps. In Germany six men of every regiment are mounted on wheels to act as scouts.

CHAPTER XXXV.—(Continued.)

That Mrs. Knox had something to say might easily be seen.

"What is the matter, mother?" Jane asked, quietly.

"Your father's been well-nigh unbearable. First he was angry about those letters in the paper about you and Jacob Lynn, and I could well understand that, for it was shameful dragging your name in as though you'd murdered the poor fellow, when I could prove, if any proof were needed, as none would be to folk with any sense in them, that you never left the house all day. Now he's taken to groaning and bemoaning, and says your prospects are all spoiled, that no one would marry a girl against whom such attacks had been made—in the newspaper, too!"

"If that is all, mother, he need not trouble. I have no wish to marry," smiled Jane, sadly.

"So all girls say until their wedding-day is fixed," was the shrewd reply. "But that's not all. He has done nothing but drag up that old story about Jacob Lynn's letter that—that I altered. He says it has been the cause of all this trouble. And I'm not at all sure that it hasn't," concluded Mrs. Knox, with a strangled sob.

Jane put her arms around her mother's neck and kissed her, too loyal to admit the truth of the self-accusation, though at the same time unable to deny it; and yet could she regret the deceit that had gained for her those happy fourteen days?

"You meant it for the best, dear mother; and I was very, very happy while it lasted," she murmured, softly.

"And there is no chance of its coming to anything again?"

"None."

"And is there no one else? Oh, Jenny, if you only knew what a load it would take from my heart to be sure that you were settled! Your father—he is half daft, I think, at times—has been talking of retiring and going home, and then you would have no chance of making the marriage you could now. You have never been in England, but I can remember how different it was. We should not be in society at all, for we have neither money nor position, not even that which, were we with the regiment, might be from courtesy accorded us. No, if you don't marry well in India you can never do so in England. Is there no one else?" repeated Mrs. Knox, wistfully. "I had hoped so much from your being with Mrs. Dene, and Miss Knollys so friendly too. Have you nothing to tell me, dear?"

And then Jane, thinking it was her mother's due, confided to her that Major Larron had proposed, and was to receive a final answer in a few days.

"Of course it will be 'Yes,'" was the delighted comment, as the story ended. "How pleased and proud your father will be! Why, Jane, with all your beauty, I never expected you to make such a match as that."

"Don't take too much for granted, mother, dear. I have not promised to accept him, only promised to hesitate about refusing him."

"And she who hesitates——" laughed Mrs. Knox.

"Is lost," finished Jane, gloomily, to herself, as her mother left.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

The day on which Jane was to give her answer to Barry Larron had come, and as yet she had not decided what that answer was to be. If at one moment she could do full justice to the advantages he had offered her, the next a sudden revulsion of feeling would make her deem it impossible that she could ever marry him. The two strong reasons that urged her to accept him were—first, the pleasure this would give her parents; and secondly, that if she went away from here there was less likelihood of the knowledge she possessed proving a source of danger to her former lover.

Yet often a doubt crossed her mind whether Stephen Prinsep would care for a safety purchased so, and inconsistently enough the thought filled her with a strange delight. Though he might have forfeited all claim to her consideration, all title to her respect, she would like to think of him as true to the love he had once professed. Sometimes she felt as though she, too, would like to remain unwedded for his sake, free to worship the ideal to which the real man had been so far from attaining. But such constancy was a luxury, and one in which she could not expect to indulge, situated as she was, with no settled home or position, with gossip busy about her name, and her father anxious, she acknowledged—to see her married. And he was not worth it. Ah, there lay the sting! It was not merely the loss of love, for which she might have felt a healthy sorrow, but shaken faith, and trust in all good things and true, uprooted and laid waste.

"Is anything the matter, dear?" said Mrs. Dene, the girl having been too deep-up absorbed in thought to note her presence.

"Matter? No. I suppose there is nothing the matter, except," with an uneasy laugh, "that a great honor has been offered me, and I am hesitating whether to allow myself to accept it."

"I think I can guess what it is."

Jane went over to Mrs. Dene's side, and laying both arms upon her knees, looked soberly into her face and told her all.

"Then why should you accept Major Larron—for the sake of his wealth, for the position he could give you? Many girls would think these arguments sufficient, but it is not like you, dear."

"No, no; I don't think it is because of that. It is because—because he loves me"—averting her eyes, in which were only coldness and dread, no responsive passion.

"Is he the only one?" asked Mrs. Dene. "Is there no one you could love in return?"

"No one I may," was the answer, spoken almost in a whisper.

A silence ensued.

Jane was the first to speak.

"Nora, you are older than I, and have seen more of life," she began, in a hard, unemotional voice that told nothing of the inward pain she felt and had been feeling for so long; "let me have your honest opinion. Given that I love some one I can never hope to marry—not in any circumstances that could occur—should I be doing wisely, or only making wrong worse, to accept another one because he can give me what I want so much—peace? You know how people are writing of me now in the papers, and insisting that I have a knowledge—whether they think it a criminal knowledge or not, I am sure I cannot tell—of Jacob Lynn's death. And you must have guessed that something else is troubling me, though you are too good to question me about it. Can't you imagine that when Major Larron came forward just now, when others are holding rather aloof from me, I should be touched by his generosity—don't you think it might be right to secure such a haven for myself, if it makes his happiness also, as he says it will?"

"Every one would say you were doing wisely and well," answered Mrs. Dene, constrainedly.

"And you, Nora—and you?"

"I am not sure. Is there no chance of there being some misunderstanding between you and—and the man you love? He may care for you, and ask you to marry him still."

"He has asked me once, twice."

"And you refused him?"—in surprise.

Jane bowed her head.

Mrs. Dene understood then partly who it was that troubled and had made her so unlike the shy, happy child she had been a year before.

"Nora!" cried Jane, impulsively. "Tell me, is Major Larron a good man, a man with whom I might have a chance of being happy?"

"He is good-looking, well-mannered—and he loves you, Jenny," she answered hesitatingly.

"That is not what I mean. Is he good?"

"How should I know, dear? We all wear our best side outward"—awkwardly.

"But you know. They say—forgive me if I am paining you—perhaps I have no right to mention it—they say you were once engaged to him, and I wondered——"

"Why I did not marry him?" finished Mrs. Dene, in a low, tremulous voice. "Well, I will tell you, and you shall judge for yourself whether in that he was to blame. No, it does not pain me, dear, to speak of him; my feeling for him was only a girlish fancy—hero worship, I suppose it might be called, although so misapplied. It is only other things connected with that time that have power to move me so, for it was through his jilting me that—that I won my husband."

"He jilted you?" cried Jane.

Mrs. Dene winced. What it cost her to reopen this old wound she alone knew, yet she had resolved to tell all rather than by her silence mislead Jane.

"Perhaps he was not altogether in fault. I was young and thoughtless, and flirted, though never untrue to him at heart."

"He jilted you!" repeated Jane, who, having in her excitement risen to her feet, was now pacing up and down the room.

Her breathless indignation rather startled Nora Dene, who had outlived her first anger, though the pain survived still.

Then the whole story came out, nothing extenuated, yet naught set down in malice. And Jane listened with rising wrath against the man who, having acted so to her best friend, had dared to ask her also to be his wife.

"He would have jilted me, too, probably!" she exclaimed.

"No, dear. He loves you as he never loved me. I think he would suffer anything at your hands rather than give you up."

"He shall never have the chance."

"You don't mean——"

"I mean that my answer to-day will be 'no!' No, no—emphatically no!"

"Don't decide hastily, child. Think of the position he can give you, the luxury of wealth that would be yours; and, remember every one has some good in him only waiting to be brought out. To love any one, as Major Larron loves you, is elevating in itself; every man is the better for marrying the woman he loves."

"He sha'n't marry me," said Jane, with such a mutinous pout that Mrs. Dene was obliged to smile.

Going straight to her own room she wrote two letters. The first was to her mother, with an instinctive feeling that she ought to be the first to know of the step that she was taking, and the second to Major Larron.

"Dear Major Larron," she wrote, and smiled a little sadly—bitterly, too, at the stereotyped beginning of what meant so much to both—"do not come to-day. The answer which I have to give will cause less pain to both if written. I will never marry you—never! Nothing you can say will alter my decision, and it will be kinder to say nothing at all. Circumstances have come to my knowledge that make it impossible I could ever change my mind. And I never loved you—never should love you; so it is better that I should have come to this decision—better for me, and for you, too. I am yours sincerely, JANE KNOX."

She smiled as she dispatched the letter with something of her old mirthfulness. That she, the former sergeant major's daughter, should thus be dismissing a coronet in prospective, and some present thousands a year, seemed irresistibly comic. And she felt no regret, only relief.

It was the letter to her mother she followed with some apprehension. How would they take it at home?

CHAPTER XXXVII.

With the morning came a letter from Mrs. Knox, full of veiled reproaches at the disappointment she had experienced, and openly expressing discontent with the life she was leading now at home alone.

Jenny determined to visit her home, and told Mrs. Dene of her intention. During the forenoon she started.

"Come again, Jenny," Mrs. Dene said, wistfully, as she pressed her lips to the girl's fresh face at parting.

"Indeed, indeed, I will," was the eager reply, and waiting to say no more than a "good-by," lest she should betray how loath she was to leave, Jane went quickly from her presence and the house.

She met no one on her homeward way; and even when she entered their own drawing-room she found it empty. But just as she had concluded that every one was out Mrs. Knox's voice in an adjoining room undeceived her.

Fortunately Mrs. Knox was too much taken up with her grievances to notice her daughter's appearance when they met. Jenny was leaning back in the chair she had taken a moment or two before, and was gazing with distended eyes on a boot that her mother had thrown angrily to the floor. The sole was uppermost, and she had ample leisure to see that it had just such a triangular mark as she alone had noticed on the foot-print near Jacob Lynn when he lay dead that day in the deserted compound. It might be only a coincidence, it is true; but the mere suspicion was enough to make her blood run cold and her heart almost stop its beating.

The magnitude of her discovery so overwhelmed Jane that for a moment all capability of thought deserted her. Then slowly, as one recovering from an illness, digests first the simplest food, a regret stole across her still half-paralyzed mind, that she should have done Stephen Prinsep such a cruel injustice. She even felt a faint thrill of pleasure at the thought of his innocence; but almost immediately the remembrance of who it was that she now knew to be guilty rendered all other feelings weak and vague. Brain and being alike seemed saturated with the knowledge that her father—her father who had held her so often in his arms, soothed her childish sorrows, and shared her joys, and whom she had honored as the best man she had ever known, or believed could be—he, her father, was a murderer.

She could have shrieked aloud to have relieved herself from the burden of her restrained emotion, yet so silent, and so often unguessed at, are the tragedies in real life, that she sat still, making no sign to betray the horror that had come upon her, and her mother, all unknowing of what through her agency had been revealed, went on scolding in the same high-pitched key. How soon, thought Jane, would all these trifling worries that now beset her vanish in thin air were she to know the truth! But she never must—she never must! The secret should be between herself and heaven.

So strangely, often unwittingly, are all our ideas tinged with thoughts of self that, after the first shock had subsided, she remembered to be glad that she had refused Major Larron.

"Now, Jenny, I am ready," said Mrs. Knox, leading the way from the room, while silently Jane rose and followed. "Well, and so you refused Major Larron. I can't tell you how disappointed I was when I got the letter, and your father looked quite as if some one had struck him, so dumfounded. He had been more like what he used to be, since I told him that I thought, was almost sure, in fact, you would marry Major Larron. And this morning he was unbearable. First one thing and then another was wrong, until I lost my temper too, and answered back. Then he grew furious, and said I had been to blame for all—as though I had not been as eager as he could be to see you happily settled—and that your life would be ruined, with a lot more which seemed to have no sense. I suppose it is these letters in the papers, though nobody takes any notice of them, I am sure. Every one knows, and we can prove, that we were in the house all day, even if it were possible or probable that a little thing like you could kill a strong man like Jacob Lynn."

"I wish we had never known him. He has been the cause of all our trouble," cried Jane, with an anger she felt unreasonable, yet could not restrain.

(To be continued.)

THIS BIRD HAS HORNS.

Rare Species of the Feathered Tribe Found in South America.

The rarest species of bird now extant, and one which is almost extinct, has its home in the jungles of South America. This ornithological curiosity is known to science as the palamedra cornuda, and to the common people as the "horned screamer." As a rara avis nothing could excel the cornuda unless it would be the accidental discovery of a living moa or an epinoris. But few of the bird books even let you know that such a horned paradox ever existed, let alone telling you that living specimens of the queer creature are still occasionally met with. The only one now in captivity in North America, if the writer has not been misinformed, is that belonging to the aviary of the Philadelphia zoological gardens, and which arrived in this country about three years ago. The creature is about the size of a full-grown turkey hen, and of a blackish brown color. One of its distinguishing peculiarities is a ruffle of black and white which surrounds the head. The horney appendage which caused the early South American explorers to write so many chapters on the "wonderful rhinocerous bird of the jungle," is about four inches in length, and grows straight up out of the heaviest and broadest portion of the head. But the above is not the only natural offensive and defensive weapon with which the horned screamer has been provided. On each wing, at the "elbow" joint, he has a three-inch spur, and just back of that another an inch in length. He is said to be a match for any ten game cocks.—St. Louis Republic.

Samoan Society.

Mrs. Robert Louis Stevenson has related to the San Francisco Examiner many interesting things about her Samoa home and life there. She says that housekeeping becomes rather difficult when you have to send half across the Pacific for a bottle of bluing, and a bag of flour. In regard to the servant problem she says:

The servant problem? No, we don't have that. The reason is that we don't have any servants. We have families. If you want a cook, you let your wants be known, and you are besieged with applicants. When you see one that you really like, you say:

"Now, if you'll be a good boy, and do so and so," and then you tell him what you expect of him, "I'll let you be in my family, and will allow you so much a month for spending money."

If you called the money you give your "family" for spending money "wages," they would leave you in a body. They are excellent help, but you cannot call them servants or treat them like servants.

The leader of society there is always a young and beautiful girl. She is chosen from among the village girls, and is given the title of the "Beautiful Maid."

Then there's a man—he's called the "Magnificent One." He is always young and handsome and strong, and well up in the latest things in dances and the very newest fad in war-songs, and is dressed up in a dress peculiar to himself; and all the men have to bow when they pass before him.

My daughter went to a picnic one day when we first went to Samoa. She noticed a young man sitting on a sort of dais, and every one that went near him stooped and almost crawled. She thought, "Well, this must be some mighty prince or potentate." She went up closer to have a good look at the exalted being, and lo! it was our cook!

One of our family was chosen for the "Beautiful Maid," and she had to leave us and go and be a society leader. I don't think she cares about it.

My cook, who has gone to be a "Magnificent One," doesn't like it at all. He says he gets nothing to eat but bananas and breadfruit, and has no bed to sleep on but a mat, with a piece of wood for a pillow. And then he has to stay up so late in society, leading dances and such things, that he doesn't get sleep enough, and I fancy he'd rather be a little less swell and a little more comfortable.

A DAY TO REMEMBER.

FEB. 22, WHEN WASHINGTON WAS BORN.

Something of America's Greatest General and First President—Sketch of His Illustrious Career—His Last Illness and Death.

Great Man's Life.

Though the story has been often told before and volumes have been written concerning George Washington's career, it is a tale which neither time can wither nor custom stale. At this season the country is celebrating once more the anniversary of his birth and recalling to mind his great deeds. It is, therefore, interesting to tell over again the facts which have given him the fame which he enjoys.

George Washington was born in Westmoreland County, Va., Feb. 22, 1732. He does not seem to have shown any intellectual brilliance when a boy and his teaching was of rather an intermittent sort. The only thing for which he showed much aptitude was in mathematics, and this talent he turned to the acquirement of surveying. He did a good deal of this when a young man, both on State lands and on the extensive domain of Lord Fairfax, a relative of his.

Washington likewise showed proficiency in military matters, and at the age of 19 was appointed adjutant of the provincial troops with the rank of major. His first real experience of war happened in a campaign against the French in 1754. He performed prodigies of valor and won great admiration from the colonists and Indians alike. Writing in a letter of one of these engagements he says: "I had four bullets through my coat and four horses shot under me, yet I escaped unhurt, though death was leveling my companions on every side."

In 1759 Washington married Mrs. Martha Custis, resigned his commission in the army and settled on his estate at Mt. Vernon, which had reverted to him upon the death of his elder brother, Lawrence. He began the life of a country gentleman like so many others round him, engaged in raising cows and horses and supervising the cultivation of his acres. He was elected to the Virginia House of Burgesses, was a vestryman of the parish church and altogether lived a most humdrum and respectable life. Doubtless he expected thus to end his days, living quietly, obscurely, at peace with the world, and far from the affairs of state.

But fortune had other things in store for Washington, and at the age of 43 he was called upon to begin a career which should not only make his own name immortal, but be pregnant with far-reaching consequences. To follow that career in detail would be to do no less than write the whole story of the revolutionary war, so intimately was Washington concerned in its every event. He was an extremely conservative man and was much averse to any idea of separation from England, but when the die was once cast, when he knew that retreat was inevitable, he threw himself heart and soul into the cause of the colonies, bound to make them win or perish in the attempt. His task was a hard one. America, a new country, its wealth wholly undeveloped, was pitted against Great Britain, that had behind her centuries of culture and of riches. Washington had only green, untried soldiers to oppose an army which had defied the world. Upon him alone rested the whole responsibility. His duty it was to hearten his men in the hour of darkness and foretell good things when his soul boded the worst; his it was to soften the jealousies and enmities of his subordinates and his, finally, was the duty of turning defeat to victory and making the mistakes of the enemy serve his country's purpose.

The war being at length over and the independence of America thereby achieved, Washington retired to private life on his estate at Mt. Vernon. From that peaceful home he was called by his countrymen to preside over them as ruler. He was inaugurated at New York April 30, 1789. He chose as his cabinet Thomas Jefferson, of Virginia, for Secretary of State; Alexander Hamilton, of New York, for the Treasury, and Henry Knox, of Massachusetts, as Secretary of War. During this first administration the finances of the country were gotten into some kind of shape, the Supreme Court was organized and several important amendments to the constitution recommended.

In the course of his first term Washington made extensive tours through the east and south and everywhere received most flattering evidences of popular favor. Though loth to accept a second term as President, Jefferson and Hamilton both counseled it, and so Washington, for a second time, accepted the nomination. He was elected and his inauguration took place March 4, 1793. During this term the war between France and England broke out and Washington advocated for this country a policy of strict neutrality. This course stirred up considerable criticism. In other matters Washington's policy excited a good deal of feeling, so that his second term was by no means so happy as his first.

It was partly for these reasons, partly that he was wearied with the cares of state, that Washington entirely discouraged all idea of a third term and published his farewell address to the people in September, 1796. John Adams was therefore elected to the chief magistracy and, after being present at his inauguration, Washington sought the seclusion of Mt. Vernon.

He was not suffered long to enjoy in quiet the pleasures of peace, for a war with France appearing imminent, Washington was summoned to lead the United States forces. He yielded to what he deemed a duty and set forth to raise troops. Happily the trouble with France was averted, but Washington did not live to know it. Dec. 12, 1799, while out riding, he got caught in the rain and contracted a severe cold. This developed into a serious illness, and it soon became evident that Washington could not rally. The end came Dec. 14. He said to those about his bed: "I feel myself going; I thank you for your attention, but I pray you take no more trouble about me." His last words were: "It is well."

The funeral took place on the 18th and Washington's body was laid in the vault at Mt. Vernon, where it has remained until this day, a fitting place of pilgrimage for all Americans who love their country and reverence its first great leader.

THE LITTLE HATCHET.

When our immortal Washington was just a little lad he got a little hatchet for a plaything from his dad, and, filled with youthful enterprise to test its powers, he went out into the garden and cut down a cherry tree. When his sire thoughtless pays now the mischief that was done, "Who spoiled my favorite cherry tree?" he sternly asked his son; the little fellow hung his head, then bravely made reply, "I did it with my hatchet, pop! I cannot tell a lie." "Come to my arms, my noble son," the father cried with joy; "I'd rather have no cherry trees than one untruthful boy;" and as our little chopper, being sharper than his axe, escaped the whipping he deserved by sticking to the facts. This is the hatchet story, but the reason why it stays alone in all its glory must a mistake assume. Is surely isn't possible that just one ancient youth in all we have to illustrate the beauty of the Truth! Where are the girls—where are the men—where are the women, too, who will allow a little boy to teach them to be true? Why hasn't one of them at least surprised the earth and sky by saying, like George Washington, "I cannot tell a lie?" "Yes," Echo answers, "where are they?" And we repeat the same while asking if that little boy don't make them blush with shame. But if he don't, and they persist in disregarding facts, the only way to cure them is to hit them with this axe.—Detroit Free Press.

WHERE HE ONCE LIVED.

Historic Log Cabin in the Northern Neck of Virginia.

About the year 1750 Lord Fairfax, then proprietor of the large territory styled the Northern Neck of Virginia, decided to secure George Washington's services in surveying his vast domain beyond the Blue Ridge. Washington was delighted with this proposition, and in March, 1748, just a month from the day he was 16 years old, he left Mount Vernon, accompanied by George Fairfax, a kinsman of his employer, and in due time arrived upon the field of action.

While engaged in making this survey, Washington's party had headquarters were at the log cabin, a picture of which accompanies this article. Save for the ravages of time and the more or less frequent attacks of the relic hunter, the house stands to-day virtually as it did when Washington was there nearly a hundred and fifty years ago. About twelve feet square, it was originally divided into two rooms, one in the upper and the other in the lower story. The upper room, which was at one time plastered, was reached by a flight of rough steps that led up from the ground on the outside of the building, and served the young surveyors as a repository for their instruments, while the apartment beneath was used as an office and bedroom.

MARTHA WASHINGTON.

Sterling and Brilliant Characteristics of the Patriot's Helpmate.

MARTHA WASHINGTON belonged to the Virginia school of aristocracy, where she was in her girlhood a colonial belle, to whom the chivalrous Virginians paid devoted homage. She was the daughter of one gentleman of fortune, Col. John Dandridge, and the widow of another, Col. Daniel Parke Custis, owner of the White House, Kent County, Va., where she married George Washington, in 1759, and brought him a reputation for beauty, wealth and virtue. Her fame went everywhere, and people at Mount Vernon remarked that Mrs. Washington must be as good a commander as her husband to manage successfully an army of servants, tradespeople and guests. Such was the hospitality of those days that no visitor was ever permitted to leave after sunset. The hunt, cards and dancing were the amusements of the times. Everybody kept open house. It is interesting to know that Mrs. Custis, the bride, wore upon her marriage with Col. Washington a wedding dress of heavy corded white silk interwoven with silver threads. It was elegantly trimmed with heavy white satin ribbon brocaded with silver leaves. The dress opened over a white satin quilted overskirt. She wore white satin, high-heeled shoes of the period, with diamond buckles, ruffles of point lace, and an exquisite suite of pearls, necklace, earrings and bracelets. She was attended by three bridesmaids.

MARTHA WASHINGTON.

Martha Washington would not have been fitted for a place in history as the "first lady of the republic" if she had not possessed a mind of her own, and been capable of commanding her household, and occasionally her husband. It is recorded by Miss Bremer that a guest at Mount Vernon overheard her distinguished hostess giving George a piece of her mind after they had retired for the night. He listened in profound silence, and when she had said her say, he answered pleasantly:

"Now, good sleep to you, my dear."

Thirty years after her marriage to Gen. Washington, Martha Washington found herself elevated to the position of the first lady of the land. At Washington's levees the President always appeared as a private gentleman, without the cocked hat of ceremony, and with no sword. All callers were seated, and the rich pound cake and plum cake of the day was handed around with tea and coffee, and wine, a custom that was imperative in those days in good society. Every Friday evening Mrs. Washington received from 8 to 10 o'clock, and the most elegant and refined people attended those receptions, the license which admits the general public not having been extended. It was the day of a republican court, and rank, character and full dress were necessary to gain admittance.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.
From the painting by Gilbert Stuart.

Martha Washington was of plump figure, full of grace, sprightliness, and with an aristocratic bearing that was due to generations of refined and elegant prosperity. She was of Welsh descent, which accounts for that rare blending of sterling domestic qualities with the lighter and more brilliant characteristics of Virginia birth and breeding, which were, however, not incompatible with fitness for housekeeping in every branch of which she was versed.

After Washington's death she destroyed her entire correspondence with him, unwilling that the confidence they had shared should ever be given to the public. The sum of her virtues and qualifications may be thus estimated: She was worthy to share the pilgrimage and be the life companion of as illustrious a man as George Washington.

The combined ages of sixteen persons at a birthday party at the home of John Goldsberry in Frankfort, Ind., the other day footed up 1,424 years.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Entered at the Auburn, Indiana office as second-class matter.

THURSDAY.....FEBRUARY 20 1896

Democratic Call

Pursuant to the suggestion of the state chairman the newly elected democratic committeemen of all the precincts in DeKalb county are hereby called to meet at Waterloo, February 29, 1896, at 1:30 o'clock for the purpose of reorganization by the election of a Chairman, Vice Chairman, Secretary and Treasurer.

JOHN F. SHUMAN,
County Chairman.

Surprise Party

The friends of Mrs. Wm. Knepper on South VanBuren street gave her a grand surprise Saturday it being her fifty-sixth birthday. They gathered in the forenoon and a big dinner was served.

Those present were:

Mr. and Mrs. Will Wyatt and son, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Simington and sons Frank and Curt; Mr. and Mrs. Carnahan, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Wyatt, Mr. and Mrs. Abe Beaty, Mrs. Charley Wyatt and son, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Maurer and daughter Blanche, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bailey. Mrs. Gerry Maurer and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Squires.

Gave Prizes

At the Church of God Sunday morning, the exercises of the Sunday School were a little out of ordinary. A record has been kept, as to regularity of attendance on the part of the Sunday scholars with the view to give prizes or in some way encourage them to be there at every Sunday forenoon session. It was found that five stood the highest. We believe the best record was for Artie Cupp, and the others rewarded. were Ella Poor, and Edward, Sarah and Flora Ice Edward Ice received a book and each of the others a fine picture already framed. We had the good fortune to see these happy children start home with their prizes, and feel sure it will be of benefit to them and to the school.

When the people settle down to persistent newspaper advertising, and quit trying to get something for nothing by nabbing all the little schemes, novelties, etc., etc., we'll hear less of this "Advertising don't pay."

Stone Coal

M. B. Masters showed us the strangest specimens of stone coal we ever saw, and he himself after using this mineral for thirty-five years, never saw the like before. In breaking up a large chunk of it, a few days ago, he found imbedded in the ordinary coal, two or three pieces of a flinty substance, that looks exactly like wood. It has apparently had the long fibers of wood, and the pieces look like long, but rather large slivers, that after being pressed into the coal, became petrified The points of the two main slivers, are in the same direction and they were lying close together. Both were broken in breaking up the coal, but the bed in which they lay is exactly fitted to them, as if some strong pressure had been exerted on them. Anyone who wants to explain this freak, can see the pieces at this office.

DO THIS.

We Beg To Offer A Few Suggestions To Our Business Men.

Mr. Grocers:—Put plenty of "ginger" in your business and "prune" down the expenses.

Mr. Hardware Dealers:—Keep "hammering" away and you'll "nail" plenty of customers.

Mr. Dry Goods Dealers:—Always "cotton" to the cash customers.

Mr. Green Fruit Dealers:—"By their fruits ye shall know them."

Mr. Haberdashers:—"Collar" the dollars and the cents will look after themselves.

Mr. Delicatessen Dealers:—The "worst" spell of trade has an ending.

Mr. Jewelers and Watchmakers:—"Watch" your business carefully. Eternal vigilance is the price of success.

Mr. Stationers:—"The pen is mightier than the sword," but a pen is of no use without good ink and paper.

Mr. Shoemakers:—"Goods well bought are half sold." Treat patrons so that the first sale won't be the "last."

Mr. Druggists:—"Good goods and low prices" is a combination that will "draw" better than the strongest porous plaster.

Mr. Confectioners:—Give customers satisfaction; that's a heap better than "taffy."

Mr. Florists and Fish Dealers:—You needn't be "fresh" but your stock ought to be.

Mr. Butchers:—Don't "steak" your hopes on the promise of delinquent debtors. "Chop" 'em off from further credit at once.

Mr. Canned Goods Dealers:—It is well to dress neatly, but don't imagine that consumers hanker after "swells."

A Word For Cal.

The DeKalb County Lecturer is Highly Complimented by the Press.

The COURIER has frequently spoken of the success of Cal Husselman as a lecturer before the Farmers Institutes. He is receiving very flattering press notices wherever he appears. He lectured at South Bend last week and the Times says the following:

Cal. Husselman addressed the meeting on the subject of "The best acre; garden and small fruits." He opened the address by making a slap at those who took the institute as a good place in which to make semi political remarks, and other things that had only a place in political caucuses. He deprecated anything of that kind. These meetings were emphatically for the farmers, and political matters should be entirely eliminated."

His remarks were to the point and heartily applauded. The subject was then taken up and discussed in all its bearings. He wanted an acre for small fruits on every farm, desired plenty of fruit. It was better than most anything else. We have the soil and everything else necessary for the production of plenty of the fruit. He wanted a flower bed for the women to take care of, but the acre for a small fruits should be taken care of by the men. The land was necessary to be well prepared; make good selection of fruits; would recommend a large variety suitable only to the soil. He gave many laughable incidents and kept the attention of the audience to end."

Hayden—Putnam

At the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Bolmer, Feb. 11 at 12 o'clock occurred the marriage of Mr. J. T. Hayden of Cleveland, O and Mrs. G. A. Putnam, of Auburn Rev. Kemp of Garrett officiating. Mr. Hayden is the traveling auditor of the Lake Shore R'y, and is a very highly respected gentleman His courteous treatment has won for him many friends Mrs Hayden is a lady in every sense and has many friends who will be pleased to learn of her marriage. Those who witnessed the ceremony were Mr & Mrs. Putnam of Sturgis Mich., and Mr. & Mrs Teneyck and John Hamilton and daughter Miss Mae, of Auburn.

THE SOUP BONE.

Tuesday's Daily.

Soup is not as mysterious or interesting as hash, but nevertheless it is liable to a great many vicissitudes in this bleak world. Our attention was called to this subject this forenoon, by a little incident that happened in sight of the COURIER office, and which impressed the employes thereof with the great responsibility that attaches to those who prepare this favorite dish for the delectation and nourishment of the inner man and woman. A big brown dog was going along on the other side of the street, carrying in his capacious mouth a good sized soup bone, which the butcher had taken great pains to wrap carefully in the usual amount of paper. Just in front of Grund's barber shop, the animal seemed to be dissatisfied with the hold he had on the meat and suddenly laid it down. The paper started to unroll, and this seemed to give him an idea. He let it unroll till he could grasp the thing in his mouth without the paper, and then calmly pursued his way home, the naked meat and his naked mouth being kept in loving proximity. We do not know whose dog it was nor who will enjoy this particular dish of soup, but presume that the new flavor will appear one of these days on some bill of fare, with an unpronounceable name, and go thundering down the ages as a master stroke of the culinary art.

Uncle Sam's Farm

Very few people stop to realize that San Francisco is on the far Pacific coast, is only about half way from the eastern point of the United States to the western point of our possessions Starting from Eastport, Maine, and noting the degrees of longitude passed over till we reach the westernmost of the Aleutian Islands that belong to us through the Alaska Purchase, we find this statement verified. An exchange has a very good article on this point which says:

The domain of the United States extends 4,865 miles west of San Francisco and 2,430 miles west of the Sandwich Islands. People forget that the domain of the United States is 8,826.5 miles across from East to West, and that San Francisco is only 3,961 miles west of Eastport, Maine.

Our most western point of land is Attou Island of the Aleutian Archipelago, far over on the Asiatic side of the Pacific Ocean. Our water boundary line has six degrees west of that, in sight of Asia from the mast head of a vessel.

The late Japan-Chinese war was waged on a parallel of latitude which passes nearly through San Francisco, and 7,500 miles from that city. Deduct 4,865 miles from 7,500 miles and it leaves our far western boundary line 2,635 miles from Corea, while British North America is 6,165 miles distant. If we were concerned in the dispute in Brazil, 5,500 miles away, and in Samoa in the South Pacific, will any say that we were not interested in the recent war, 2,635 miles from our borders, with water boundaries actually the same?

With Molly.

Stars went spinning round so fast
Over hills of holly;
Life seemed all too sweet to last,
In a sleigh with Molly.
Snow on all the roads that day;
Teamsters lost and jolly!
But my heart, it found the way
In a sleigh with Molly.
Red cheeks, where the roses be,
Tell me kissin's folly?
Didn't look that way to me
In a sleigh with Molly!

BUTLER

Boon Madden, living one and a half miles west of Butler, came near losing his residence by fire a few nights ago, a spark from the stove set the carpet on fire. They were sleeping on the second floor and were awakened by the smoke and by prompt efforts succeeded in extinguishing the fire before much damage was done.

Mrs. Fred Scheman, living on the Thomas Carr farm east of town, died at Maysville last week. She leaves a husband and several small children.

Emlin V Campbell and Frank Fanning were home from Chicago last week They returned last Monday.

Rev. Dishro was so much undisposed last Sunday night as to be unable to fill his pulpit.

The ladies of the M. E. church will have a Washington Birthday tea at the M. E. church parlor next Friday evening

Our butchers and bakers are crowding in upon each others domain so closely, that three bakeries are now selling meat as well as bread.

Our people were very much surprised and pained last Tuesday morning to learn of Waterloo's disastrous fire.

The writer visited Waterloo, Hudson and Ashley last Monday. The outlook at Waterloo was gloomy indeed, with its ruins staring one in the face, telling in silence the ordeal through which many of its citizens have passed at the hands of the fire fiend. The scene is a desolate one indeed, but out of ruin some times comes prosperity. And we hope as much for our stricken sister town. Gloom seemed to have settled down rather thick over Ashley too as there had been a fresh rumor afloat, asserting that the R R. Co., were going to move their division to Montpelier, Ohio. And if so, then woe to this liveliest of all the embryonic town of this part of the state. Bro Strayer has Phœnix like come up out of his ashes and has a new brick office about ready to occupy. The smoke of his fire had hardly disappeared when Lieg's frame bakery caught fire in the still of midnight hour and would have soon been in Ashes and smoke had not the heroic efforts of their fire laddies come to the rescue; as it is the buildings badly demoralized. Ashley is getting a little interesting to the Insurance companies.

CORUNNA.

Myrtle Murphy is down with the measles.

Rev. Minnick is holding a series of meetings at the Christian church.

The Good Citizenship League held their regular meeting last Tuesday night at the M. E church.

Edith Griffith visited Ervin Wigent at Ft. Wayne, last Thursday.

Reynolds Bros. shipped a carload of material to Ft. Wayne last week for bicycle rims.

Howard Calkin got his fingers mashed while making a coupling on the B. & O, road, and is laying off for a few days.

Reynolds Bros. received the contract for making the furniture for the K of P Hall in Corunna. We'll venture the assertion that no factory in the state can produce a more handsome set than this one.

Harvey, youngest son of Mr, and Mrs. Thomas Franks, died Wednesday morning the 12th, at the age of 16 years and 1 month. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Speckein on Friday the 14th, after which the remains were tenderly laid to rest in the Corunna cemetery. Thus one more, just in the flush of young manhood is ruthlessly taken away, and one upon whom the loving parents were building much hope for support and comfort in their declining years. The bereaved parents, brother and sisters have the sympathy of the entire community.

Elmer Bachtel returned to Auburn last Monday.

Milo Thomas went to Waterloo last Wednesday to view the ruins of the late fire.

Rob Harper of Chicago is a guest of friends here.

Miss Lillie Campbell visited friends in Fairfield last week.

Victor Ransburg, a former operator here, was the guest of Miss Maud Raber Tuesday evening,

Power Of the Newspaper

Speaking of the influence exerted by the papers of the day, as compared with books, the Rev. G. A. Carstensen, of St. Paul's Episcopal church, Indianapolis said yesterday: "The newspaper represents largely the progress and development of the world. It reaches millions of persons a day, while books are not so generally read. The great majority of men and women he said, do not read books, while everybody reads newspapers. Few people are acquainted with the great books of the century, yet everybody can spare one or two cents a day for a daily paper The latter goes alike to the palace of the rich and the hovel of the poor.

Your hear it almost everywhere, and read it in the newspapers, that Simmons Liver Regulator is the best liver remedy, and the best Spring medicine, and the best blood medicine. "The only medicine, of any consequence that I use is Simmons Liver Regulator."—So wrote Mr. R. A. Cobb, of Morganton, N. C. and W. F. Park, M. D., of Tracy City, Tenn., writes: "Simmons Liver Regulator is the best."

J. W. Pierce, Republic, Ia., says: "I have used One Minute Cough Cure in my family and for myself, with results so entirely satisfactory that I can hardly find words to express myself as to its merit. I will never fail to recommend it to others on every occasion that presents itself." Davenport the Druggist. See book.

Geo. Weeks, of Edon, Ohio, was here yesterday on his way home from Indianapolis where he has been for a time caring for his printing office there. Now he has rented it to his cousin, Mr. Meeler, and can remain at home and care for his paper. The "Independent" has been in charge of Saxby McIntosh, since Mr Weeks went away, and has been well managed.

There is a good joke out on Geo. Boland and his cousin, Miss Etta Heist, on the occasion of a business trip to Fort Wayne a few days ago. They got dinner at a hotel, and very properly registered as Mr. Boland and Miss Heist, of Auburn. But it seems that Ft. Wayne hotel clerks are not used to seeing people register, and the astute clerk at once suspected an elopement and started quite a little talk. The young people finished their shoping all unaware of the little riffle of excitement they had caused. Fort Wayne hotel clerks should be advised at once, that one of the conditions of modern society is, that people are expected to register when stopping at a hotel.

Davenport has a new kind of lead pencil that is bound to supersede all the others. It is a sort of self-sharpener or rather it don't have to be sharpened at all. The body is not of wood, but of paper, which is so wrapped around in spirals, that when the lead is worn short one can take a knife and start the next strip of paper loose, and by unwinding it the lead will again be exposed the proper length and your pencil is ready to use again. No sharpening with a knife, no pencil dirt on your fingers and very little delay needed. It is a great comfort, and a great time and labor saver.

Auburn is healthy of course, always has been and always will be compared with other points. And this fact is coming to be known. Listen to what the last Albion New Era says:—Isaiah Campbell has moved from Columbia City to Auburn where he hopes his wife will have better health.

From the Butler Record we learn that:—A. B. Steele, of Auburn, is opening up a first class restaurant in Frank Latson's room where he formerly held his barber shop. It will be the finest restaurant there has been in Butler for some time. C. J. and Dr. Nedry are well acquainted with Mr. Steele and assure us that he is a fine young man and worthy of the patronage of the better class of people.

Saturday's Daily.

Mrs. J. J. Bennegan was at Fort Wayne to-day.

Mrs. Fred Gfeller of Smithfield was in town yesterday on some business matters.

D. Swibart of Auburn Junction called on us to-day and advanced his subscription another year.

Arthur Stroh and wife at Feagler's Corners were presented with a boy yesterday instead of a valentine.

Mrs. James Griswold went up to Lansing, Mich., to day to see her daughter who is reported very sick.

The snow has made sleighing fairly good and our livery men have been making up for the recent muddy roads.

Perry Long has so far recovered from his recent fall, as to be able to work a little. He will, it is hoped soon be sound again.

Brown, Culbertson & Boland have in their show window a couple samples of aluminum stew pans. They are very light and would look well in anybody's kitchen.

If you could get a cent for the first days work from your new employer, and have that amount doubled every day (2 cents for the second day, 4 for the third, etc.) you would be receiving $5,000,000 per day at the end of the first month.

W. B. Brown and H. R. Culbertson have adopted a new idea to keep the cold out of their houses. They have put in "storm windows," that is an extra window made to fit in outside the regular window. This gives a double protection, making the glass double and they can notice a great improvement in comfort. There is no longer any cold wind coming in around the window sash and the disagreeable rattling when winds blow, is entirely avoided. It looks as if this plan would become popular.

We had the pleasure to-day of seeing a collection of hand painted china at the residence of Judge McClellan. It was the work of Mrs. Adele Siver, of Ft. Wayne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs McClellan. A dozen plates, a chocolate set and other odd pieces comprised the collection. The work is perfectly and exquisitely done. The plates being every one different, and yet the designs blending together as a whole, they are the gift of Mrs. Siver to her aunt Mrs. Joseph Myles, of Detroit. Mrs. Siver's work in this line is of a high order and commands good prices not only in Fort Wayne where she is known but other places as well.

An editor of long experience gets up to say that to run a newspaper without occasionally publishing an item that is untrue or gives offense, is like running a railroad without having smashups and accidents. It can't be done. No man in the world is so much imposed upon as the editor of a newspaper. Pushed with work continually, he must rely upon second and third parties for information as to the events that transpire. Frequently statements are received from reliable people, but which are subsequently discovered to be without foundation in fact. If you find yourself aggrieved by a statement in your paper do not "fly off the handle" but go to the editor and ask for a correction, and our word for it, if your case is just, you will be received like a gentleman and the correction made with pleasure. But, instead of doing this if you go around blowing about the editor being a liar, or threatening to whip him, it is ten to one he will hear of it and remember you sufficiently to take the hide off from you whenever he gets a chance.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

THE BEST

SPRING MEDICINE

is SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR—don't forget to take it. The Liver gets sluggish during the Winter, just like all nature, and the system becomes choked up by the accumulated waste, which brings on Malaria, Fever and Ague and Rheumatism. You want to wake up your Liver now, but be sure you take SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR to do it. It also regulates the Liver—keeps it properly at work, when your system will be free from poison and the whole body invigorated.

You get THE BEST BLOOD when your system is in A1 condition, and that will only be when the Liver is kept active. Try a Liver Remedy once and note the difference. But take only SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR—It is SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR which makes the difference. Take it in powder or in liquid already prepared, or make a tea of the powder; but take SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR. You'll find the RED Z on every package. Look for it.

Europe talks of war and keeps the peace, but the Turk talks of peace and goes on with his slaughtering.

General Weyler starts in without saying anything about crushing the rebellion in a few months. This looks bad for Cuba.

The rumor that England is going to buy Cuba is absurd on the face of it. England is not in the habit of buying things she hankers after.

The tribal yells of African cannibals do not contain the words "raw!—raw!—raw!" but otherwise they are fully as savage as the yells of American colleges.

It is a mistake to believe that all authors have inky fingers. Many of them use pencils and a few are even fortunate enough to be able to dictate to a typewriter.

England disclaims any inclination for war, but the way her poets continue to fire bad verse into us indicates a deep-seated determination to badger us into active hostilities.

Somebody has figured out that the egg crop of the United States is worth more in dollars and cents than the output of precious metals. Statistics of this sort are likely to make the hens cackle.

The London Times admits that "there is no particular sanctity in the Schomburgk line." That peripatetic botanist should have rested content with the discovery of the grandest flower in the world and kept out of international politics.

In the opinion of some of the London editors every movement in this country is a political dodge. It is true that the revolutionary war made one President and the battle of New Orleans another, but patriotic trigger-pulling had more to do with it than wire-pulling.

A New York man "89 years old, who has never used liquor or tobacco or spectacles, and who is six feet tall and in perfect health," has been committed to prison for vagrancy. Naturally a good man like that would be unable to find employment in New York.

It is evident that the Japanese are rapidly becoming Caucaslanized, so to speak. Not only have they adopted Western methods of business and warfare, but now they are founding a church whose creed "shall embody such truths as they consider agreeable to their taste in religion."

"It should not be forgotten," says the New York Commercial Advertiser, "that British warships with Krupp guns could demolish Brooklyn and New York from off Sandy Hook." Young men who are thinking of leaving the farm and going to the metropolis to seek their fortunes will do well to heed this.

If Lord Salisbury, having recovered from the stimulating effects of the recent banquet, retains the views to which he gave utterance at that festive board concerning the Monroe doctrine it may be possible for Uncle Sam to meet him half way in settling the Venezuelan troubles peaceably. The Monroe doctrine "as Monroe understood it" is substantially the Monroe doctrine as the people of the United States now understand it. Let it go at that.

No doubt the Sultan has made as great a concession as he dares in consenting to admit Miss Barton and other members of the Red Cross Society as individuals. In the present heated condition of Moslem fanaticism he might find it dangerous to give official recognition to a Christian society established on an international basis. The Red Cross has been recognized in heathen China and Japan, it is true, but both are essentially more civilized than Turkey.

There are six great powers in Europe: Russia, Germany, France, England, Italy, and Austria. The four eastern continents, Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia, and their attendant islands, barring Japan's, are apparently destined to be entirely theirs. At any rate, they want them. The field is large enough for si= ambitions almost as dazzling as the great Napoleon's craze to rule the world. The two continents of North and South America are for the people already there, preserved from further conquest.

If the New York lawyers who are prosecuting the suit for damages brought by the heirs of the Italian laborer Constantin Maro, killed in a blasting accident, can establish the facts which they allege they will establish a valid claim for reasonable compensation. Their statement is that this poor Italian immigrant, earning $1.50 a day, put aside 25 cents a day for his own scanty food and sent $300 a year to Italy to support his mother, three sisters and a brother. There is no truer heroism than that of this poor day laborer. So long as such lives are lived by the plain common people—and they are not unfrequent—they furnish a firm support for faith in human nature and for confidence in the future of the human race.

Horses are not realizing the prices they did a year ago. The general demand seems to be good and on the mend, with a strong inquiry from European buyers. Competition from that source is fairly good though not as keen as when so many new buyers started in at about the same time a twelvemonth ago. The horses coming to market are largely of inferior quality. Dealers say it is harder and harder to pick up really desirable horses in the country. The lighter marketing of horses may be due to the more abundant and consequently cheaper feed this winter, which makes owners a little less willing to let go of well-bred young horses, especially at lower prices.

A paragraph which will appeal with much force to all men who go to the theaters is one in a recent number of Life, in which that journal remarks that it observes with consternation that the large hats are coming in again in the theaters. Life closes with these bitter remarks: "It is not too much to say that the height of the hat which a woman wears on her head in the theater is in inverse proportion to her breeding, and, as a rule, to her respectability. The women who wear the biggest and most offensive hats, and refuse to take them off, are commonly dames who, from disastrous personal experiences, have become hardened in indifference to public opinion."

In a recent number of a Cincinnati daily paper there is a long article intended as a leap-year guide for ladies. It contains portraits and full biographies of eligible bachelors living in Cincinnati. Minute financial details are given, and careful descriptions of the attractions, mental and physical, of the various gentlemen mentioned. While the unhappy bachelors upon whom the press has thus turned its calcium light may be a little disturbed, there can be no doubt that the list will be useful to the ladies. But how did the Cincinnati paper get at their bank accounts? The size of a man's "boodle" is something which it is rather difficult to discover. Frequently a pseudo-millionaire dies, and leaves a very moderate fortune. Then, again, a quiet man of unassuming demeanor, with shiny elbows to his coat, passes away and leaves a million or so. It is difficult to tell how much men are worth in a community like the United States. But the Cincinnati article is one of the kind that add to the gayety of nations. Why did not some of the dailies in other cities publish a list of eligible bachelors, with portraits and biographies? They are certainly prying and impertinent enough. They must have overlooked this way of beginning leap year.

The greatest aid to the Cuban cause is the totally impoverished condition of the Spanish treasury. The cost of the Cuban war has been estimated at $4,000,000 a month. The present debt of Spain amounts to 6,000,000,000 pesetas (about $1,200,000,000), which precludes the possibility of floating a further loan. In fact, the condition of the Spanish treasury is so bad that no government report of the national receipts and expenditures has been published since 1870. In times of peace the deficit has varied from 47,046,428 pesetas in 1882 to 122,450,636 pesetas in 1888. For these reasons the public accounts of the kingdom have not been approved by parliament since 1867. Such a burden of debt and the rapidity of its growth makes it a financial impossibility for Spain to borrow money to carry on her expensive war against the insurgents in Cuba. The present enormous rate of taxation in Spain also prevents raising the necessary funds from new levies on the people. The war cuts off practically all the revenues derived from the excessive taxation of the Cubans. There is no other country in Europe which is in so distressful a financial condition as Spain, and not one that is so likely to suffer in consequence of its poverty. Cuban independence seems well assured if the war can be continued by the insurgents for a year or two longer.

Two Kinds of Heroism.

No one is irretrievably lost in whom the sense of honor survives. A Paris paper recounts the case of a woman who had been arrested, convicted of some offense, and sentenced to imprisonment. A detective was taking her to the prefecture from Boulogne-sur-Seine, by steamer, when at the Concorde bridge a well-dressed man threw himself into the river and was drowning before their eyes.

The officer was a brave man and an excellent swimmer; it cost him a struggle to see a life lost which he might save, if he were free to act.

"If I were alone," he exclaimed, "I would save that man."

"Save him," said the woman. "I will wait for you at the pier."

The officer hesitated for an instant, and then plunged into the water. He had barely seized the drowning man when a boat struck him violently, and he lost his grip. He dived again, but vainly, and at last, quite exhausted, was pulled into a small boat, which itself narrowly escaped collision with a steamer.

The heroic officer was cheered by the crowd who had witnessed his bravery, and the body of the man he had striven to save was recovered later. But his was not the only honorable conduct shown, for on the pier the woman, true to her word, was waiting for the detective, and handed him his coat, in the pocket of which was the warrant upon which she had been arrested.

One is glad to learn that her honorable conduct will not go unappreciated. When it was reported to the chief of the department he immediately ordered the prisoner to be released in recognition of her humanity and honor.

Ancient Oak.

Among the interesting relics of Bishop Heudrix's life in China is a picture frame made of oak dug from beneath the foundations of the Chinese wall, where it is supposed to have lain since the year 214 B. C. Seward Tabor, who carved the frame, found the wood almost black and nearly as hard as iron. Not only is the frame an object of interest; the picture it surrounds is a novelty—a handsome photograph of Viceroy Li Hung Chang, with that distinguished statesman's autograph in native characters adown the border. The photograph was a present to the bishop from the viceroy. The frame was obtained in the rough from some British contractors who were blasting out piling under a section of the wall, preparatory to repairs of the masonry.

The Guest Chamber.

The Japanese believe in banishing from the bedroom everything which is not really necessary to that department. All things useful they make as decorative as possible; but for mere ornament's sake little or nothing is added, unless it be a vase containing flowers arranged in their own inimitable way, or something else equally simple.

Their custom will bear consideration by the housewives of our western world, for by this Japanese method the utmost neatness, simplicity and repose is possible. Add beauty and daintiness, and little else is left to be desired. Bedrooms so appointed may be easily kept in order and free from dust—that foe to comfort and health.—Womankind.

PILOT MEDIUM.

The Dead Stallion's Fame Perpetuated by 64 Racing Descendants.

Pilot Medium is dead. This potent sire of trotters breathed his last at Battle Creek, Mich., on the farm which he has made famous; cared for in his final hours by the man he has made rich. Greater sires have lived and died, but the annals of trotting history reveal few instances wherein fame has been acquired against such heavy odds as those encountered and overcome by this good son of Pilot Jr. and Jackey.

As a colt he met with a misfortune, which not only disfigured him for the time, but also made him useless for track purposes for life. At this time Walter Clark was a struggling young lawyer in the Michigan town, which is still his home. An ardent horseman and ambitious to become a breeder, he began casting about for a young stallion that combined the essentials of a successful sire and the necessary cheapness. Almost discouraged in his search he chanced upon the trotter, then a weanling on the farm of Alexander Davidson, of Williamsport, Pa.

"You don't want that one," advised the Pennsylvania breeder. "He's crippled, you see, and a regular scrub."

"I'll give you a hundred and seventy-five dollars for him," was the reply, and shortly after the proscribed youngster was limping about the pastures of Battle Creek.

Years went by, and finally the gray gelding Jack, by Pilot Medium, dam a little runt of a mare by Magna Charta, flashed into prominence, and Pilot Medium stock went up in the market.

Jack finally took a record of 2:11½, and was still a prominent trotter last season. It was through him that public attention was first attracted to his sire, but this boom was soon supplemented by the performances of Lady Bullion, 2:16¾; B. P. P., 2:09¾; Piletta, 2:11¾; Lee's Pilot, 2:12½; Pilot Boy, 2:13¼; Racine, 2:14; Lady Belle, 2:14¼; Medio, 2:14½, and many others—64 performers with records of 2:30 or better in all, and only five of them paced. He was valued at $100,000, and Mr. Clark, it is said, has refused an offer of $65,000 for him.

PILOT MEDIUM.

Wordsworth and Burns.

A friend writes us from England: We visited the simple tomb of William Wordsworth in Grasmere churchyard. The old church stood near it, among the ancient trees. The rapid Rotha passed the graves and the grand hills lifted their green domes in the cloudless sky.

We had ridden past the poet-tuned lakes of Windermere and Grasmere with memories of Coleridge, De Quincey, "Christopher North," Mrs. Hemans and Harriet Martineau, and had rested by Rydal Water in the shadows of Rydal Mount.

"Wordsworth," said one of our party, calling to mind the author of the "Excursion," "seems to be the soul of all these scenes. He made himself the ever-prevailing spirit of the English Lakes."

"Burns was his teacher," said another.

"How was that?" we asked.

There, under the grand trees lifting their solemn tops to the sun, our friend repeated a single verse from Wordsworth's poem on the death of Burns:

I mourned with thousands, but as one
More deeply grieved, for he was gone
Whose light I hailed when first it shone
And showed my youth
How verse may build a princely throne
On humble truth.

Philosophy and Strawberries.

The late Eugene Field, who wrote beautiful verses about childhood and domestic life, spent the greater part of his life in poverty—a fact which did not, however, weigh heavily upon him. He always spoke of his poverty as if it were a good and welcome thing.

An acquaintance, Mr. John D. Barry, tells a story of meeting Field once at a very well supplied table in a hospitable house where both were guests. Some delicious strawberries were passed around. They were out of season, and Field looked at them with admiration and paid his hostess a compliment about them, but declined to eat any.

"But, Mr. Field," the lady asked, "don't you like strawberries?"

"Oh, yes," he answered.

"Then why don't you eat some?"

"I'm afraid," said the poet, "that they'd spoil my taste for prunes!"

This remark indicates that he was a philosopher as well as a poet.

One of the Good-for-Nothings.

An exchange reports a colloquy between the father and mother of a lazy son, who had given up one position after another, and seemed to believe that working between meals was injurious to his health.

"So George is going to give up his place again, is he? What is the trouble this time?" asked the father.

"He complains that the hours are too long," the mother answered.

"H'n! I guess George would like to work from 12 to 1, with an hour for luncheon."

Nearly every man eats too much meat, which is responsible for one of his very worst habits.

GIFT OF A STATE HOUSE.

The National Government Is Generous to Washington State.

Perched on a bluff 120 feet high, overlooking the city of Olympia and the waters of Puget Sound, the new State of Washington is building a new capitol. The foundations are already complete. It will be all built of native stone, and will be surmounted by a dome which will be the only one of stone in the United States. For thirty miles as the traveler sails up the waters of Puget Sound, the towering dome will be visible. The winged victory perched on top of the dome will be 200 feet above the foundations of the building or 220 feet above the city of Olympia.

NEW CAPITOL BUILDING, STATE OF WASHINGTON.

When Washington was admitted as a State the United States Government presented it with 138,000 acres of public lands, the proceeds from the sale of which were to be used in building a capitol. Two years ago the State began issuing "warrants" for the land, a "warrant" being equivalent to a deed, and asked architects to present plans for the new capitol. There were 188 plans presented, and those sent by Ernest Flagg, of New York, were accepted. It was found that to raise money by warrants issued from time to time was slow work, but there was a doubt of the legality of disposing of the land to the amount of $1,000,000, the amount proposed to spend on the building, at one "fell swoop." The other day the Supreme Court decided that such a proceeding would be legal, and forthwith the warrants were issued and have sold readily.

The new building will be in renaissance style of architecture, and will be 300 feet long and 160 feet deep. The stone dome will be 80 feet in diameter. Around it will be 12 sitting statues. Over the main entrance will be three historic bronze groups. The center of the building will be occupied by the great rotunda under the stone dome, and by the Senate Chamber and House of Representatives.

The Senate and the House will be in the interior of the building, lighted from above and surrounded by the offices of the State officials. The quarries from which the stone for the building is being taken are not far from the site of the capitol. When it is finished the building will be a worthy gift from the United States to the State of Washington.

Caterpillars in Winter.

In early autumn, the tent caterpillar moth lays a cluster of 200 or 300 eggs in a circle around the twigs of apple and other trees, and covers them with a glue-like secretion that protects them until they hatch in the following spring. In the bright days of winter, while the branches are bare, these clusters can be easily seen, and should be removed and destroyed.

REVENGE, FLAGSHIP OF THE FLYING SQUADRON.

ENGLAND'S flying squadron is probably the most dangerous company of fighting boats afloat. It is readily admitted by authorities on naval matters in this country that our North Atlantic squadron could not stand up in a fight with the ships of this squadron. The Revenge, flag ship of the squadron, is a mighty boat of 14,150 tons. This tonnage is greater than any of the huge liners that traverse the Atlantic carrying passengers from New York to Europe, with only two exceptions. These are the Fuerst Bismarck and the Normannia, the former of 16,400 tons and the latter 16,000 tons gross. Those who have seen ships like the Paris, which is only 10,499 tons displacement, will be able to understand how very formidable indeed must be the armament of the Revenge. She is equipped with four sixty-seven ton guns, ten six-inch rapid firing guns and thirty-six smaller rapid firing guns. Her sides are eighteen inches thick, with well nigh impenetrable armor, and she sails with all this weight at 17¼ knots an hour.

EDUCATIONAL COLUMN

NOTES ABOUT SCHOOLS AND THEIR MANAGEMENT.

How a Great Amount of Annoyance May Be Prevented—The Schoolhouse as a Teacher—Country Schools Should Have Scrap Books.

Assigning Lessons.

A great amount of annoyance to both teacher and pupil may be prevented by using great care in the matter of assigning lessons. The work given to young pupils to prepare for recitation should be simply a reproduction of the work done by the class while the teacher was "assigning the lesson," or in other words, studying with her pupils. For more advanced pupils it should be memorizing that which they already understand, or working out problems which will put into operation the principles and rules already learned. "As the twig is bent the tree is inclined," is surely true in school life. A definition learned before it is understood may cause an almost permanent bend in the wrong direction.

I have seen a boy, who had been absent when the lesson was assigned to the class, told to commit to memory such and such things, and then censured because he did not remember the order of the words in the answer which meant nothing to him. Take, for example, the first definitions in the ordinary geography—Maury's Manual, for instance. Tell pupils to memorize them without any previous talk upon them, and see what a miserable result will follow, if you try to have them tell you what is meant by that which you have compelled some of them to learn, and also notice how few will have assigned, i. e., give you the word as it really is.

I do not forget that it is thought we are after and therefore thought should be the body; but, teachers, don't neglect to clothe it in the best raiment possible. It is quite right, in fact it is very desirable, to have the student give you the thought in his own words, but then I would have you impress upon him the idea that writers who have spent years of study upon the subject are better prepared to express the thought than any student can be, and, therefore, it is very desirable that they commit to memory the better expression prepared for them. Don't be discouraged if you find parents coming to you and trying to impress upon you that their children knew the definitions, only they could not "give it just as it was in the book." If you are sure that the pupil understands what he has to memorize, insist upon it. Every thought well expressed paves the way for the next and in recitations insist that the expression be well formed.

Are you assigning a lesson in spelling? That is merely memory work with the greater part of the class; but try to teach them to train the eyes as well as the mind. I found that having the words written by the pupil was a great help, and with poor spellers I have requested that they bring to the next recitation each word written five times. This I have found to be an excellent home task for the poor speller, as in this way he is compelled to give proper attention to the lesson, and in a few months I have always noticed a decided improvement. Remember, this applies only to the pupil who usually has a poor spelling lesson. Have him bring in the paper for two weeks, then try him for a time, and as soon as he shows signs of neglect in preparing renew the demand for written work. Say to him pleasantly: "Well, John, perhaps you cannot memorize, but you can write." He will see the justice, and that he may avoid writing, he will memorize.

In mathematics always be reasonably sure they can do the work assigned. Let them do addition one day more for task work, unless you are certain they can do subtraction. A few moments taken at the close of the school for giving one example similar to the work assigned will often help in home or task work. Don't assign heavy tasks, for by so doing you only multiply work for yourself.

Would space permit, I might mention many devices for making home task interesting, but each teacher can find plenty of her own, if she will occasionally assign herself the task.—Normal Instructor.

The Teacher's Personality.

The teacher with a winning, pleasant personality possesses a strong ally in her school work. Pupils are quick to perceive and appreciate a teacher's personal attractions. Refractory pupils succumb to the power of personal influence when compulsion fails.

A teacher's personality is a subtle combination of manner, speech, appearance—her individuality. I visited a school where a lady teacher of rare ability presided. Her power over the school was like witchery. Her boys adored her. She was a loving companion with the girls. The little children trusted her like a mother.

I made this teacher a study. I tried to find her great power. She was not pretty, but her countenance was lighted by a sweet, animated expression. She was not finely dressed, but her clothing was the perfection of neatness and taste. Her hair was always becomingly and prettily arranged; her manner was frank and friendly; her voice sympathetic. She was a living inspiration to her school. I heard a boy, one of her pupils, say, "I would rather have any other teacher whip me than to have a word of reproof from Miss S——."

During the noon hour she remained at her school as did most of her scholars, and she took this occasion to learn the inner lives of her pupils by mingling with them in friendly intercourse; by eating her dinner with them in the shade of a tree. By her hearty kindness she made all feel that she had a special regard for the welfare of each of them.

The teacher who does not value the importance of her personality sufficiently to be neat in dress can hardly hope to secure her pupils' respect. Whenever teachers appear in the school room with elbows out, with soiled dress fronts, buttons missing from her shoes, hair slovenly, etc., so that pupils make the teacher's untidiness a subject of common remark—then more than a hint should be given them.

With no one does an attractive manner and neat external appearance have greater power than with the teacher, for the children are much influenced by these things.—School Education.

Scrap-Book Making.

Few are the schools in rural districts that are supplied with any kind of reference books.

A very useful book can be compiled by teacher and pupils.

A scrap book can be bought for a small amount, or one made of cambric, with board covers, and the leaves filled with historical and geographical sketches, anecdotes and biographies of eminent men, notes on travel and descriptions of natural curiosities.

In my school was a large class of well advanced pupils who became much interested in gleaning from all classes of papers such extracts as were suitable. As the articles were brought, they were placed in envelopes properly labeled, and were pasted in the book when quite a collection was on hand.

An index neatly written on first page aids in finding the subject to be referred to.

All articles should be placed in their proper departments and blank pages should be left for future use, so that sketches and extracts brought in later can be put under their correct head.

Interesting facts about plants and animals, pictures and scenery and persons of note, all found a place in our "Encyclopedia."

Pupils will take more interest in this book of their own manufacture, and refer to it more than they would to a whole set of Encyclopedias.—The Public Schools.

A Superintendent's Note to Teachers.

Teachers: The following are some of the good points discussed at our last grade and general meetings. Let us see if we cannot establish at least as many in our meetings this week. Come thoroughly prepared in all of the work:

1. No one can consciously follow the direction of another and succeed.
2. That which best defines a man is not what he is, but what he is trying to become.
3. All "realities" must exist first as "idealities."
4. The teacher must "think" herself into a knowledge of the art and science of instruction.
5. Education is "conditioned" by the fact of self-consciousness.
6. Life is not the absence of wrongdoing—it is a noble effort.
7. Intellect is necessary to the highest moral actions.
8. The function of moral instruction is to clinch the good habits.—Geo. I. Miller, in Iowa Schools.

The Schoolhouse as a Teacher.

The school house teaches as effectually as the school teacher. There are some school rooms where it would be impossible for the most skillful art teacher to give lessons in preparation, color and tone, or for a sensible school mistress to talk about neatness, cleanliness and taste in the keeping and the furnishing of a house. I commend the school teacher who cares for atmospheres, impressions and tone quite as much as for text books, tasks and for accuracy in recitations. I ask you to help him when he tries to make his school room a place of neatness and brightness, with plants, flowers, pictures, statuettes, window and wall hangings, and whatever besides may give a child ideas of taste, of purity, of restfulness, and which will fill his soul with images and memories to go with him to the end of life, a source of inspiration and a guard against evil.—Bishop John H. Vincent, Topeka, Kan.

Remember

That good use of language comes,—
From much practice.
From knowing what one wishes to say or write.
From a desire to say it well.
From having an object in saying it.
From noting how good talkers say things.
From keeping the eyes open.
From keeping the mouth shut when there is nothing to say.

Educational Intelligence.

Dr. D. K. Pearsons, of Chicago, will forward $25,000 as the first installment of his gift to Mount Holyoke College. He offered to give $50,000, provided the alumnae would raise $150,000.

State Supt. Sabin, of Iowa, has divided the Committee on Rural Schools, of which he is chairman, appointed by the National Council of Education, into four sections with the following topics for study: Schools maintenance; supervision; supply of teachers; instruction and discipline. He has outlined a series of topics under each head, which promises a valuable study of this important subject.

A college of practical viticulture has been organized by some of the members of the State Viticultural Commission. The State Commission ended its existence at the close of the year, and the State University now assumes many of its duties. Attorney General Fitzgrald has decided that all the property of the commission must be turned over to the State University.

During the past year a new department has been added to the Haskell Institute, Lawrence, Kan., namely, the commercial department, making this one of the most complete institutions of its kind to be found anywhere. The establishment of this department and the increased attendance in the normal department, established a year before it, has brought to this institute a large number of advanced students.

The Northwest has another State institution in the form of the new Idaho State Normal School, located at Lewiston. The institution begins work on a solid basis. It not only has a splendid building, fully equipped with laboratories, libraries, spacious recitation halls and an auditorium with a seating capacity of 700 people, but it is fully endowed with 500,000 acres of timber land, all very valuable. The school was first opened with an enrollment of fifty-two.

Notwithstanding the fact that Chicago built eleven school houses last year and rents 213 rooms in private dwellings for school purposes, 11,000 or 12,000 children are deprived of school accommodations. The city superintendent of schools says that twenty buildings of average capacity are needed. These figures, however, do not cover the inadequacy of accommodation, for many thousands of children in the first grades attend school only part of the day, their places being taken by others for the second session. No doubt the number of children receiving partial instruction is greater even than those who do not attend school at all.

Bow-Shooting.

The bow died hard. Firelocks were introduced into England in 1446, and a quarter of a century later, when Edward IV. landed at Ravensburgh Castle, he had among his troops 300 Flemings armed with "hange gunnes." The fact is nevertheless indisputable that as late as the reign of Henry VIII. English faith in the long yew bow and the cloth-yard shaft displayed little sign of being shaken. The Guyenne expedition of 1512 was half composed of archers, and Flodden was a victory of the English towmen. Indeed, as late as 1631 the practice of archery was still occasionally enforced on train-bands, while early in this century there were actually Russian troops with this by no means ineffective weapon.

The Unknown World

Notwithstanding the rapid advance of exploration in various parts of the globe a recent estimate by a member of the Royal Geographical Society shows that no less than 20,000,000 square miles of the earth's surface yet remains unexplored. The largest unexplored area is in Africa, 6,500,000 square miles, but even North America contains 1,500,000 square miles of virgin territory. Some readers may be surprised to learn that there is three times as much land awaiting the foot of the pioneer in North America as in South America.

Waterproof Fabrics.

Washable fabrics can be made waterproof by the following recipe. Tweed and serge are also said to be rendered rainproof by the method: Take powdered alumn and sugar of lead, each one ounce, and stir into a gallon of rainwater. Let it stand some hours and when clear pour off the liquid. Immerse the fabric to be made rainproof for twenty-four hours, then nearly dry and press heavily with a warm iron. The cloth, it is claimed, will be uninjured in color and texture and will resist any rain the wearer is likely to be exposed to.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

IT'S A WARLIKE LAND

ISLAND OF CRETE AGAIN FIGHTING THE TURK.

The Little Territory Has Had a Stormy History Since It Passed Under the Moslem Yoke—Has a Rebellion Almost Every Year.

Key to the Ægean.

One of the interesting islands of the world is the Island of Crete or Candia, now in insurrection against Turkish rule. It is situated at the mouth of the Aegean Sea and embraces an area of 3,300 square miles. It has several excellent natural harbors, but owing to the Turkish system of letting everything go to ruin, they are almost choked up with sand. The towns of Crete, like other Ottoman towns, are not bad looking from a distance, for, from some strange freak of human nature, the Turks religiously whitewash every house and wall once or twice a year, so that a Turkish town looks as though built of marble. But that is as far as the Moslems ever go in the direction of public cleanliness, and on entrance into the narrow, dirty streets, filled with all manner of offal and refuse from the houses, with homeless and ownerless dogs sleeping everywhere in the street, all impressions of fairyland are instantly dissipated.

The Moslems and foreigners generally live in the cities and towns; the Greek Christians in the villages and country, and the latter are, as a matter of course, expected and compelled to bear the greatest part of the burden of taxation. It has always been so ever since the Turk came on the island, and it will continue to be so until the Turk has been expelled. But time has not accustomed the native Cretans to the yoke, and, indeed, every year they find it harder to bear, because every year the increasing poverty of the Ottoman Government and of its local officials makes the demand for money more merciless. There is, however, constant friction between the Cretans and their brutal masters, and hardly a twelvemonth passes without insurrections breaking out in one or another part of the island. Generally they are easily and quickly subdued, for the Porte keeps nearly 30,000 troops on the island, and every man is needed, too, in order to overawe the native population of 250,000. As soon as signs of rebellion appear in any quarter, an overwhelming force from the nearest garrison is marched to the scene, the insurrectionists, if caught, are put to death, and the district assessed a heavy fine, which means the confiscation of all property belonging to the Christian population. But the rebels are not always caught. Up in the mountains of the island there is a hardy tribe of hills men known as the Sphakiotes, who are to the rest of Crete what the Berbers are to Morocco or the mountaineers of Afghanistan are to the dwellers in Indian plains. They have never been subdued by the Turks, and after waging a war with them that lasted the greater part of two centuries, the Moslems finally contented themselves with building forts and block houses here and there at well-known roads from the mountains to the plains of Crete, in order measurably to repress the warlike descents of the Sphakiotes from their almost inaccessible hills. Centuries of warfare have developed an undying hatred between the Sphakiotes and the Turks, and any enemy of the oppressors is always welcome in the Sphakiote Mountains. The Cretan who, from any cause, is obliged to flee from the Turks is certain to find security in the mountain villages. He will not be given up. No matter what threats are denounced against those who harbor him, no matter what promises or rewards are held out to those who betray him, in the Sphakiote Mountains he is safe.

The Cretans have had a stormy history since the conquest of the island by the Turks. As already intimated, insurrections have been very numerous, but the last serious one, involving the population of the whole island, broke out in 1866. Like every other movement of the kind, it began in a protest against excessive taxation, and in a few days from its first appearance the whole island was in arms. Women and children were hurried off into the mountain caves, while the men organized themselves into bands and began a relentless warfare against the Turks. Large bodies of Turkish troops were dispatched to the island under the command of no less a leader than the celebrated Osmar Pasha, and from April to September a number of desperate battles were fought between the insurgents and the Turkish regulars. Sometimes the advantage remained with one, sometimes with the other side, but the Turks were signally beaten at every attempt to penetrate the mountains, and an armistice was declared pending the arrival of of the Grand Vizier, Ali Pasha, who proclaimed a general amnesty. But the insurgents did not want amnesty, they wanted independence, or, at the least, the right of self-government, and the war began again and raged until 1869, when it was closed by the intervention of the powers, the unfortunate Cretans gaining little but reputation of being desperate fighters.

In the seventeenth century another desperate struggle was waged and during the siege of the city of Candia 30,000 Christians and 70,000 Turks were killed.

A RATTLESNAKE DEN.

Home of Myriads of Reptiles Accidentally Discovered.

Rattlesnake Creek, a small stream that empties into the Wabash River from the north a few miles from Lockport, is one of the most beautiful and picturesque streams in Northern Indiana. One of the descendants of a pioneer settler in that region yesterday related the story that gave the name to this stream. Several miles up from the mouth of the creek, near where the two main branches which form the stream meet, lived Mort Ellis, about fifty years ago. The pioneer's cabin stood on the brow of a long hill, at the foot of which was a spring which supplied the family with water. In those early days rattlesnakes were quite numerous, and especially so in the Ellis neighborhood, and the father cautioned his four little girls to be very careful in their play lest they be bitten. One Sabbath afternoon, as the children were playing in the yard, one of the little girls, now Mrs. Alice Wilson, of Kokomo, suddenly broke through the ground and fell into an aperture up to her arms. Her cries soon brought out the family, and in drawing her from the cave three rattlesnakes were found hanging to her clothing. Down in the small cave could be seen many other poisonous reptiles. Although it was the Sabbath, and Mr. Ellis was a devout Quaker, yet he deemed the occasion one of moment, and he sent for several of his neighbors, and, with them, attacked the den of snakes, and when they got through with their work 521 dead rattlers were piled up in the yard. An examination disclosed the fact that the spring at the foot of the hill from which the family used water was connected by a passage to the snakes' den.—Indianapolis News.

The Workingman's Day.

Sunday is the workingman's day—a day for well-earned rest at home. At the recent English Church Congress the Sunday question was discussed, and the strongest advocate of its religious observance was a workingman. Says the New York Churchman:

With remarkable effect, he challenged those speakers who had advocated a modified observance of the Sunday to produce the workingman who would defend the modern inroads upon the keeping of the Sunday as a day of rest.

It is worthy of notice that as a rule the son of toil is in favor of the American Sunday. Even when he is not a church-goer, the steady and sober workingman finds his chief recreation in the peaceful pleasures of the home.

He does not seek the riotous beer-garden, he does not frequent the Sunday concert hall, nor does he care to break in upon his Sunday rest by the noise and turmoil of a railway ride. A careful investigation of the manner in which the workingman prefers to spend his Sunday will prove that such is the case.

Rapid Growing Fungus.

In "Recollections of a Happy Life," Miss North describes many of her young enthusiasms, and among others that of collecting and painting English fungi.

On one outing, she says, I came upon a fungus about the size of a large turkey's egg. Eager to see it develop, I took it up carefully and carried it home I put it under a tumbler on the window-sill of my bed-room, at night.

At daylight I was awakened by a horrible crash of splintering glass. Behold the tumbler had fallen to the floor and broken to bits. The fungus was standing five inches tall, having hatched itself free from its restraining egg-like shell, and in growing had raised the tumbler and tilted it sidewise until it fell over and to the floor.

The fungus had a horrible smell and soon a swarm of flies were hovering over it.

A Young Daughter of the Revolution

The youngest daughter of a revolutionary soldier, so far as known, was discovered at Lebanon, Conn., recently, and added to the membership of the Willimantic chapter of the Daughters of the Revolution. She is Mrs. Augusta Avery, and is only 56 years old. Her father was 74 years old at the time of her birth. He was doubtless one of the youngest soldiers in the war. There are only eight other daughters of revolutionary soldiers belonging to the order.

When two people love each other, they finally get to abusing each other for being such fools.

Very Awkward Indeed.

This is precisely the kind of mistake a man makes if he "turns out" on the wrong side of the road when a vehicle comes toward him. No less absurd is the error of the individual who takes drastic medicines to relieve his liver. That organ is on the right side, and the road to the relief is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a medicine also adapted to the relief of dyspepsia, constipation, kidney and rheumatic ailments and malaria.

Sea-Water for London.

A plan is about to be submitted to the British Parliament for supplying London with sea-water at the rate of 11,000,000 gallons a day. The water is to be pumped from the sea into a lofty reservoir at Lancing, on the coast of Sussex, whence it will flow down hill through pipes to Epsom and from Epsom will be distributed over London. It is to be used principally for baths, for watering the streets, and for flushing the sewers. The object is to promote the healthfulness of the great city.

RIPANS TABULES

Mr. Henry Senior, residing in Brooklyn, N. Y., is one of the few wood engravers who continue to do commercial work. His office in New York is in the same building with the counting room of the Ripans Chemical Co. Three or four years ago Mr. Senior was presented with a box of Ripans Tabules. These he took home. Ever since that day he has been a regular customer. His wife's mother is pronounced in the opinion that for gastric troubles, or for any irregularity proceeding from a disordered stomach, the Tabules are the best medicine to which her attention has ever been directed during all her long experience. His wife at one time astonished him by asserting that for a sore throat the Tabules were a remedy of amazing effectiveness. He understands this better now since he has learned from his physician that sore throat—like many other apparently local troubles, notably headache—is often a direct result of a disordered stomach; and for this Mr. Senior well knows that the Tabules are a specific.

Ripans Tabules are sold by druggists, or by mail if the price (50 cents a box) is sent to The Ripans Chemical Company, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York. Sample vial, 10 cents.

Another Fatal Accident.

William Davis was Instantly Killed at Columbia City Yesterday.

Thursday's Daily.

Cook Fred informed us of the horrible death of Mr. Davis at Columbia City yesterday, but it was so late last night that the Courier had already gone to press. From the Columbia City Post we clip the following:

A little before one o'clock this afternoon another accident occurred in the Wabash yards in this city that adds another sad story to that unfortunate place.

William Davis, whose home is on the corner of Chicago and Indiana streets on the south side, had just bade his little family, comprised of a wife and two children, a boy and a girl, good-bye and had left them to go to his afternoon's work in Peabody's saw mill. The time to commence work was near at hand, and he was hastening up the Wabash track, full of anxiety to go to work. He did not seem to notice the engine that was busy at work in the yard; perhaps his mind was on his work to be done this afternoon or may be he was thinking of the little family from which he had just parted.

He had just reached the Ellsworth street crossing east of the Wabash depot when Conductor Bradley first noticed him; he was in the center of the main track walking toward the east. The engine and tender belonging to the west-bound freight No. 71 was on the same track backing up rapidly toward him. The bell was ringing and the engine was puffing, but for some reason he did not seem to be aware of its approach; perhaps it was on account of the east wind that blew the sound from him.

As soon as the conductor noticed his indifference as to his danger, he called for him and then motioned for him to get out of the way. At first the doomed man did not seem to understand what the conductor wanted and when he did comprehend returned to see what was the matter, but it was too late. The tender was almost upon him and as he jumped the iron horse struck him on the head and shoulder knocking him down and running over both limbs. The injuries were so serious that he only lived a few minutes.

The body was carried to the depot, and the little son of the unfortunate man, who had heard that his father was hurt, came up to the cot and looked at the dying face long enough to see that it was his father, and after inquiring "is he hurt very bad?" returned and ran for her, who is always willing to share her children's sorrows, but who now has more than she can bear of her own.

The corpse was taken into the freight house until the coroner came and then it was silently carried by strong men whose hearts had been set to aching by the sadness of the occasion, to the home that only a short time before had known no sorrow.

Mr. Davis had been in the employ of S. J. Peabody for the past ten years and was one of the most competent and reliable men he had working for him. He was at present filling the position of setter in the circle mill, but was soon to be promoted to head sawyer. He was a man about 35 years of age, of good habits and industrious.

Indiana Ahead.

There are more, and better reform laws on our statute books, than in any other state. These include the most perfect and desirable modification of the Australian Ballot law found anywhere. With this goes the election bribery law, which is also the best of its kind. Both laws are the foundation of the same laws in several other states, though the states that have modified them have not improved them. Indiana has the best school system of any state in the Union, and it has shown the most marked effect for good.

We have the best school text book law in the Union, a law by which excellent books are obtained at lower prices than in any other state. And there is no having to buy a new set of books every time a family changes residence, for they are the same all over the state.

We have the best laws for the management and supervision of the various charitable institutions of the state, and fewer scandals and abuses connected therewith. And our newer buildings for these purposes are models of their kind from which other states are taking their plans. Indiana has in many respects, the best tax laws, for when they are carried out to the fullness of their intention they tax the rich and the poor alike, and do what few other states ever tried to, do tax corporations; and if corporations escape their full share of the burdens, it is because they have successfully managed to fight some technical point in the courts. We have the best laws for the protection of labor of all kinds and especially for the protection from imposition and oppression of the miners who work in the state. Their wages are secured to them, and honest weights given them. The "pluck me" stores are under control. Cities have the best system of charters. In her improvements in town and country in factory and farms, her intelligent laws and intelligent people are abreast of the leading states, to say the least. But good laws are the foundation of all our successes.

And all the the above laws were the work of democratic legislatures.

The World's Fair Trials showed no baking powder so pure or so great in leavening power as the Royal.

Death of Elizabeth Essig.

Elizabeth J. Duncan was born Aug. 29 1829, and died at her late home in Jackson township, Feb. 7, 1896, at the age of 67 years 5 months and 8 days. The deceased was born in Ashland county, O., where she lived with her parents until she reached womanhood. In the spring of 1847 she was united in marriage to John Duncan. To this union was born one child, Mrs J. K. Stafford, of Auburn. After the death of her husband, who lived but a short time, she removed with her parents to Auburn. In Oct 1851 she was united in marriage to William A. Essig who departed this life Aug. 19. 1877. To this union were born seven children, six of whom survive her. In early life she united with the M. E. church. After coming to this county she united with the Lutheran church at Jackson Center and remained a member as long as there was a church at that place. In the year 1877 she united with the Methodist Protestant church at Bear Creek, now Rehoboth, where she remained a faithful and consistent member until her death. She had long been a sufferer from that dreadful disease, rheumatism. Her suffering was continuous and exceedingly painful. She often expressed a desire to depart and be at rest. She died in the triumphs of the christian faith and is now in the enjoyment of that rest for which she longed. The funeral was conducted at the family residence in Jackson township, by Rev. W. W. Lingenberry, of St. Joe, and her remains laid away in the cemetery at Auburn.

A Reminder.

Columbia City Commercial:—It will be remembered that about a year ago three Auburn men by the name of Resh, Brown and Harris were shot and killed by tramps in a box car on the B. & O. Mr. Harris received seven or eight bullets in his body and lived a number of days. Frank Harris, employed at Harper Buggy Co's, works and a brother of of the deceased, informs us that little investigation followed the awful crime. One of the revolvers that was taken from one of the victims was found on a farm. It seems that the terrible crime will never be atoned under the direction of the laws of man. The widow of the slowly murdered Harris now resides on North Main street in this city, she having removed here from Auburn about six months ago.

The morning after the crime was committed the dead bodies of Resh and Brown and the bullet-ridd'ed, but still living Harris, were removed from the car at Fostoria, where citizens gave every attention. The bodies of the three men were buried at Auburn.

Divide on Silver.

It seems strange what small matters will cause divisions in a political party. Once it was greenbacks, now it is silver. We have often called attention to the small value of the silver question as a party issue, and have referred to the fact that no matter which party gets into power, we shall have and continue to use a reasonable amount of silver. And no matter which party, even if the populists control the government our national obligations will all be paid in gold and all our foreign dealings will be in gold or on a gold basis. Anyone who asserts otherwise asserts a thing that no one can prove, for even silver countries like Mexico pay their foreign bonds and do their foreign business with gold, or on a gold basis. Now we have in congress the spectacle of a number of Senators who have silver investments or other interests who have signed a contract binding each other to desert the republican party, unless a satisfactory silver plank is put into the republican national platform at the coming St Louis convention. And in the meantime they will not support any protective tariff measure, unless they are assured that free silver measures will be supported by the rest of the republican members and by the platform. These republican senators, who have signed this compact are:

H. M. Teller, Colorado.
Edward O. Wolcott, Colorado.
Lee Mantle, Montana.
T. H. Carter, Montana.
George L. Shoup, Idaho.
F. T. Dubois, Idaho.
Frank J. Cannon, Utah.
Arthur Brown, Utah.
Francis E. Warren, Wyoming.
C. D. Clark, Wyoming.
J. C. Pritchard, North Carolina.
John H. Mitchell, Oregon.
R. F. Pettigrew, South Dakota.
H. C. Hansbrough, North Dakota.
George C. Perkins, California.
J. D. Cameron, Pennsylvania.

A Just Sentence.

The filthy Chicago Dispatch which has been for about three years filling its columns with filthy and obscene matter, and thereby polluting the homes and degrading the morals of Chicago, has been called to account for its misdeeds by a case in the U. S. courts. It was charged with sending through the mails, obscene matter, and its editor and publisher, J. R. Dunlop was fined $2,000 and sentenced to the penitentiary for two years. The judge, in passing sentence on him, gave him a good lecture on the corrupting and degrading influences of a paper that would for money, pander to the most depraved tastes of the worst classes in society. He said such a paper had no more right to be carried in the mails than the germs of yellow fever. This should be a warning to a few other indecent and degraded papers, that are still being carried in the public mails.

James Lewis called on us yesterday and looked over the World's Atlas we are agents for and immediately purchased one. This is the best atlas for the money ever before offered in DeKalb county.

LA GRIPPE REMEDY

For Years in the Region of Not Cured.

This country contains a large multitude of men and women who are debilitated and weak as the effect of la grippe. If every one would do as the Rev. Perry, of Vic, did this vast multitude of sufferers would soon be well and strong again. He writes:

Last winter I had a very bad case of grippe which left me enfeebled and liable to cold at the slightest exposure. I tried a number of remedies, but they afforded only temporary relief. I saw an advertisement of Peruna and concluded to try it. I have been using it for two months, and it has afforded me much relief. It is indeed a panacea to me. It has invigorated me more than anything I ever tried. I have recommended it to others and advised them to send for your pamphlets. I have written of it to distant friends. You can use this statement in any way you choose.

Rev. H. Perry, Baptist, Dry Fork, Va.

For further particulars and a multitude of witnesses write to The Peruna Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, Ohio, for a free copy of their treatise on la grippe. Peruna is also a sure cure for catarrh, cough, colds, bronchitis, first stage of consumption, and all climatic diseases of winter.

The Regulators

A couple of months ago, the COURIER published some items in regard to the old regulators and the time in which they were organized, noting among other things, that it would not be a bad idea if a meeting of that famous body could be arranged. Since then the matter has been taken up and discussed all over this section, but no definite action has as far been taken. The other day, James McClellan, one of the few survivors here, received a letter from J. G. Thomas at Cromwell in Noble county stating that the organization of which Lee is secretary, would attend at any time and place when such a meeting would be held. Mr. Thomas belongs to a newer organization, "The Sparta Township Detective Association," a strong organization numbering at present about seventy members. His organization is all right and like some we have had lately in DeKalb has good purposes in view. But what Mr. McClellan and the old "Regulators of '57" desire is to meet the survivors of that old organization. Of course the newer organizations would be made welcome also. Such a meeting will undoubtedly be held, unless they put it off too long. Already the members are passing away. One week ago yesterday Dr. Chamberlain was laid to rest. In this place, Mr. McClellan, Alphens Wheelock, Uncle Geo Wagner, and perhaps one or two others, that we cannot now recall, are all that are left, of the men whose firm stand for law and order, put an effectual stop to the operation of a gang of criminals that had become a terror and menace to all the law abiding people of this section.

Postal Ideas.

A trial is likely to be made of consolidating the postoffices of a given locality into one central office, with the smaller offices as "sub stations" for the larger. For example: Auburn could be made the central office in this county, and the smaller offices would be known as "Station A." "Station B." etc, each being run by a man acting as clerk for the central postmaster, and selected to the place by him. It would certainly be a change, but whether for the better or not, only a fair trial could show.

Another change has been in operation nearly a year. It is a plan for changing the mails on ships while in motion so there shall be no delay caused by making the vessel stop and wait to have the mails transferred. The trial has been going on in the Detroit river at Detroit. In this great river, or strait, there is more commerce of all kinds than in any other straight or river in the world. More vessels, pass through than even at famous straits of Gibraltar. And this great point has been chosen to test the new plan. A steam boat, called a "mail boat" is kept in the middle of the channel and when a passenger steamer or other vessel carrying mails between points on the Lakes comes along, either way, the mail boat sends out a small boat which is at once hitched to the large vessel and while so attached takes off the mails required from large vessel and puts other mails on board. Then the small boat is cast loose and returns to the mail boat, which in turn sends the mails just taken, to the shore, or to other vessels. The large vessel has gone on her way without stopping. It is said to help get mails to their destination much more rapidly.

This is probably the highest price ever asked for a single book. When last sold in 1884, this copy brought $24,750. No other copy has appeared in the market for almost a hundred years. It is rarer than the Mazarine Bible, the first book ever printed.

Defenders' Day.

The Exercises at the Armory well Attended Last Night.

Thursday's Daily.

Quite a large number of Auburn people assembled in the Armory last night to listen to the Defenders' Day exercises. The evening's entertainment was solely under the management of the S. of V. The meeting was presided over by Captain J. L. Marvin, and the program was carried out as published in the DAILY COURIER. The cornet solo by Frank Fanning was loudly applauded and he and Milo Calkin responded to the encore by playing a cornet duet. The address by Judge Pontefield was delivered in his usual scholarly manner, though somewhat long. Joseph Grover recited one of Whittier's poems, which was a surprise to his many friends as he had but few times appeared before the public. Several selections were also rendered by the quartette.

Fitzgerald.

The Boom City Not Such an Eden After All.

The new G. A. R. town is not such a land of promise as had been hoped for. Those who have been there and come back, do not give the place or the country a very flattering description. Will Thomas has just returned, and brings a pretty full account of the place and its prospects. He says a man who goes there to stay should have some money and then when he gets a start he may perhaps, do all right. But for those who go there with little or no money, it is a poor place. Labor is too plenty already and too cheap. Laboring men get from 75 cents to a dollar a day, and the most of them cannot get work at that. Mr. Thomas, was not only at Fitzgerald, but went to other parts of the south and finally took a boat up to Baltimore, and then to Washington and home. Mr. Shoemaker and his son both returned. Art Cool and Mr. Thomas went away together and both came back at the same time. The new city has a floating population of many thousands, but there is not much of a city yet as far as buildings are concerned. Tents, and "shacks" made of upright boards, are the common thing to live in, the mild climate making such dwellings possible in winter. But every few years a cold streak sweeps down that way, and if that should suddenly happen, there would be great suffering. By the kindness of Mr. Thomas, we have a copy of the Macon Telegraph in which is a description and illustrations of the new city. It shows well on a plat or city map, but the illustrations, make a showing of tents, shacks, bushes and waste ground, that will not be very enticing to the northern man, who is used to fine grounds, neatly kept, lawns, cosy homes and fine business blocks. It will pay our homeseekers to put a little "scrip" into the purse when going to locate in a boom town anywhere.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her, and she says it saved her life. Mr Thomas Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption. He tried without result, everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottles at Robbins & McCord's drugstore. Regular size 50c. and $1. 5

Heart Disease Cured

By Dr. Miles' Heart Cure.

Fainting, Weak or Hungry Spells, Irregular or Intermittent Pulse, Fluttering or Palpitation, Choking Sensation, Shortness of Breath, Swelling of Feet and Ankles, are symptoms of a diseased or Weak Heart.

MRS. N. C. MILLER.

Of Fort Wayne, Ind., writes on Nov. 29, 1894: "I was afflicted for forty years with heart trouble and suffered untold agony. I had weak, hungry spells, and my heart would palpitate so hard, the pain would be so acute and torturing, that I became so weak and nervous I could not sleep. I was treated by several physicians without relief and gave up ever being well again. About two years ago I commenced using Dr. Miles' Remedies. One bottle of the Heart Cure stopped all heart troubles and the Restorative Nervine did the rest, and now I sleep soundly and attend to my household and social duties without any trouble."

Simon S Hartman, of Tunnelton, West Va., has been subject to attacks of colic, about once a year, and would have to call a doctor and then suffer for about twelve hours as much as some do when they die. He was taken recently just the same as at other times, and concluded to try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says: "I took one dose of it and it gave me relief in five minutes. That is more than any thing else has ever done for me. For sale by F. E. Davenport. 9.

Snow Bound.

Lake Shore Passengers Shiver in the Thursday's Daily.

Snow Drifts for 16 Hours.

The Jackson Branch of the Lake Shore road had one of the old-time winter experiences yesterday and last night The trains were snow bound north of Waterloo from about 2:30 yesterday afternoon till 6:30 this morning, in all sixteen hours. The DAILY of yesterday spoke of the terrible condition of the engineer and fireman in the cab of the north bound noon train. But it seems they got through all right. But the next train going south, the one that reaches Auburn at 3:10 p. m. got stuck in the accumulating drift at the cut near Summit, or rather near the Shoemaker homestead. The snow had drifted as it often does into this cut, and was so solid, the engine could not cut through it, and to make matters worse, the south bound way freight that always follows it up, came in behind it, and soon both trains were stalled. Then soon after, some of the pipes or valves on the passenger engine failed to work and there they were. They found also a difficulty in getting telegraph line to work, but finally got a dispatch to Jackson, calling for the snow plow to come and help. But the snow plow train got stalled a time or two and did not reach the snow bound train till 11:30 at night. Then it first got out the freight engine and hauled it back to Summit and putting it on the sidetrack, returned to assist the passenger train. Thus they finally got back to Pleasant Lake, where the engine was given a new stock of water, but still it would not work, and did not get through till another engine brought it through this morning reaching here at 7:30 a. m. today instead of 3:10 yesterday. The experience of the passengers was a very disagreeable one, and there was some suffering of course. They tried to keep warm and amuse themselves, but as the fuel gave out and one stove after another grew cold, they would move to another car. Finally all fires on the passenger train were out, and the one lady passenger was assisted to get to the rear of the freight train, where the caboose still had a good fire. The passenger train was soon deserted, Several of the men plunged off into the snow and managed to get into open ground and went to the Shoemaker homestead and were made comfortable till morning, when they managed to get to Waterloo. Other passengers started from the train and walked down the track several miles to Waterloo, and there found many people who had expected to go north on the same train, which should have gone down to Ft. Wayne and returned, passing through Auburn north, at 5:30 They filled the depot and Lock Hotel and those who could not get beds staid up all night and amused themselves by playing cards, or in any such way they could. Of course this forenoon they began to get trains to go to their several destinations.

The cut near Shoemakers has always been a bad one about drifting full of snow, especially in a severe west wind They ground for miles west is open, and as it rises just as it nears the track, the snow is dumped in there and packs hard, Several years ago, a high, board fence was built along the west side of this cut, for a wind break, and this helped a great deal, But we presume it has been allowed to go down, lately, as we have had fewer heavy snows that formerly.

Since writing the above, we met J. C. Henry of this place, who was on the south bound train, and says. The freight train did not follow closely, for it too was away behind time but on reaching Summit, it left its own train on the sidetrack, and the engine came on to help the passenger. It took two hours hard work plunging into drifts, to get from Summit to the spot where the passengers train was, which they reached about dark, Both engines tried to start the passenger train, but could get it but three or four feet Then they uncoupled the forward engine, and try to break through. It broke the drifts for eight or ten rods, but could get no further. Then from some cause not understood, they the engine was sent back full force and struck the baggage car, breaking of the steps, breaking the draw bar of the engine, and also a steam or water pipe. The coaches were forced back onto the pilot of the freight engine, and passengers were thrown over and hurled about generally. These injuries to the engine, were what prevented its working after.

J. C. Henry, Milo Calkin, Joe Hight a well known traveling man, and two other runners, at about 10:30 concluded to leave the train and get to Shoemaker's. They reached there after a hard walk, and wakened Mr. Shoemaker, who welcomed them, and when they were warmed up, Mrs. Shoemaker had them a fine supper ready, which the hungry travelers said was finer than any banquet they ever enjoyed. Then they had comfortable beds, and when morning came, were detained till they had a splendid breakfast and Mr. Shoemaker even offered to hitch up and take them to Waterloo But they would not hear to his doing more. And they wish through the DAILY to thank their host and hostess for the hospitality and kindness shown them at so much trouble and inconvenience to themselves.

ROYAL Baking Powder.
Highest of all in leavening strength.—U. S. Government Report

WATERLOO

The Press comes out as usual this week, being its second issue since the fire. The Press has not failed an issue since it began, which was about thirty-seven years ago. It gives very interesting notes of the victims of the fire and how they are getting along. Boyer and Less have a bran new stock and are in the DeKalb Bank building ready to wait on all their customers. They have organized a "Promoting Association," to help secure united action in rebuilding. Volunteers will be called for to help clear away the ruins; the Waterloo ladies will prepare dinners for all who help. R. M. Lockhart has devoted much time and effort to secure help for the sufferers. Hartwick, the artist reports that he has saved the greater part of his finished work and is ready to deliver it. The burnt block is likely to be all rebuilt soon. It is possible that the parties may unite and build all at the same time so as to save money. Wareham and Hoover, the two barbers, have united into one firm and located over Grunter Brothers' grocery. Rehfield is getting on a new stock of goods. The Press has been so encouraged by its patrons that it will probably get new material and go ahead. The town cannot afford to let the Press die.

Sient Traveler

Robert Kinnard, a Ft. Wayne man is taking a traveler around the world going along to see that he does not talk They have reached Litchfield, Ill, as the following from the Monitor of that place shows: Geo. J. Mold, the silent circumnavigator of the globe, arrived in the city Tuesday evening, with his representative, R. F. Kinnard, and on Wednesday was on exhibition at the Litchfield hotel Hundreds of visitors thronged the hotel all day to see and converse with him. Mr. Mold entered into one of the most unique contracts at Wichita, Kansas, on December 13, 1895. that was ever made by any man on earth. Here are the conditions of his contract. For a wager of $10,000 offered by Cash Henderson, a merchant of Wichita, Mr. Mold was to start from Wichita, Kansas, on Jan., 1, 1900. The conditions are as follows:

First—To start penniless, and return to Wichita, Kansas, the starting point, before the expiration of four years, with $20,000 or its equivalent.

Second—To be costumed as a clown and to carry a ventriloquial figure during the entire trip.

Third—Not to speak during the entire trip, except to and through the ventriloquial figure.

Fourth—Expenses of the trip to be made by distributing advertising matter or samples of any description.

Fifth—Party of the first part is to furnish party of the second part with a bulletin daily, giving his whereabouts and financial condition.

Sixth—This contract to be null and void if any part of it should be violated by said party of the first part.

Seventh—It is also agreed that Robert F. Kinnard shall accompany party of the first part to assist him in his labors and also to see that all the conditions of this contract are strictly adhered to.

Parliament.

The English Parliament is again in session in London, and there is a very hot time over the Venezuela boundary matter. Their government, and particularly Salisbury, the head of it, is greatly blamed for not allowing the dispute to be settled by arbitration. President Cleveland, on the other hand, is commended for the manly course he has taken. One speaker asserted that the United States had been for a year or two asking to have England and Venezuela settle their boundary dispute and not go to war. One speaker admitted, that since 1841, Great Britain had shifted the boundary line no less than seven times, and was still not satisfied. Another said that Salisbury wanted a year in evasion and shuffling and then sent Cleveland an insulting dispatch in answer to a reasonable request. It ought to be known in America, that the English people do not uphold Salisbury. There seems to be a large number of members who are making a fight to show that the United States and Venezuela are right in the controversy and that England is wrong.

She Would be a Beauty if her face wasn't covered with pimples and blotches. How often we hear this expression. 'Tis a pity this beauty with an "if" did not go to Robbins & McCord's drug store and get a trial (50c.) bottle of Foley's Sarsaparilla, which would soon clear her complexion. 6-9

TO THE SUFFERERS OF RHEUMATISM

After using Groff's Rheumatic Cure for some time in my practice I take great pleasure in saying that it is a most wonderful remedy for Rheumatism; in fact it is the only one I have found for the cure of this disease in all its various forms. Dr. E. E. Tull, Chicago.

AGREEABLE TO THE TASTE.

And mild and sure in its action. These are the great merits of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the great family stomach remedy. Consumption cured; indigestion and dyspepsia give way, and life again seems worth living. In 10c,50, and $1, sizes, at F. E. Davenport's.

U. S. Cannon.

Wednesday's Daily.

Forty piece of heavy artillery went though Auburn Junction yesterday over the B. & O. It took several flat cars to carry them. They were large guns about sixty-four pounders, being about ten feet long, and twelve to fifteen inches in diameter at the breech. We did not learn the object of such a wholesale change in the location of "Uncle Sam's Dogs of War."

One Vote Again.

The COURIER has at different times for several years past, had articles about the power of one vote, and especially alluded to the one vote that old Mr. Snoemaker cast in this county, which gave a majority of one for our member of the legislature, and in the legislature a U. S senator was elected by a majority of one' our member having voted for him, and then came up from over the state, remarks about the war with Mexico, which it is claimed was brought about by a majority of one in the U. S. senate, etc. Now this subject comes up again in another form, on the death of Dr. David D. McClure at Jeffersonville, this state. Mr. McClure was elected to the legislature by one majority. His opponent was a warm personal friend of Gen. Harrison who was a candidate for senator, but owing to Dr. McClure's being a member, Harrison was defeated. It is but one of the many instances of the value of a single vote.

Lulu and Flossy

DeKalb County Can Produce Anything Known the World.

There is no question but what DeKalb county is in possession of all known curiosities. She has always proven herself able to produce anything known to the world. Much has been said of the large people; many have seen "Big Eliza." She was not however, a product of old DeKalb but we have two young ladies, who were born near Corunna, who are only 14 and 16 years of age, now. When born they weighed 6 and 6½ pounds, but now one wheighs 385 and the other 450, and they are still growing. Their names are Lulu and Flossy Slippy. They each measure 53 inches waist measure and can perform prodigious feats of strength. They are not high up but wide out. These young ladies are now, we believe, up in Michigan and commanding plenty of money by way of admission to look upon their "greatness." They were also on exhibition in Chicago when they were but 8 and 9 years old. In conversation with one of our citizens who is well acquainted with the family he informs us, that they are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. George Slippy. Mrs. Slippy is a daughter of Mrs. Burk and a sister of Mrs. H. A. Lesh and Mrs. Chas. Spake all of Auburn.

Weston Again

Many of the older citizens of Waterloo, Butler, Kendallville and Ligonier, will remember Weston, the famous walker, for on the trip named before, he was trying to make 100 miles in twenty-four hours, starting at 12 midnight at Wauseon, we believe, and getting to South Bend, if we are not mistaken at 12 the next midnight. He failed to make it, but it was still a great walk. The trouble was, the roads were soft and very deep with mud. If he had had good roads, he would have accomplished it probably, Everybody turned out to see him, for the word came all along the line, that the wiry little English walker would be along at a certain time at each point But he was everywhere behind. He should have been at Ligonier about six a. m. and a special breakfast was waiting for him at that hour. But it was nearly nine when he came in sight of the waiting crowds. Then it could be easily seen that he was getting worn and tired, trudging through the mud from midnight without a stop. He looked fagged and was as cross a bear with a sore head. He gave no one a civil word, growled about his food, was sharp with his attendants, and when he had rested about an hour, started off on the way to Goshen, surly and silent. But he walked, even when he came in, with a long, swinging stride that was hard to keep up with, and even the team that accompanied him on the long journey was tired and fagged. But when he started off for Goshen a crowd of enthusiastic men and boys started with him and went some distance, a few of them going clear to Goshen, at which point two or three had got ahead of the great walkist. Of those who started with him, some went two miles, but soon gave out and fell by the wayside, even those who reached Goshen, did not care to go further. The interest in Weston soon died out and though it was revived at long intervals, he soon ceased to be heard of. And especially since bicycles have enabled men to cover the 100 miles easily in one third the time, the walking feats have seemed rather slow. Now, again, however, Weston, once more looms up for a brief season. The Kendallville Sun says, Weston now 65, is going to walk from New York to San Francisco and back, starting in April.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have uninterrupted rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

DOINGS OF THE DAY.

SUMMARY OF THE NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Eventful Happenings in Every Known Hemisphere—Fires, Accidents, Crimes, Politics, Religion, Commerce and Crops, Sandwiched with Minor Affairs.

Death of Bill Nye.

A special from Asheville, N. C., says: Bill Nye is dead. For ten days he had been wrestling with the grim monster but the best medical talent in the land saw that it was a question of only a few hours before the loved humorist, who had made millions of hearts glad by his speeches and writings, would be no more. Ten days ago a stroke of apoplexy laid him low. He was at his home, Buck Shoals, twelve miles east of here. He sank constantly until the summons came Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock. His daughters, who were at school in Washington, arrived in time to attend their father in his last hours. Overwork was the cause of the humorist's death. He literally worked himself to death. For two years he labored with Tigerish zeal, writing letters for the syndicate by which he was regularly employed, writing books and plays and lecturing. The work was enough to kill a far stronger man.

Aged Couple Cremated.

Peter Angle and wife, an aged couple living near Beverly, Ohio, were burned to death recently. Mr. Angle has been sick for several days and his son sat up with him until 3:30 Monday morning. He then went to his home, returning at 5:30 to see how his father was getting along and to help get breakfast. When he came in sight of his parents' home he was shocked to find it in flames and almost consumed. When the burning timbers could be removed the charred bodies of the old people were found. That of Mrs. Angle was lying near the fireplace while Mr. Angle's was near the door. As Mrs. Angle was blind it was supposed that she was standing too near the grate and her clothing caught fire burning her to death and setting fire to the house.

It is evident from the position of Mr. Angle's body that he made a desperate attempt to escape, but was overcome by the smoke or flames before he could get the door open.

Snow Prevents a Flag Being Seen.

A wreck occurred on the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic Railroad, nine miles east of Houghton, Mich. A freight train was unable to reach the siding at Chassel, where it was to be passed by a passenger train, which was over an hour late. The passenger engine crashed into the rear of the freight caboose at Sturgeon River, the caboose was telescoped, and caught fire from the stove. Brakeman Jerry Donohue was perhaps fatally burned, and Conductor Horace Fee was badly injured. The engineer and fireman of the passenger train escaped by jumping. A flagman sent back by the freight crew could not be seen by the passenger engineer on account of the snowstorm.

For Science's Sake.

Prof. S. H. Burnham, the Chicago astronomer, says that he would like to see Perrine's comet strike the earth next month "for the scientific knowledge such a collision would impart." The Professor said: "We have no exact data on such matters, and science would be much benefited by a collision."

"Then you do not think that any harm would follow an impact with a comet?"

"I do not say that. But, as I stated, a collision would benefit scientific knowledge. Still, that may not be a very pleasant consolation to the public."

Shot His Cousin and Himself.

Daniel Ressler, of Cramer, Pa., shot and fatally wounded his cousin, Ella Ressler, aged eighteen years, and then committed suicide by shooting himself in the head. Jealousy, prompted by the refusal of the girl to marry him, caused the act. Ressler had made frequent proposals to the girl, which were refused. He had made many threats to killed the girl, and twice armed himself and lay in wait for her, but the weapon, a pistol, was taken away from him both times.

Crushed to Death Under a Log.

While unloading logs from a wagon Henry Stevenson, foreman of Adams's stave factory, at Uniondale, Ind., was instantly killed. A heavy log struck him on the shoulder, and rolled over his head, crushing it on the frozen ground.

Fifty Italians Killed.

Gen. Baratieri, commander of the Italian forces in Africa, has telegraphed from Adubiebo that in the recent skirmishes with the Shoans, the Italian losses were fifty killed, including two officers, and fifty wounded.

Masonic Temple Theater, Ft. Wayne, Indiana.

March 9.—"My Wife's Friend."
March 14.—"Rhea."
March 17.—"Plays and Players."

Blew His Head Off.

William Little, aged 30, living four miles south of Blanchester, Ohio, suicided by shooting himself in the head with a shotgun, blowing almost the entire top of his head off. He was single, and was studying for the ministry and became insane on the subject.

Planing Mill Burned.

The Balke & Krauss planing mill and lumber yards on Market street, Indianapolis, were destroyed by fire. Within an hour after it started everything combustible had gone up in smoke. The loss is $25,000.

Fatally Burned.

A special from Warren, O., says: Mrs. Morris Simon, of Mineral Ridge, was fatally burned. Her clothing caught fire from a stove, and being 75 years of age and partly paralyzed, she was unable to help herself. Her husband was temporarily out of the house and on his return found her burned beyond recovery.

Maceo Rounds at Will.

Havana special: It is now reported that Maceo has succeeded in crossing the military line drawn across the island to prevent his escape from the province of Pinar Del Rio; that he has passed between Mariana and Waterloo, on the south coast, and has entered the province of Havana.

Fifty-Five Dead.

New Castle (Colo.) special: The number of lives lost in the Vulcan mine explosion, according to the Coroner's list, is fifty-five. The officers of the company have checked up their lamp list, which shows that fifty-one lamps were issued that morning to miners, so that it is probable that fifty-five will about cover the casualties of the explosion. Only four bodies have been recovered, the deadly gas still preventing a thorough search of the long slope and the many chambers.

The entire town has worked heroically to assist in recovering the bodies of the dead and to look after the families of the men. Nearly all were married and some had large families solely dependent upon the earnings of those caught in the death trap.

A Grave Crisis.

Winnipeg (Man.) special: Evidently the Dominion government is under danger of immediate collapse unless Greenway will settle the school question, for Sir Donald Smith has been sent here by the federal government, and is doing his best to effect some compromise on the vext question, in order to remove it from the federal arena. He has had an interview with Premier Greenway and Attorney General Sifton, but there is no prospect of the local government yielding a single point. Sir Donald also called on Archbishop Langevin to talk the matter over with him, but the result is not known. Developements are expected at any moment.

The Pearl Bryan Murder.

Cincinnati special: The case against Jackson, Walling and Woods, the alleged Fort Thomas murderes, is practically at a standstill, and taken all in all, it may be said that the detectives have failed to fasten the guilt of Pearl Bryan's murder upon the prisoners in a way that will warrant a legal conviction. This is the universal sentiment here, although there is probably not a man who firmly believes them innocent of the charge. Despite all efforts of the police to corroborate the negro cabman's story, a large majority concur in the opinion that it is a carefully prepared fabrication of the negro's own invention.

Business Still Quiet.

Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review says: The restoration of the treasury reserve has been effected with remarkable little monetary disturbance, though the stringency in many markets, greater elsewhere than here, and greater in commercial than in other loans, has somewhat retarded business. In no important branch of business is there yet apparent much of a disposition to expand. The prices of commodities as a whole are now the lowest average even know. In almost all manufactured products the decline continues.

Five Men Injured at Chicago.

Five men were seriously injured, two of them fatally, by the explosion of a boiler in the World's Fair grounds, Chicago. The injured are:

John San, fatally scalded.
John O'Brian, fatally scalded.
William Murray, loses eyesight.
Michael Sherry, scalded.
John Colvin, scalded.

The men were engaged in dredging and landscape work and the boiler, which was the last one left in Machinery Hall, was used to furnish power for their work.

Germany Relents.

The Norddeustch Algomline Zeitung, published at Berlin, says: "Germany has consented to reopen the question of restrictions on American insurance companies, because the two companies in question endeavored, by producing further material, to show that the Prussian regulations do not correspond with the requirments of the case."

G. A. R. Encampment.

The Wisconsin Central, Chicago Great Western, Minneapolis and St. Louis and Soo Railroads have agreed to the one-cent rate for the annual G. A. R. encampment, and Commander-in-chief Walker will promulgate an order to the G. A. R. declaring the encampment shall be held in St. Paul, and fixing the exact dates therefor.

Horr bl: Death.

Martin Bell 25 years old, was killed at Linden, Okla., in a shocking manner. He was employed at a sawmill and was carrying a piece of timber. When near the large saw he tripped and fell forward, his body falling across the saw. Both arms were cut off and his head was separated from his body.

Three Dwellings Burned.

At Gas City, Ind., three dwellings were burned and two more adjoining were saved with difficulty. They were all occupied by tenants. Most of the furniture was saved. Loss, $4,000; partially insured.

She Ate Matches.

The 2-year-old and only daughter of William Wilson of Canfield, Ohio, died in horrible agony from poison. She ate a handful of matches, and the physician were unable to save her life.

Waller's Pardon.

Secretary Olney has received the following dispatch from Ambassador Eustis at Paris: "The President signed Waller's pardon this morning. Orders were issued for his release."

Fun Maker Dying.

"Bill" Nye was stricken with paralysis at his home at Buck Shoals, eight miles from Asheville, N. C., and his condition is such that the physicians fear he cannot recover.

THROUGH THE FLESH

YOUR SKELETON PHOTOGRAPHED WHILE YOU LIVE.

Marvels Performed by the Camera—Photographers All Over the World Discussing Roentgen's Discovery—Negatives Now Easily Made.

Possibilities Without Limit.

Few discoveries of the century have created greater interest than the marvelous process of photography given to the world by Prof. Roentgen, of Wurzburg University, Bavaria, the story of which was first published in this country by the New York Journal. How great may be its use in surgery and in medicine, in metallurgy, minerology and other branches of human endeavor cannot at present be said, but the discovery promises to be highly revolutionary, to be not only one of the wonders of the age, but a powerful benefactor to mankind. It is discussed by physicians and professors and vast things are claimed for it. "If," says one prominent physician, "you can look right in on a man's liver, kidneys and other organs, it will be a most valuable aid in diagnosing a case." And that is what is claimed the Roentgen system of photography will enable one to do, for by it you can photograph through a man's flesh, showing only the skeleton; you can even photograph through a plank or other organic substance. At present Prof. Trowbridge, of Harvard, is working on lines similar to those of Prof. Roentgen and has succeeded in taking a series of pictures that fully sustain the theory of the German professor—that substances can be photographed through opaque bodies.

"A GRINNING SKELETON SAT BESIDE HER."

Invisible Photography.

The light which renders such photography possible is derived from radiant heat and is of wonderful penetrative power. It is thrown upon the object to be photographed by means of a tube known as Crooke's. This is a vacuum or airtight glass tube through which an electrical current passes. In making a photograph to bring out, for instance, the bones in the hand, a highly sensitized plate is placed in an ordinary photographic plate holder. In front of it is placed the object to be photographed, in this case the hand. Next to the object is placed the Crooke tube, through which, as already said, a current of electricity of high power passes. When the object to be photographed has been for a short time before the sensitized plate the latter is removed and developed like any other negative and prints of the impression on it can be made to any number desired. In looking at the picture after completion it will be found that there remains only a faint outline of the flesh, while the bones appear well defined. In reality the bones appear as shadows caused by the fact that they stood in the path of the rays coming from the tube.

BULLET IN A LIVING MAN'S ANKLE.
(From a new process photograph.)

In this way numerous photographs have been taken in this country with surprising results. Thus coins have been photographed through three thicknesses of leather, the lead in a pencil, three metal balls through a pasteboard box and two dimes through an inch of wood. But the most notable experiment, by Prof. Roentgen, which illustrated with graphic clearness the eccentric power of the new discovery, was the photograph of a man seated beside a young lady before the photographer in ordinary dress, but whom the negative shows a perfect skeleton. To test the clearness with which the new process would reproduce the skeleton of a living subject negatives were also taken by the ordinary method. In the first case the spinal vertebrae were reproduced in every detail, forming a ghastly specimen of realism.

Again, an ordinary iron weight was placed inside a wooden box one and one-half by three feet. In the picture the weight alone can be seen, the box having apparently vanished in air. This latter was considered a crucial test, and demonstrated beyond the possibility of a doubt that only a few of the wonders the new process will accomplish have been learned.

This process of photography, however, is only applicable to organic substances or those of the animal and vegetable kingdoms. When metal is encountered the radiant heat rays do not penetrate it.

Strictly speaking, radiant heat rays are by no means a new light, but Prof. Roentgen has, by experiment, gained the ability to secure special rays with which scientists are not familiar.

Prof. Roentgen has also overturned the scientific theory regarding opaque objects; that is, objects which it is held light will not penetrate. He holds and claims that his newly discovered process will clearly show, even more than now, that there is no such thing as an opaque object. The penetrating power of light, he claims, is regulated by its intensity and method of use. The professor further says he is convinced from facts that the discovery has brought to his knowledge concerning heat that the greater uses of heat and electricity are not known yet; that they are capable of vast development. He is now carrying on in secret a series of experiments by which he believes he will soon be able to accomplish even more wonderful feats of photography.

Some Possibilities.

As already said, the new process may be revolutionary. It may and doubtless will be so perfected that the interior of the human body may be photographed and in such event its aid to medical science would be incalculable. Thus if a man was suspected of having a tumor, all that it would be necessary to do would be to photograph the section of the body where the growth was supposed to exist. Already in the case of a bullet wound the new process would easily determine the location of the foreign body, and as a matter of fact the system has already been used in two instances with signal success in European hospitals.

Edison in speaking of the system says that if perfected and brought into general use a man, instead of going to a doctor first to have his heart examined if he thinks it is in a bad way, will go to the photographer and get a picture of his heart, take it to the doctor and ask him his opinion.

Prof. Roentgen, who is credited with the discovery of the process, has been professor in Wurzburg University since 1888, having previously been at Strasburg University and the University Institute for Physics at Gressen. He is the author of several scientific works.

Folk-Lore of the Cuckoo.

In Denmark, in the early springtime, when the voice of the cuckoo is heard in the woods, every village girl kisses her hand and asks the question, "Cuckoo, cuckoo, when shall I be married?" And the old folk, borne down by age and rheumatism, inquire, "Cuckoo, cuckoo, when shall I be released from this world's cares?" The bird in answer continues singing "Cuckoo" as many times as years will elapse before the object of these desires will come to pass. But, as some people live to an advanced age and many girls die old maids, the poor bird has so much to do in answering the questions put to her that she has no time to make her nest, but lays her eggs in that of the hedge-sparrow.

TWENTY DIE BY FIRE

GREAT FACTORY IN TROY, N. Y., BURNS DOWN.

Girls and Women the Victims of the Ensuing Panic—Careless Boy with Lighted Match the Cause—Many Jump to Death from Windows.

Property Entirely Destroyed.

Without a word of warning the great building of Mrs. Burdett, at Troy, N. Y., became enveloped in flames about 5:30 o'clock on Monday afternoon, and within ten minutes a score of women and girls were burned to death and many more are reported missing.

Superintendent of Police Willard said at midnight:

"The returns from the various precincts show at least fifteen persons missing. These, with the five already known to be missing, will make twenty lost in the ruins. I fear there are many more. It seems to me impossible that all the girls in that building should have escaped. Besides, a great many persons would not report to the police at all."

The Dead.

Mrs. Margaret Carroll, jumped from window.

Mrs. Annie Foley, widow, No. 1048 Fifth avenue, jumped from window.

Mrs. Herbster, Scotch Hill, South Troy, fell from window.

Mrs. Robert Kane, No. 195 Fourth street, jumped from window.

Cause of the Fire.

It was just thirty minutes before closing hours in Stettheimer & Co.'s shirt waist factory in River street, and the 350 girls and women were working rapidly to finish up. In the cutting room on the fifth floor the 150 girls were closing up their day's assignments and preparing to leave when the whistle blew. Lillie Kreigier, who was working near a machine, called to a small boy to light the gas over her work. The boy struck a match and threw the burning stub to the floor. It struck a pile of oily rags, and in an instant the girl was enveloped in flames. With her clothes and hair burning she rushed to the window and in an instant the room became a struggling, shrieking mass of humanity, filling the windows, the fire escapes and the only stairway.

Panic Is Instant.

Jamming and pushing, tearing each other's clothes from their backs, turning in narrow corridors to find a sister or mother or friend, the number in the exits augmented every minute by those from the other floors, these girls and women fought for their lives to get away from the fiery flames that grew to monstrous size.

From the outside of the high building the first notice of impending disaster was the sight of a body of girls as they rushed out upon the fire escapes from the windows, those who were more fortunate crowding out through the entrance. Following them was a mass of smoke with flashes of hot flame through the smoke.

Then the mass of frenzied humanity, finding the egresses too small for instant escape, began climbing over the sides of the escapes, and bundles of clothing filled with writhing humanity dropped at the feet of the horrified passers-by.

Within twenty minutes after the fire started there were three dead women laid upon the floor of an adjoining store and at least a dozen burned and maimed girls and women taken to the hospital or to their homes.

Of the 350 women and girls in the building it is presumed that at least a half dozen were buried in the ruins.

Drop to the Pavement.

Policeman Farrell, who was on the street, seeing that in the panic a number were liable to jump, let down the awning over the entrance. Hardly was it down when two or three forms came flying down from the fifth and sixth stories, and bouncing from the awning fell to the sidewalk.

Lilly Kriegier was one of these. She struck the awning, fell on her back, and bounced to her hands and knees on the walk. She got up and staggered about until people helped her to her feet again. By this time nearly every window had a female form dangling from it, and when the firemen arrived there was a struggle to get the ladders up.

Shrieked and Dropped.

At a window on the sixth floor Mrs. Margaret Carroll, hanging by her hands, was forced out by the flames licking her face. With a last shriek she let go and came tumbling over and over until she struck the pavement. She was picked up dead.

Just below her, in another window, hung Mrs. Foley, turning appealing glances to the crowd. The black smoke was pouring from the window, but no flames were visible, and the crowd yelled encouragingly to her to hold on, but a high red flame reached out just then and licked her face, and in an instant her body was rebounding from the pavement. She was picked up dead.

On the same floor, hanging from another window, was Mrs. Kane, and salvation in the shape of a ladder was almost in her grasp when her strength failed, and she went whirling down to death.

The firemen and police worked like heroes, and to their energy was due a great saving of life. At least a dozen women and girls were carried down the ladders or dragged out of the corridors, the officers and firemen going into the midst of the smoke and flames.

Saw Three Jump Back.

One fireman who was working from the rear saw three girls with their arms wound tightly about each other turn in a frenzy and jump back into the flames. Some of the women who escaped fell of stumbling over prostrate bodies, and are positive a score of girls perished.

The total loss by the fire is from $250,000 to $300,000, with about $100,000 insurance. At least 500 people are thrown out of employment.

It is said that all the burglars' jimmies in London are made by one man, who is well known to the police, but cannot be arrested, as his work is not contrary to law. Besides, it is very convenient to be able to trace his customers.

MAHER KNOCKED OUT.

BIG FIGHT LASTS BUT ONE SHORT ROUND.

Fitzsimmons Lands the Deciding Blow After One Minute and Thirty-five Seconds of Actual Fighting—Texas Rangers at the Ringside.

Battle in Mexico.

Bob Fitzsimmons won the championship of the world Friday afternoon in one minute and thirty-five seconds from Peter Maher in a twenty-four-foot ring pitched on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande within sight of the Texas village of Langtry. Exactly 189 persons saw the mill and wondered at the short-arm, right-hand, back punch which settled the business. Up to the time of the knockout it was any sort of odds that victory would perch on the Irishman's banner. Fitz, in the early stages of the short fight, was most uncertain in his delivery and seemed to have a very poor idea of distance, and his wild misses with his right hand caused consternation in the ranks of his advisers and backers. Three different times Maher escaped right-hand swings. They were not ordinary misses, nor was it by cleverness or agility that Maher got his head out of danger. It was due to Fitz's wildness. All three of these blows were at least a foot wide of the mark. The Irishman did not look to be entirely confident of victory when he stepped into the ring, but his manner and appearance soon changed when he found that he could dodge Fitz's leads easily.

ROBERT FITZSIMMONS.

When the men were called up for instructions both agreed not to hit in clinches and to break away clean, even when one arm was free. Maher, who claims he did not agree to this, struck Fitz in the face in backing away from the first clinch. There were loud cries of "foul" from the New Zealander's corner. Referee Siler warned Maher not to do it again.

The fight, though short, was full of action, and it was fight all the way through. Both men started in from the bell ring to make a hot pace. Fitzsimmons, except in the last rally, did not use his left and then he only feinted in a strange way so characteristic of the man. It was more of an upper cut than a straight lead, and drew Maher's head in range. Quick as a flash Fitzsimmons shot his right across square on the point of Maher's jaw and the Irishman's head hit the floor. It was a short right-hander.

The place where the fight took place was in a rocky amphitheater and the sports had to tramp across a pontoon bridge to Mexico to reach the ropes. The ridge of rocks was fringed with men and women, but within the tented inclosure, which was so close to the Rio Grande that its roar drowned the voice of the gatekeeper, 250 fatigued sports leaned against the ropes.

THE CUBAN STRUGGLE.

Gen. Weyler and His Proposed Methods Against the Insurgents.

Gen. Weyler, the new commandant of the Spanish forces in Cuba, has issued three proclamations which announce very clearly a purpose to take the severest possible means to crush out the insurrection. The general assumes extraordinary powers to compel all inhabitants of the districts in which war is being waged to identify themselves before the military authorities and secure passes. He also assumes the right to subject all active participants and all sympathizers with the insurgents to summary sentence and punishment, the wording of the proclamation being such as to indicate that the commandant reserves the right to decide in what cases the penalty shall be death.

It is evident from these harsh terms that Gen. Weyler means to spare no effort to put down the insurrection. As

GEN. WEYLER.

Spain's representative on the island he will not only wage warfare upon the insurgent armies, but will take steps to compel all other Cuban residents to become passive or active auxiliaries of Spain. If he cannot conquer by force of arms in the field he is prepared to put in operation whatever other practices and strategems may be required to crush the insurgents. If it be necessary to gain his ends he will not scruple to resort to measures of extreme severity, evidently deeming it his duty to put down the revolution first and consider the claims of humanity afterward.

In view of these proclamations, it is the general opinion in the United States that Congress cannot too quickly or firmly concede belligerent rights to the insurgents. And this is not all. Every act of this new captain general must be watched to see that he does not violate the rules of civilized warfare and that Spain is not allowed to crush the insurgents by savagery of the most intolerable nature. In 1875, after the revolution had lasted seven years, Gen. Grant stated in his message: "We find that the same disregard of the laws of civilized warfare and of the just demands of humanity, which has heretofore called forth expressions of condemnation from the nations of Christendom, has continued to blacken the sad scene." Cuba must not again be subjected in like manner to Spanish barbarity.

FACING FREE SILVER.

THE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION, JUNE 24, TO BE A TEST.

Efforts in Committee to Postpone Date Most Failure—Matthews Expected to Declare for the White Metal—Voorhees and Turpie Urge It.

Ante-Convention Talk.

Indianapolis correspondence:

The Democratic State Central Committee Thursday determined to hold the State nominating convention June 24. Chairman Holt was instructed to issue the formal call for that date. The basis of representation in the convention was fixed at one delegate for every 150 votes cast for Matthews in 1892, or fractional part of 150 over seventy-five.

Chairman Clark, of the Indiana Silver League, preceded the members of the committee to the city and worked earnestly against a postponement, saying the free silver wing of the party would call a State convention if the holding of the regular convention was postponed till after the national Democratic convention, as that element was determined to give expression to its views in advance of the meeting of the national body. There are a number of gentlemen on the State committee who are in favor of the gold standard, but they voted against postponing on the ground that it would be cowardly to change the date, and if the free silver sentiment had to be met and a contest arise it was better for the party that the question be disposed of before the national convention meets.

When a vote was taken on the matter of postponement the unanimous voice of the committee was in favor of adhering to the date originally fixed by the committee.

A resolution was adopted indorsing the action of Gov. Matthews in refusing to call a special session of the Legislature and insisting that he adhere to his purpose.

Matthews' Expected Utterance.

There have been intimations from the friends of Gov. Matthews that he will shortly give public utterance to his views on the currency question, and it is not denied that he will express himself unequivocally in favor of free silver. It is known that he has had a number of consultations with Senators Voorhees and Turpie during their visits to Indianapolis, and that he has also communicated with them by letter and has freely indorsed their support in the Senate of the free coinage measure.

There has never been a time since his friends began to work for him for the presidential nomination that he has felt that he could go before the convention without his position being fully understood, and his friends how say that the declaration will be made within a few weeks at furthest and certainly before the national convention meets. They do not deny that he is in favor of free coinage, but just how far he will go in his proposed utterance is not certainly known, but those who are supposed to be in his confidence say that he will not mince his words when he feels called upon to speak.

It has been proposed in some quarters that he be asked to preside over the State convention and that in his speech to that body he outline his sentiments. The free silver men feel that this would insure a free silver platform for the Indiana Democracy, and they have urged this course.

Senators Voorhees and Turpie, both of whom want their records indorsed by the State convention, are understood to favor this plan, but others of the Governor's friends think it would be too late then to utilize Matthews' utterances in the South and West, and they are anxious that he should speak before the convention meets. Those who urge this course say that the free silver sentiment is dominant in the South and West, where Democratic votes must come from to elect the next President, and that the Governor has the opportunity to stand before the country as an honest and courageous politician and at the same time enhance his chances for the nomination by meeting the subject squarely and letting the country know on what platform he would be willing to accept the Democratic nomination.

The effect of such a declaration upon the single standard men is uncertain. Many are his friends and are working earnestly in his behalf. They realize that the party might win in this State on such an issue and they would not jeopardize State interests by getting up a factional fight against the Governor simply on account of differences regarding national finances. These friends, however, do not think that he will strengthen himself by such a declaration, though they admit that the uncertainty regarding his position militates against his nomination quite as much as if he gave utterance to his views.

A friend of the Governor said that there is another and a potent reason why he felt called upon to make public his views. He said the Governor would not accept even a national nomination on a platform that pledged the party to the single standard theory and he believed that he ought to make his position known and not have his friends place him before the convention in any manner that could be misconstrued. He also felt that it was due to Senators Voorhees and Turpie, whose course in the Senate he has commended, that it should be known from his public utterances that he indorses them fully.

A South Bend paper says information was received from what was considered an authentic source that Eugene V. Debs, president of the American Railway Union, will accept the Populist nomination for Governor of Indiana on a platform favoring free coinage of silver and in opposition to corporations. At Terre Haute Mr. Debs, asked as to his alleged gubernatorial aspirations, said that under no circumstances would he accept a nomination for a political office. Nasworthy was born in Sullivan, Ill., graduated at De Pauw University, and afterwards at the Chicago Law School. He came from Chicago in 1893. He left a note to notify Kirby Beeler, of Sullivan, Ill., of his death.

After a short stay with her mother she determined to return to Mrs. Dene, the discovery she had made having made her mother's house unbearable.

As she walked swiftly on her way back she passed several people on the road, and a little way from Mrs. Dene's bungalow she overtook Mr. Knollys, also hurrying home. An impulse she did not wait to define prompted her to quicken her steps and lay her hand upon his arm to attract his attention.

Evidently deep in thought, he did not notice her at once; then, when she spoke his name, he put up his glasses and looked down at her in some surprise.

"Why, Miss Knox, is that you? Surely this is very late for you to be out. The evenings are very cold and damp."

"I have just been to see my mother," she explained.

"Ah, you are staying still with Mrs. Dene, I suppose?"

"For the present, yes."

"She is an exceedingly pleasing woman," observed the Deputy Commissioner, with more than his ordinary pomposity of manner, "and a most kind friend."
